

Entered at the Post Office at New York, N. T., as Second Class Matter.

No. 935.

COMPLETE.

FRANK TOUSEY PUBLISHER, 34 & 36 NORTH MOORE STREET. N. Y. NEW YORK, February 1, 1890.

ISSUED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

PRICE !

Vol.

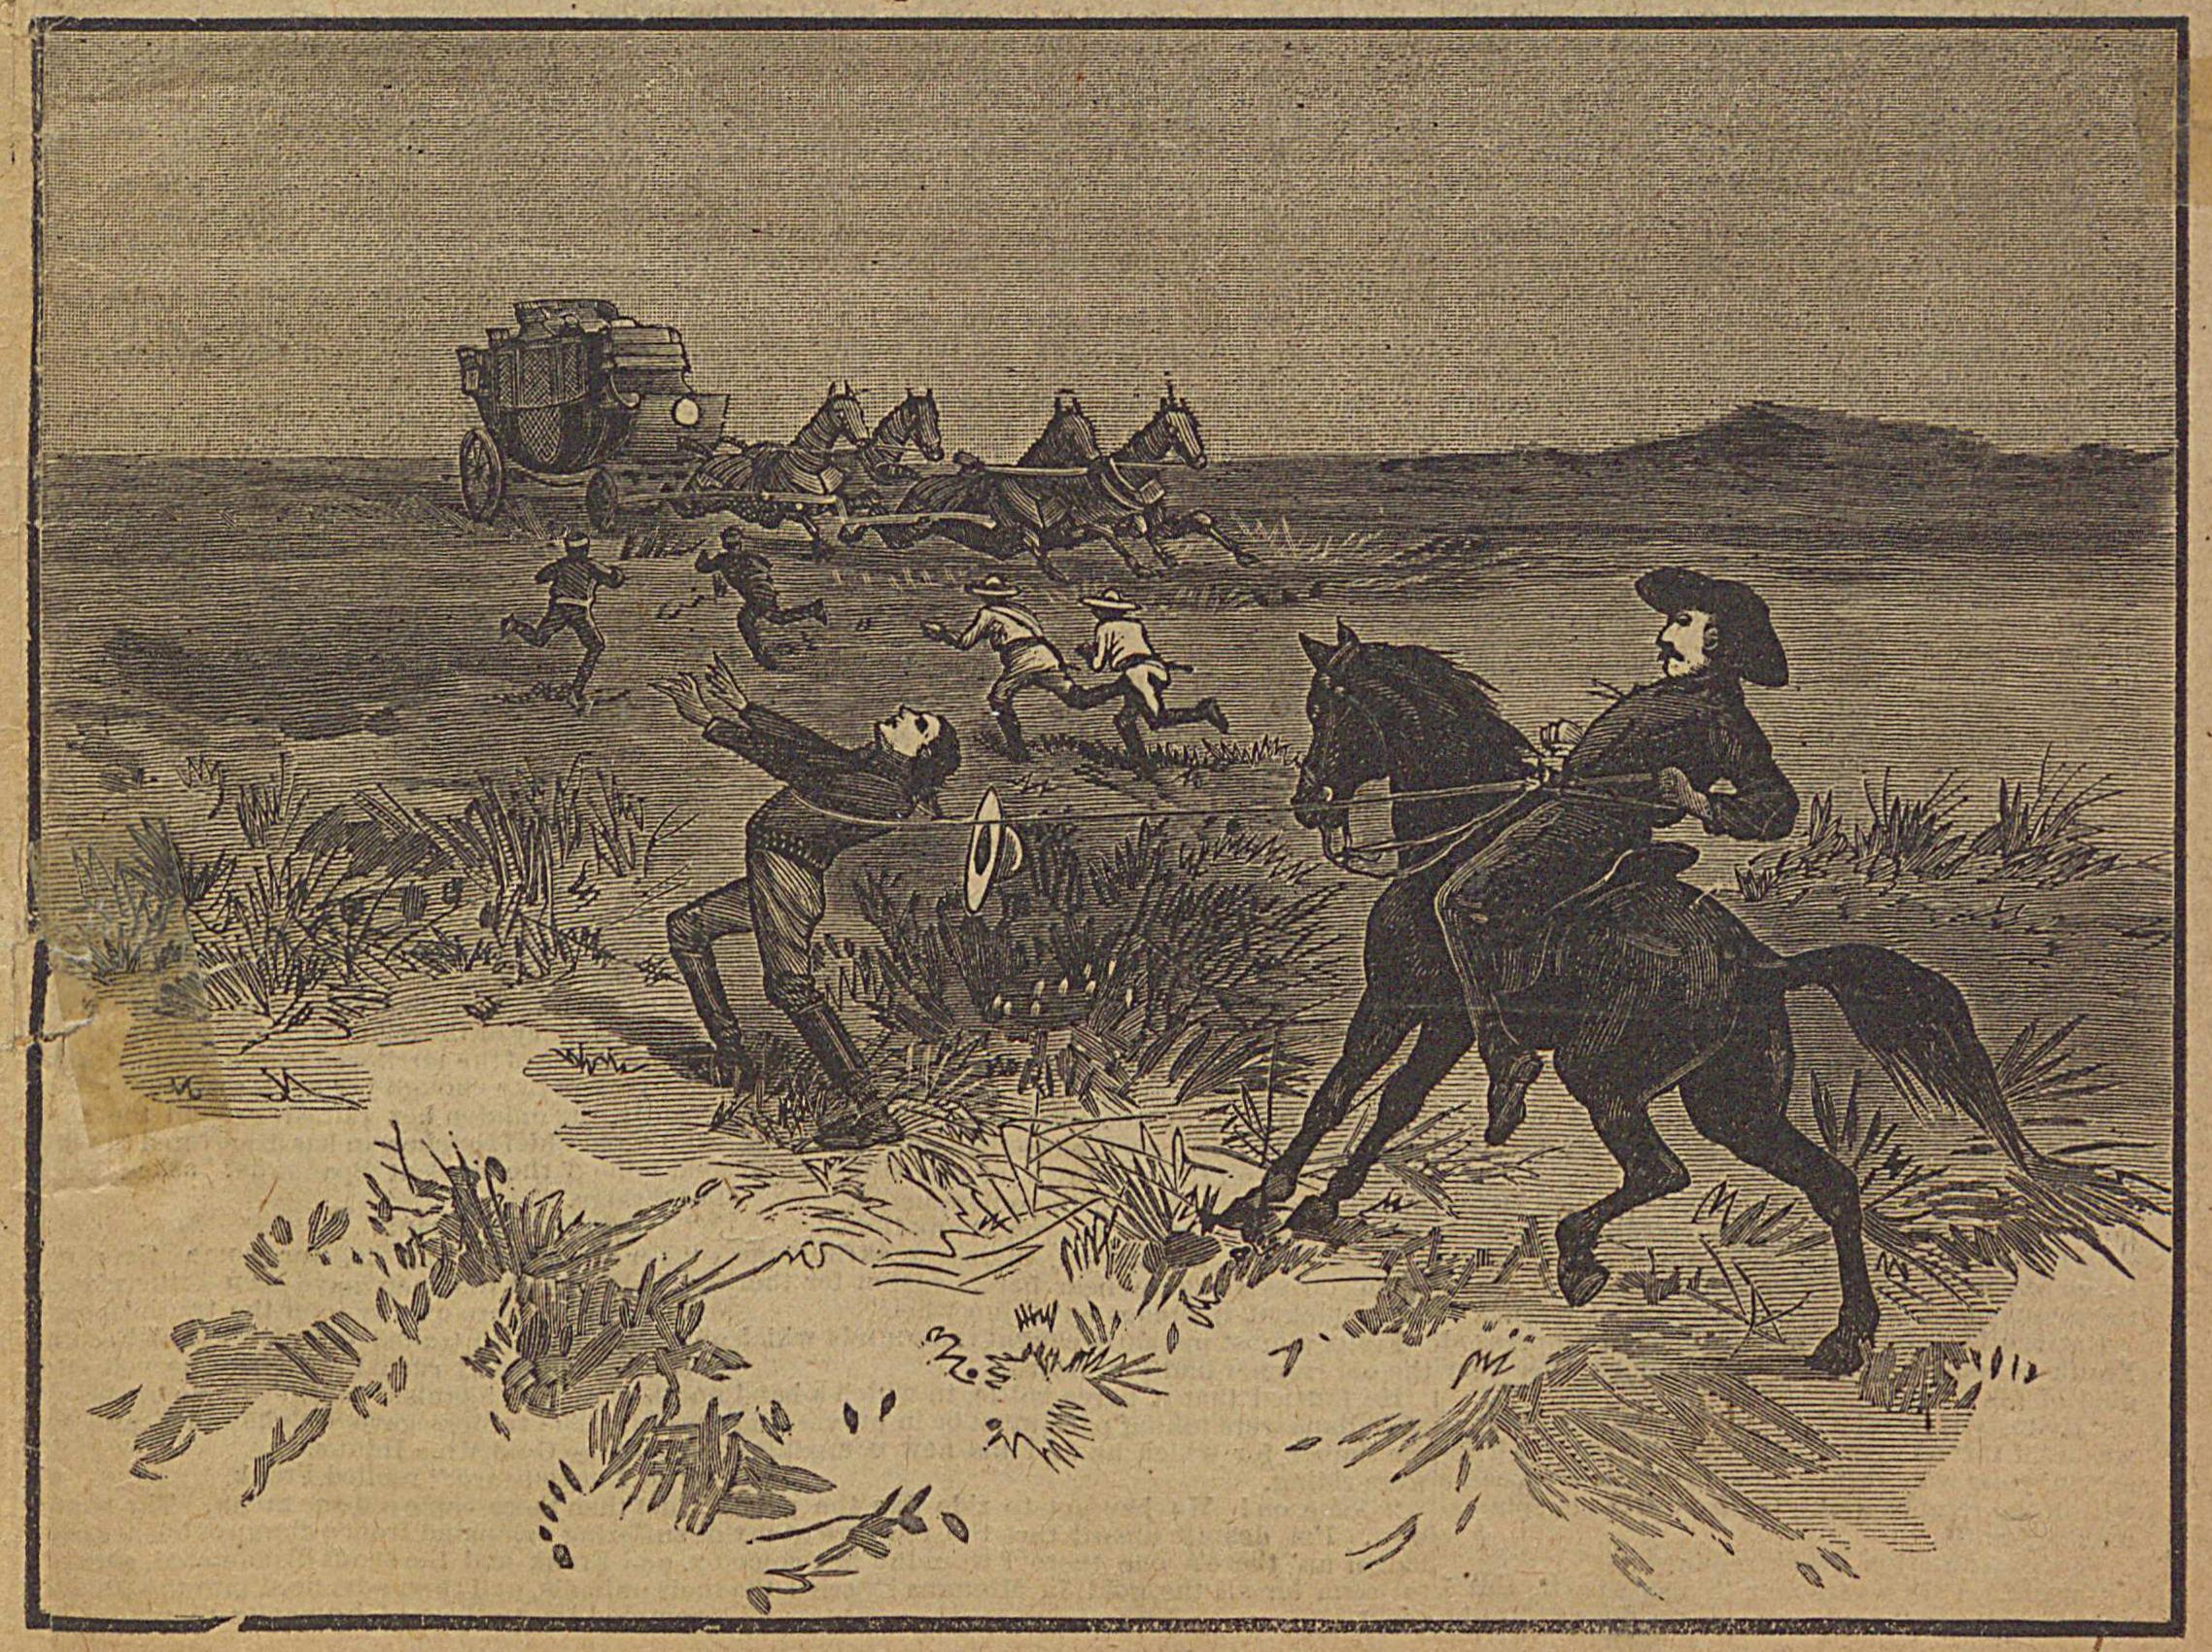

Enteres according to Act of Congress, in the year 1890, oy FRANK TOUSET, in the office of the Librarian of Congress, as Washington, D. C.

Frank Reade, Jr., in the Far West:

OR.

The Search for a Lost Gold Mine.

By "NONAME."

The Subscription Price of The Wide Awake Library by the year is $2,50: $1,25 per six months, post paid. Address FRANK TOUSE1, Publisher, 34 and 36 North Moore Street, New York. Box 2730.

FRANK READE, JR., IN THE FAR WEST

OR.

The Search for a Lost Gold Mine.

By the Author of all the Frank Reade Series.

CHAPTER I.

TREATING OF THE LOST MINE.

were falling on the plains of Montana one day in your tired horse to travel to-night, so you come was silence there. the month of September, as a young man mounted along to my lodge. I'm Yank Beckbridge, Indian But Yank Beckbridge discovered two Indian upon a fine, powerful-looking horse, drew rein in scout and prospector, and any one in Montana will trails, showing where two large bands of Indians. the midst of a wide expanse of table land.

All around, as far as the sight could reach, the Frank's face brightened at once as he heard the timber. they blended afar with the glowing sky-line.

which the solitary horseman cast about him.

troubled tones.

The speaker was Frank Reade, Jr., the celebrated Yank Beckbridge thrust forth his hand as he Frank and his companion saw that they had reachscientist and inventor, whose fame had long since last spoke, and Frank Reade grasped it with a ed the scene of an Indian battle. spread all over the world, and whose name was a friendly pressure.

synonym of wonderful inventive genius. cle, who was a prosperous Montana cattleman, Frank, heartily.

and that morning the inventor had left his uncle's "That's proper. Come, let's be movin', fer we ranch well mounted, bent on a gallop over the hev' got some distance to go. Ye see that patch on prairie, and intoxicated by the bracing air, the the prairie over to the west. Looks like a cloud, balmy perfumes of the flowers, and the sight of but it's a timber 'island,' and that's where you'll game, he had given chase, and far away had the find the domocile o' Yankton Beckbridge."-. swift footed deer led him.

his uncle's ranch without a guide, but he had rid-name was Frank Reade, Jr.?" presently inquired old branches of the Blackfoot tribe." den on and on for hours, hoping against hope, that Yank. he might yet discern some landmark which might serve to set him right.

ranch that day. The prospect of passing the night o' strange inventions ter run by steam an' 'lectricalone upon the prairies caused him to constantly ity an' who has gone travelin' all over creation glance wistfully around upon the vast solitude, and and part of New Jersey as I've hern tell?" almost as he uttered aloud the conviction that he "I plead guilty. I am the genuine original Frank Montana have believed in the existence of a lost was hopelessly astray, a human form suddenly Reade, Jr." started into sight.

Frank beheld at no great distance a man clad in meet ye. It does, by mighty." the buckskin garb of the nunters and trappers of) "The pleasure is mutual."

the far west.

dently been concealed in one of these abrupt de-here with ye, hev ye?" pressions of the plains which frequently occur on "No; but I have just completed a new electric nomenclature of the territorial towns," said Frank. the Montana table lands.

The man in buckskin was mounted upon a I think. It is at my home in Readestown."

ward Frank Reade.

As he approached the young inventor had an op-wonders an' hev a talk with ye personally." portunity to observe that the stranger was a "I should be glad to see you at any time." grizzly old fellow, with a face tanned and harden- "Thank ye. I-hold on, there's a skrimmage ed by exposure, and evidently one who had spent agoin' on somewhere near here. Listen ter ther Getchewan and his men have been bringin' gold s the greater part of his years in the wild West. - faint crack of weepings an' Injun yells."

Frank as being an honest one, and he was very the old trapper had first heard.

glad of his coming.

servin' your wanderin' course ever since ye came were riding. within the range o' sight," called out the old plains- "Come on! We hev got to ride like the wind Just then there came a deep groan. The sound man presently.

To this salutation Frank rejoined:

acknowledge that I am lost. I am Frank Reade, scout.

[Jr., and I wish to find my way back to my Uncle] In a moment he and Frank were riding furiously Abner Stanton's ranch, which I left this morning. in the direction of the timber. Perhaps you can direct me aright."

tell ye that ye are safe in my company, I reckon." wearing moccasins of different make, had entered seemingly unending plains stretched away until scout mention his name, for he remembered that "Ginger! I reckon 1 understand what has been man, who was beloved by all the honest settlers of scout, after examining the two trails. "Alone and lost!" he exclaimed in earnest and Montana, but who was feared and hated by the white outlaws and the hostile redskins.

Thus speaking the plainsman began to urge his For some time the conviction had been stealing horse forward and Frank followed his lead.

"Certainly, sir; that's my name."

"You don't mean to tell me you are Frank At last Frank gave up the hope of finding the Reade, the celebrated chap what gits up all sorts with a sudden augmentation of interest.

tally-ho, and the invention is a triumph in its way

an' take a trip to Readestown ter see some o' yer gold mine o' the ancient Spaniards?" asked Yank

"Hello, stranger! Day to ye. 'Pears like ye of Indians were taking part, must be in progress in vessels. The traders gave Getchewan's band the was a bit turned about, I reckon, ez I hev' been ob- the timber for which he and his new companion name o' the Gold Mine Injuns."

> now. I'm desprit afeard thet the reds are at my of suffering emanated from a clump of bushes near sl lodge, an' there's one there I wouldn't hev come by, and Frank and the scout dismounted, secure

They reached the cover in a quarter of an hour. "I reckon I kin. But you are full thirty miles Meantime the sounds of conflict had ceased, and THE day was closing, and the somber shadows away from Stanton's ranch, and that's too far for when the two horsemen rode into the timber, all his uncle had more than once spoken very favor- agoin' on. The Sioux and the Blackfeet are at There was no evidence of the presence of man ably of "Yank" Beckbridge, saying that the old war. War parties of the two nations hev' met near or beast to be discovered by the searching glances scout and prospector was a brave, true-hearted here, and they hev' had a powerful fight," said the

His views were presently confirmed by further discovery. Emerging into a glade in the woods,

The grass and shrubbery was trodden under foot, "I am very glad I have met you, and I will joy- the branches of trees were shattered as by rifle Frank Reade was visiting at the ranch of an un-fully accept your hospitality for the night," said balls, and there were a score of dead savages lying upon the ensanguined earth.

"Traps an' Trappers!" suddenly exclaimed Beckbridge. "If the Sioux haven't massacred every single one of old Getchewan's band of braves. Getchewan is an old Blackfoot chief-the oldest Indian in all ther northwest, it's said, and his chosen band was the last of the original race of upon Frank that he could not find his way back to "Did I understan' ye to say, stranger, that yer Montana Indjuns, though there are plenty of other

> "Do you mean to state that the band of Indians who have been massacred here are the so-called 'Gold Mine Indians of Montana?'" asked Frank

"Yes," assented the scout. "My uncle has told me of these Indians. He has assured me that for years the white settlers of gold mine in this territory, which was originally "Wall, dog my cats, pard, it does me proud ter discovered, and worked by Spanish adventurers from Colorado, who were here a hundred years ago. as ancient coins of Spain, with the dates on the Glad on it, I swow. But, say, I reckon ye intact, which have been unearthed in the territory. b The stranger, for such he was to Frank, had evi- hain't got none o' yer steam or 'lectric fixin's out goes to prove. The Spaniards have left traces of " their occupancy of the country in early days in the

"I reckon like enough yer uncle told ye too that, recently, the opinion hez gained ground that ther sturdy looking mustang, and he rode straight to- "Ginger! I've 'lowed more than once ter lay off band o' old Chief Getchewan has discovered the lost I

Beckbridge.

"Yes," assented Frank.

"Yer see, ther fact is, for some time old v ore of mighty pure quality inter the tradin' posts, P But the face of the old plainsman impressed Frank almost instantly caught the sounds which an' they have also traded off a few Spanish coins of ancient date and rusted with age, as well as a s He fancied that a fierce battle, in which a band number of old Spanish minin' implements and the

"So I have heard," replied Frank.

"Right. I am a stranger in these parts, and I to harm fer all the gold in Montana!" cried the their animals, and then advanced into the thicke prompted by motives of humanity to render a they might there discover.

In the thicket, where he had crawled away to combining profit with pleasure." secrete himself from his merciless foemen, the inventor and his scout comrade found an aged Indian.

Montana.

as he saw the face of the aged Indian.

been slain by the Sioux dogs who outnumbered us trapper's arms. five to one," said the old chief, faintly, as he pant- It was a pleasant sight to see the rough, weather- might be her very life depended on his gettin' toed for breath and made a long pause between each beaten face of the old plainsman soften as he ca- gether a large sum o' money within one year's time word.

"Dead Shot and Getchewan were always friends, his breast, while he said gently. and the white hunter's heart is sad," replied Yank, "So yer all safe an' sound yet, Sunshine, eh? pard and his child," said Frank.

chief's lips.

The latter drank and then murmured:

year ago, and which he meant should yet make not come where you are." him and his tribe as rich as the white man's richest "Ha! ha! You've got great faith in old slept. men. But Getchewan has his secret safe yet, and 'Pop Yank,' hain't ye now, leetle Sunshine? I When morning dawned, taking little Sunshine on now, since all his men are dead, Getchewan is the s'pose yer think all I hev ter do are to wink ter the saddle before him, Yank set out to guide Frank only man in all the world, save one white man, scatter a hull army o' ther pizen reds."

WI pointed beards, is."*

wold mine should die with him, but now that he "But, Papa Yank, have you brought me any Reade rode to the nearest station of the stage line ing-rounds, the chief's mind is changed. Dead "No, not yet, leetle Sunshine. But I'll bring yer At the posting station while awaiting the stage better that he should have the secret of the lost gold one o' these days, or ye won't see old Yank's gray there were rumors that one Indian Raiph, a reck-wert on, while his voice rapidly became fainter didn't have you."

andalmost inaudible.

thecliff, and heard him as he said:

an Indian sign-writing, or tracing, which is like he said: guile you, if you can read it aright, and you shall we'll go to the lodge." fing the lost mine."

the instant, and Frank and Yank Beckbridge a childish way.

thought that his end had come.

mured:

thegold mine!"

deld.

and a folded piece of white buckskin.

it with eager interest. The singular map was meaning."

sign-language.

yet returned from ther kentry alive," said Beck-day." brdge.

'Indeed," said Frank.

just "pished one o' yer inventions ter travel with could not leave it?" by electricity, which I take it are suthin' fast."

"I have, as I said, a new electric tally-ho all for a journey," replied Frank.

CHAPTER II.

FRANK READE, JR., AND THE OLD SCOUT FORM A PARTNERSHIP.

"I RECKON with yer 'lectric vehicle you could go in the lost gold mine." most anywhere, now couldn't ye? Injuns an' white outlaws an' sich wouldn't trouble ye I con-probable," assented the young inventor. sate. Am I right?" said Yank Beckridge, after a pause.

should have no fear to venture with my new elec-yet bring him back ter her, if he was in the land received a call from his old friend Dr. Vaneyke. tric tally-ho wherever the vehicle can be run."

"Werry good, I've got an idee. Suppose you an' me jine hands as pardners. You furnish ther tally-am proud to have." ho an' I'll put in the map Getchewan gave me, an' vie'll make a search fer the lost mine an' share an' I've 'splained the pints of affairs to ye, le's arrange share alike if we find it. What do ye say?"

"Then it's a bargain 'atween us?"

"Yes."

The snow of many winters whitened his hair, love o' gold that sets me ion ther trail o' ther lost search." and the chief's head-dress upon his white locks mine as it are friendship. But hello! Here's my proclaimed he was a head chief of the Blackfeet of leetle Sunshine an' so mum are the word afore her. "Yes. But there's one thing more, I reckon I I'll 'splain my meanin' later, pard."

girl of perhaps eight years, came into view, and mighty powerful reason why Owen wanted gold so "Dead Shot is right. He sees Getchewan, and with a joyful exclamation the fairy-like little creat-desprit like. He never explained it all out quite the chief is dying. Every one of my braves have ure ran forward, and sprang into the rough old plain an' clear, but he did tell me that ther fate ressed the golden head that was pillowed upon from last spring."

"No, Papa Yank, but the Indians made me day." "The Sioux sought the secret of Getchewan. afraid, I could hear them so plainly. Oh, I am so It was late in the night when Frank and old Yank They meant to steal away the discovery he made a glad you have come, for I know the Indians dare Beckbridge the scout ceased talking. But finally the who is in the mine and cannot leave it, who knows "I am sure of it, Papa Yank," replied the little In due time they arrived at their destination, the lost mine of the white men of the south, one with complete assurance, opening her big blue and Frank was warmly welcomed.

eyes very wide.

"Telehewan meant that the secret of the lost "Ha! ha! ha!" laughed Yank, heartily.

hear the voice of the great Manito calling him, and news of my own papa?" asked the child, eagerly. running between his uncle's ranch and Virginia he knows that he must soon go to the happy hunt- "Allers that question," murmured Yank, aside. City and secured passage eastward.

othas always been a friend to the chief, and it is news o' me old pard, Owen Strathmore, yer papa, Frank was considerably surprised to hear that min than that it should die with Getchewan." head no more," replied the scout, aloud. less road-agent chief, who, with his band, had Yank felt the kiss of the child on his bronzed to Virginia City. "In the buckskin bag of gold about my neck is for a moment, and his emotion had passed when it as did his passengers.

Yank went forward, after the little one had ac-conveying east for his uncle. The strength of the dying chief failed utterly for knowledged her introduction to Frank Reade, in bukskin bag from about his neck, and opened it. was friendship thet set me on the trail o' ther lost volver through the window of the coach at Indian The bag contained several nuggets of virgin gold, gold mine. Now, I'll tell ye what I meant," the Ralph. scout said.

The trapper led the little one by the hand. reins of the horses over his arm. In a hollow, not man in full Indian war dress, save that instead of "Yonder, where the mighty hills are, where foot far distant, embowered by the surrounding trees, paint a black mask concealed his face. of white man never pressed the earth—yonder is which concealed it, was a rude Indian lodge. This "Indian Ralph and his men!" yelled the terrified was Yank's summer home. Having cared for their jehu, recognizing the dreaded road-agent whom As he spoke, with one last effort the chief point- animals and partaken of food, when little Sun- he had seen before. ed to the northwest, then he sank back heavily shine had fallen asleep Yank resumed the thread Frank Reade had his revolver out in a moment, an the old scout to whom he had bequeathed of his conversation which the appearance of the and he shouted to the frightened passengers: hisgold secret as an inheritance, knew that he was little girl on the Indian battle-field had inter- "Fire on the rascals. There are a dozen of us.

Sunshine was my old pard. His name I've men-charged upon the coach in a body, discharging a I think I kin study it all over kerrect, but it tioned to ye. It are Owen Strathmore. Owen fusillade of bullets from their weapons.

"Ah, I begin to anticipate your explanation." "Like enough, pard. Ye heard Getchewan say trail. Yes. But hold on a bit. You told me ye had there was 'a white man in ther lost gold mine who

"Yes."

"Can ye guess, then, who I suspect ther white bers fled before the cavalrymen. man in ther lost gold mine is?"

Strathmore."

covered Owen on the trail o' old Getchewan, and flercely as he dashed away. that they captured the poor feller an' shut him up The soldiers pursued the robbers and the stage gold alone I 'spect ter find, but me old pard, as I of the road agent chief. o' ther livin'."

"I've always tried to be white. But now that Frank through Central Asia. our plans."

"Very well. I propose that I return to Reades- your new electric tally-ho?" *Thus the Indians designated the early Spanish set-town, and immediately ship my electric tally-ho "Yes," replied Frank. "You know my wife ob-sistance to any wounded human creature whom "All right. I want to make a journey with my there, and that we start on our search for the lost new tally-ho in the West, and I am not averse to mine from that point, and without needless de-

> "Kerrect! That's bizness, an' it jist suits my idees. I'll leave little Sunshine in the care o' a "Then I'll tell ye right now it's not so much ther kind family I know in Helena while I am off on the "Very well. We will consider it all arranged." ought ter tell ye, though it's a sort o' a secret "Getchewan!" exclaimed old Yank, the scout, Just then, among the trees, a little golden-haired 'atween Owen an' me. Ther fact is, ther was a o' leetle Sunshine, her future happiness, an' it

"Then there is some mystery about your old and he drew forth a pocket flask and held it to the The reds didn't find out our little lodge in the hol- "Yes," assented Yank. "I questioned Owen but low though they were so near, I take it?" he put me off, saying he would tell me all some conversation was brought to a close and they Reade to his uncle's ranch.

The very next day Yank Beckbridge set out for Helena taking Little Sunshine with him, and Frank

The dying chief paused for a moment and then "Don't say that, Papa Yank. I should die if I long been the terror of the Southern Montana trails, had come north, and had been seen near the road

But Yank and Frank Reade knelt close beside brow, and a memory of the past was evoked that Upon the arrival of the eastern-bound stage the brought tears to his eyes. But he turned his head driver was informed of the news, but he scoffed at

Frank boarded the stage very much reassured, themaps of the white men to the red man. It will "This 'ere is my new pard, Sunshine. Now although he was not a bit of a coward, for he had a large sum of money on his person which he was

A thrilling adventure was in store for Frank. About twelve miles south of Virginia City in a hilly pass the stage coach was suddenly halted by But presently he drew a faint breath, and mur- Frank Reade followed them, with the bridle- a score of road agents at whose head rode a white

We can beat off the robbers if we will." With reverent hands they gently removed a "I said it wan't so much the love of gold as it As Frank thus shouted he discharged his re-

The bullet shattered the road-agent's right ear This Yank unfolded, and he and Frank scanned "I am interested to understand your precise and sent him reeling in his saddle back among his men, while he uttered cries of rage and pain. driwn in the strange hieroglyphics of the Indian "Well, ther fact are this. The father o' little But the succeeding moment the road-agents wil take time, and maybe it won't do us no good no longed fer gold. Gold was his great failin', and he It seemed that the coach-load of passengers who how, fer in the far northwest, where we must go to sot out, secret like when I was away, ter track up had dared to offer resistance to the robbers would flid the lost mine, the bloodthirsty Sioux guards old Getchewan, hopin', I s'pose, to find the lost be slaughtered without mercy. But all at once every trail and pass, and no white man has ever mine that away. Owen never came back, to this there came the clatter of horses' hoofs down the trail, and with a ringing cheer a company of United States cavalry dashed up around a bend in the

> "Hurrah for Frank Reade who winged the roadagent chief and encouraged us to show fight!" cried an enthusiastic passenger, as the road-rob-

"So Frank Reade is the name of the man that "Your pard, little Sunshine's father-Owen has marked me for life! I saw his face when he fired and I'll know him again, and I'll have my "Kerrect! I reckon the gold mine Injuns dis- vengeance some day!" yelled the road agent chief went on.

"Such a conclusion seems to me to be very Frank made the remainder of his journey back to his native place without meeting with further "So ye see, if I kin find the lost mine, 'tain't adventure, and he thought but little of the threat

"You are. Under ordinary circumstances I have pledged me word ter little Sunshine I would The very day of his arrival in Readestown Frank

The old traveler and explorer was looking hale "You are a true heart, and such a friend as I and hearty, and he did not seem to have aged much since he made his last great journey with

Presently the doctor asked:

"Have you decided yet where you will go with to Helena, Montana, by rail—that you join meljects to continuing my travels as they keep me away from home so much, but she has consented to my taking a journey provided I don't go out of "A BIT AV A RUCTION"_FIRE !- ON THE WESTERN gone to." the United States."

"Well, what part of our country do you propose to visit?"

"The far west."

"Good! If you want a companion I can find you one without looking far."

"Bravo, doctor! You mean you will go yourself?"

"Certainly, Frank, my boy."

"Once a man has tasted the fascination of travel you can't keep him at home long, eh, doctor?"

"No; at least that is my case." "Well, doctor, I think our western journey is likely to be a great trip, for I have a motive in view in making it that is really quite remarkable. I am tally-ho when it was all closed up. going to tell you the whole story."

"I am all attention."

while Frank went on to relate the story of the lost gold mine and how he had come to agree to go in trol and cruide the iron horses as well from the til the loikes av me!" roared Barney. search of it.

While Frank was talking, Mrs. Frank, Jr., and Frank's father came into the drawing-room, and then Frank went over the whole story of the lost gold mine again.

"What did you say the name of the partner of Beckbridge, whom you suspect to be a prisoner in the lost mine, is?" asked Mr. Reade, Sr., who was now a triffe hard of hearing.

"Owen Strathmore," replied Frank.

"Ah, I thought so. I knew Owen Strathmore from which protruded a number of brass keys, and his wife years ago. Owen was a poor young each numbered or lettered. man, but honest and true, and he loved rich Squire Baldwin's only daughter, Bessie. The squire refused his consent, and Owen and Bessie eloped, board he could, at will, start, stop, back, or turn full tilt. and then the old squire vowed he would disown the electric team. his daughter. Owen and his bride went west, and I never heard of them again. Owen was my friend, ing set of knobs in a rack on the top of the ve-ducked his head and shot forward, and the rishand I hope, Frank, you will do all you can to save him, and find the lost mine," said Mr. Reade.

"I certainly shall," assented Frank.

the doctor said:

"I think I will go out to your work-shop in the rear of the grounds, Frank, and have another look tone, was suspended in a frame behind the front for several moments; at last, however, he nate at the tally-he. I haven't seen it since you put seat. the last finishing touches on it."

"Very well, I will join you at the work-shop in a few moments, as soon as I find some washers have somewhere in this desk. You will find Barturning to a desk as he spoke.

wife said to her husband:

"Oh, by the way, Frank, I should have told you that I took pity on a poor unfortunate man who that gave them a firm hold on the earth and pre- and Barney began to polish the brasswork on the was a soldier in the late war, and allowed him to vented their slipping. sleep in the work-shop last evening. I believe he has not gone away yet."

"Very well. You are always kind to the poor. my dear, and I am glad to have you so," Frank re-liantly reflected by night.

plied pleasantly.

warm.

shop. The great double doors, through which any of the Reades' wonderful steam or electric inventions

There, within the shop, the doctor saw the new electric tally-ho, and a beauty it was, as well as a triumph of the inventor's skill.

in the land of Queen "Vic."

No pains or expense had been spared in making artistically painted in bright harmonious colors, pearance seemed to indicate that he might have a prisoner.

sunbeams fell upon it.

The wheels, as in all the Reades' electrical and steam vehicles, were provided with broad tires, so main body of the coach, under the floor between heart the best of friends, and each was ready at antly. the front and rear wheels, was the storage locker any time to risk his life in defense of the other. for all the supplies necessary for a long journey.

with porcelain, which would hold a large quantity passed on to the house.

of water.

In the roof of the tally-ho was a sliding panel, and by pulling a lever this panel could be shot Barney, as the doctor passed out of hearing. aside in a second, thus opening a way of retreat into the interior of the coach of which the travelers Barney. I done tole yer dat I hain't seed nuffin' of racket began inside the tally-ho. could avail themselves at any time.

The entire surface of the tally-ho was plated over with sheets of tempered steel, which were impervious to any rifle ball.

CHAPTER III.

PLAINS.

"IT is indeed a thing of beauty and wonderful utility," said the good doctor to himself, as he observed the last of Frank Reade, Jr.'s splendid inventions.

The windows of the tally-ho were provided times, and there were small adjustable openings head av the nagur Oi'll be afther doin'." on all sides for loop-holes, through which the inmates of the vehicle could discharge their weap- I'se a bad man when I done got started. Doan'

These loop-holes also served as ventilating open-

By means of intricate mechanism connecting the powerful double electric batteries which supplied same Oi'll be afther givin' yez. I'll bate the head The doctor then listened with wrapt interest the motive power with the four splendid metallic av yez. Shade o' Donnybrook! It's not a nagur steeds that were attached to the tally-ho by means as kin stand before an Irish gintleman. Long life trol and guide the iron horses as well from the inside of the vehicle as when perched on the ele-Pomp had engaged in a row, and the rollicking vated driver's seat.

> were stored in a special compartment under the around Pomp. driver's seat, in the inside of a vehicle, and they were out of sight, but the opening of a small door ed in a wide grin that parted his physiognomy in in the "battery room" would enable the engineer the middle, from ear to ear, and he rubbed his to reach the wonderful motors.

Above the battery-room was a mahegany board, satisfaction.

This was the engineer's post when inside.

Wires, running from these keys to a correspondhicle, were to be used when the engineer or driver man went down. was outside.

There was some further conversation, and then the tally-ho, which, by night, afforded an excel-eye. lent light.

The horses were wonders of mechanism. They "Begob, it's cogitatin' I've been. Now sure an' were perfect equines modeled in metal as by the Pomp's wife is agoing to give a big dinner il a skill of a sculptor. All the joints were made to company of nagur friends from the town the tay, correspond with those of living horses, and the in- I know the nagur haz been countin' on getth' a noy and Pomp at the work-shop now," said Frank, tricate machinery with which the limbs of the square male, an' begob Oi'll get aven wid the spalhorses were united was stored in their hollow peen be kapin him away from the dinner. It's al-The doctor passed out of the house, and Frank's bodies. Wires connected the internal machinery most noon now sure, so Oi'll begin me tactics." of the horses directly with the batteries.

the leaders, and from the glass eyes the bright elect of the tally-ho, and also secured the panel on the tric flame from the lamps within would be bril-top of the vehicle.

Meanwhile the doctor proceeded to the work- was the same-and everything was complete, as iron head av him," said Barney, mentally, and though the iron horses were living animals.

Having completed his admiring survey of the "Come here forninst the tally-ho for a minite, electric tally-ho the doctor turned away. He was Pomp." could pass, stood wide open, for the day was quite about to retrace his steps to the house, as Frank Reade's appearance was delayed. But the doctor had not taken many steps when he heard the voices of Barney O'Shea and Pomp the faithful darky, side av the tally-ho wance an' look an' see what is The two old servants of the Reades, who had been wrong with the springs av the door wance whist The tally-ho was provided with the usual double all over the world with Frank Jr. and his father, I open and shut the same. Sure an' I can't make seat forward and two others further back. The came to the door of the work-shop, and at the same out why it won't work at all at all." vehicle was modeled after the celebrated English time a miserable, ragged, tramp-like personage tally-ho, which has so long been a favorite vehicle issued out of the building and seated himself lazily ing tone, and Pomp promptly stepped inside the in the bright sunlight.

and varnished until it shone like glass when the imposed upon Mrs. Reade, and that the story he "Ha! Ha! Ha! I guess you'll be alther most and varnished until it shone like glass when the imposed upon Mrs. Reade, and that the story he "Ha! Ha! I guess you'll be alther most and varnished until it shone like glass when the imposed upon Mrs. Reade, and that the story he had told her might be false.

The doctor spoke to Barney and Pomp cheerfully, tally-ho. Just above the rear axle was a water tank, lined and then, with a suspicious glance at the tramp, he | "Luff me out, Irish! Luff me out! Dar's roast

ness to hand me over me flask, I dunno?" said "Be gob, an' yez'ull not get out until yez tell me

"Gollie, I neber seed sich a feller as you am, yer flask," replied Pomp.

antil ould Ireland an' rung 'St. Patrick's bell it's Barney. not meself, Barney O'Shea, as kin be daceived by a But just then Mr. Reade, Sr., appeared in the naygur."

"Look yere, Irish. You done call me a liar, tion at a glance.

doan' yer?"

"Sure an' Oi didn't say yez was a loyer. But be- Pomp up in the tally-bo? Release him at once!" gob, yez are a loyer. Me flask was in the pocket said Mr. Reade, Sr., sternly. av me overalls whin I wint til me breakfust; ond Very reluctantly Barney obeyed.

now, it's the loikes av yez as kin tell where it's

"Look yere, Barney. I see you done want ter pick up trouble. I'se a colored gemman, I is, an' I doan' 'low no Irish trash to 'sult my honah,

"Fat's that the nagur says? Sure an' it's a paceful mon Oi am, but begob, it's not an Irishmon as will lave a nagur stand foreninst him an' ax with metallic blinds, which could be closed at all for a foight in vain. Bedad, an' it's breakin' the "Go way from me! Go way from me, Irish!

yer play with me, Irish!"

Pomp began to duck his head about as though ings, allowing air to circulate readily through the he meditated trying his favorite tactics, and butting Barney out of time.

"Arrah, it's a ruction yez want! Sure an' the

It had been more than a week since Barney and Irishman was just spoiling for a ruction. As in a previous invention, the electric batteries Barney threw off his coat and began to dance

> The grimy face of the tramp meanwhile opencapacious stomach with an expression of ineffable

A moment and Barney thought he sa his chance. "Whoop! Show me the man as dare treal of By applying pressure to the brass keys on the the tail av me coat!" he cried, and rushed at lomp

But Pomp leaped aside.

Then, before Barney could evade him, the carky

Pomp walked back into the work-shop wth a There were two electric lamps on the front of swaggering galt and with his hat tilted overone

Barney picked himself up and scratched his An electric gong of silver, with a clear resonant head. Then for a wonder he stood perfectly quiet tered:

With this Barney walked into the shop. The hoofs of the iron steeds were shod with claws | Pomp was now at work at a bench in the par, electric tally-ho. But slyly he slipped a welge There were electric lights in the hollow heads of of steel into the fastening of one of the side dors

"Now, thin, me trap is ready, begob. Let me The reins were ribbons of fine steel-the harness see if I kin cotch the nagur, bad scran til the cistthen he called out:

Pomp came promptly. "What yer want, Irish?" he asked.

"Will yez have the illegant politeness to go n-

Barney spoke in a very pleasant and conciliattally-ho. Then Barney closed the door and slipped The individual was the man who had been al-another wedge, which he held in his hand, in the the exterior beautiful. The entire vehicle had been lowed to sleep in the workshop. Certainly his ap-fastener, thus securing it and making poor Ponn in' yer dinner this day, be gob, me foing laddy Barney and Pomp were the same jolly, reckless buck, an' that's what yez git fur yer hather way av characters as of old, always playing jokes on each foightin' wid yer head, 'stead av standin' up was a they could not easily sink in soft soil. In the other and fighting between themselves, and yet at mon wid yer fists, be gob," cried Barney, exult-

Then Pomp found out he was locked up in the goose an' biled possum waitin' fur me, an' I can't "Be dad, Pomp, will yez have the illigant polite-done stay yere an' miss dem game-birds!"

> what yez have done wid me flask!" replied Barney. Then Pomp was mad, and straightway a terriblen'

"Kick away, naygur, batter yer cannon-ba "Be the tail av Widdy Nolan's goat that rached head, bust yer biler, you're there to stay!" cried door of the work-house, and he took in the situa-

"What do you mean, you rascal, by shutting

Pomp sprang out upon Barney and a rough and collar and ran him to the road gate, and there he about it were a score of yelling savages. tumble fight began between them. Over and over gave him a kick to help him on his way. they rolled. Now Pomp was on top and then The vagrant slunk away, but he muftered in an ringing tones, as he turned on the full force of the Barney.

Pomp, who had come to call her husband to din-feller, an' you'll find it out afore long, cuss ye." ier, appeared upon the scene. At once the wench But Frank returned to the tally-ho, and ran it and with their rifles thrust through the loopholes, fell upon Barney tooth and nail.

sion, and witnessed the difficulty.

wench, so I will!" screamed the irate Irishwoman, great invention." and she made a rush for the battle-field and fell There was some conversation about the merits upon Mrs. Pomp furiously.

probably he was not heard.

ments I have! We'll clane out the nagurs! Bate that Oi may soon be afther havin' a bit av a ruc-ber near the lone settler's cabin was a surprise to the head at the winch, Biddy!" roared Barney. | tion wid the red nagurs on the plains."

the contestants apart.

daring at each other.

mey stepped back carelessly against a wire white was connected with one of the electric batterio in the work-shop as Frank spoke.

de wire thus.

shock.

"Worra! worra! it's kilt Oi am intirely!" he changed his position.

There was a laugh at Barney's mishap. But the came running from their dwellings. succeeding instant all were very much astounded that sent him reeling.

"Golly! luff me butt him jiss once!" shouted "Sure, an' the poor laddy is gone to the death

Pomp.

Barney and the darky were rushing at the tramp at the work-shop door, driven back by the smoke in an instant. His escape was cut off, and, as a and flames. last resort, the tattered vagrant sprang inside the tally-ho.

It seemed it would fare hardly with the tramp now, for Barney and Pomp meant to drag nim out of the electric vehicle at once and soundly pummel him.

But Frank, Jr., interposed before Barney and Pomp reached the coach.

"Be off to your dinner, all of you. I will attend to the tramp," he said.

Very reluctantly Barney and Pomp withdrew with their wives, and now that the mystery of the missing flask was cleared up, and Pomp was ex- caught the sound of wheels. culpated, all four were soon on the best of terms again.

Frank waited until Barney and Pomp were out of sight, and then he was about to order the tramp came to a standstill at a safe distance, and out of av Ould Ireland! It's a ruction the red nagurs to come out of the tally-ho, when all at once the the vehicle leaped Frank Reade, Jr., safe and unelectric vehicle made a forward start.

Through the open door it came as Frank and his companions leaped aside, and on, as though drawn almost fainting with joy, sank into Frank's arms. by four living horses, continued the wonderful vehicle. simplified some of the machinery, so that the tally-the work of the revengeful tramp. he could be started by simply puling one lever. Next day the tally-ho and the metallic steeds were thus astically. Now Frank understood that the tramp must have, were taken apart and carefully packed in cases "Listen til the nonsense av the nagur. Faith, Ingements of the coach, pulled the starting lever. were shipped by rail for Helena, Montana. From the course it was taking the tally-ho would Frank, Dr. Vaneyke, Barney and Pomp followed "You'se might smart-in yer mind. Spec's den occurred, great damage would be done, Frank party arrived there Frank found old Yank Beckleaped in pursuit of the tally-ho. He reached the bridge, the scout and prospector, awaiting him. boot at the rear, and quickly swung himself upon The plainsman had provided a pleasant home and seized the lever there, and reversed it, thus had designed. bringing the vehicle to a quick stop before it As soon as possible after the arrival of the tally-hurt yer feelin's, but I must mention dat you am de reached the tree.

aggered out of the tally-ho.

your face around here again," said Frank to the search for the lost gold mine. tramp sternly, for he was now well satisfied that The second day of the journey was drawing to a "Sure an' it's mesel' is the docthur to cure he was unworthy of charity.

"Maybe you think you kin drive me, young fel- red reflection on the sky ahead. ler? I'm tough, I be, an' I mought hit yer onct on Then passing over a ridge on the vast plains ed Barney. tramp, blustering up to Frank.

The instant the door of the tally-ho was opened This was too much. Frank caught him by the "prairie island," a settler's cabin in flames, and ugly tone: While Barney chanced to be uppermost, Mrs. "You can't kick Tough Jack fer nothin', young burning cabin very swiftly.

back into the work-shop.

of the tally-ho, and then Pomp and Barney came Old Mr. Reade vainly ordered the belligerent back from dinner, and Frank told them about his couples to desist. They did not heed him, and proposed trip to the far West. The Irishman and the darky were delighted, and Barney said:

Reade, Jr. and Dr., Vaneyke came hastening from accompanied by Mr. Reade presently, and, having taily-ho forward in a charge to the rescue of the the house, and the young inventor quickly pulled discussed their plans further, they finally separated imperiled occupants of the cabin, he supposed he for the night, and Frank, Jr., retired early.

"No more of this, or I'll discharge you all on the Soon the whole Reade household slept. But sud- were engaged in the attack on the cabin. spot," said Frank, Jr., as the two couples stood denly Frank, Jr., was awakened by the thrilling But the sight of the additional force which so

"Fire! Fire! Fire!"

The inventor hurried on a few garments, and, rushing to the window of his sleeping-room, which the settler's family. ank lad been making an experiment, and left commanded a view of the work-shop, he saw that the building was in flames. The alarm had been ed a clear female voice ringing out a despairing As Barney struck the wire he received a terrible given by a belated wayfarer who chanced to pass cry of: the Reade mansion on his way to the town.

Frank realized at once that there was not an inroared as he went backward with a sudden jump stant to be lost or his new invention would be dethat landed him against the tramp, who had now stroyed. He dashed from the house and rushed to the shop. At the same time Pomp and Barney

Frank managed to force open the door of the to see Barney deal the tramp a blow on the ear work-shop in a moment. But a torrent of black speed of their wild mustangs. suffocating smoke rolled forth and hurled him back It's mesel' as knows who stole me flask now. for an instant. Then, thinking only of saving the I smell the breath av the scare-crow!" roared Bar-tally-ho and heedless of the great danger, Frank plunged into the smoky cavern and vanished.

av him!" cried Barney, as he and Pomp recoiled cabin rang out again.

Mrs. Frank, Jr., and old Mr. Reade had hastened a mother's heart by awful dread. from the house after Frank, and they now came up. They had seen the brave one they loved van-chivalrous impulses were up in arms upon the inish amid the smoke and flames, and Mrs. Reade stant. now cried frantically:

him, I beg of you!"

Pomp and Barney, brave as they were, hesitated uttered Frank, with intense intonation. about venturing into the abyss of flame and smoke.

shop came the electric tally-ho and team. Then claimed the old trapper characteristically. the door of the vehicle opened as the tally-ho harmed.

There was a shout of delight, and Mrs. Reade, blackguards!" Barney roared very belligerently.

It will be remembered that the batteries were all too late. Meanwhile, Frank assured himself that plexion. 'Cordin' ter Dr. Balls, de iron in de charged, and that the vehicle was ready to start at the tally-ho had sustained no injury. As to the blood makes de fightin' man, an' I's gwine fo' to an instant's notice. In this invention Frank had origin of the fire all were inclined to think it was waste some ob dat iron on dem low down red nig-by charge, while meddling with the interior ar-made for the purpose. The day after all the cases an' it's not iron in the blood that makes a nagur," in a moment or so come in collision with a large by the first passenger train. The journey to you kin tole what do make de color of de African tree it seemed, and knowing that if this accident Helena was accomplished in safety, and when the gentleman?"

the top of the vehicle, gained the driver's seat, for Little Sunshine in the family of a friend as he that, be me soul, that maks a nagur's color."

ho it was put together and laden with necessary biggest liar on two legs." Frank alighted, and the tramp, who was now supplies, ammunition, arms and scientific appli- "That manes foight ivory toime in Paddy's talf-intoxicated by the stolen liquor he had drank, ances, which had been shipped from Readestown. and !" One moonlight night the party boarded the tally-ho "I'se got de buttin' cramp comin' inter me "Be off with you, you rascal, and never show and unknown to the general public began the great neck. I done spec's I'se got ter butt some one close when the party on the tally-ho observed a the loikes av yez. It's manners I'll be afther

the smeller, if ye gimme any back talk," said the which they were now traversing, they beheld at no Despite the great danger from the Indians whom Igreat distance, near a small clump of timber or they were soon to be called upon to contend with

"Forward to the rescue!" cried Frank Reade in electric battery and sent the tally-ho toward the

All hands took their places inside the vehicle, were in readiness to discharge a volley.

It seemed everything was arranged for a general "Of course you understand, Frank," said Mr. But suddenly out of the timber beside the cabin riot through the combination of circumstances, for Reade, Sr., "when we allowed the tramp to sleep dashed full half a hundred mounted Sioux, and on while Mrs. Pomp was belaboring Barney, Mrs. in the work-shop he did not have access to the they came at the tally-ho yelling like demons and Barney came to the rear door of the Reade man-tally-ho. He slept in the entry, and the door lead-flogging their ponies at full speed. In a moment ing to the main room and the tally-ho was care-the Sioux were circling around the tally-ho and "Sure, an' the nagurs are afther murderin' poor fully secured. Trust me to see that no stranger closing in. It was evident as yet they took the ve-Barney! Arrah, but I'll break the head of the was given an opportunity to meddle with your hicle for an ordinary coach and felt sure of its cap-

CHAPTER IV.

ASTONISHED REDSKINS.

THE sudden appearance of the half hundred "Ould Ireland forever! Sure, an' it's reinforce- "Shure it's a happy mon I am in the thought Sioux warriors who came dashing out of the tim-Frank Reade and his companions, of course.

But before the fight resulted seriously, Frank Frank and Dr. Vaneyke returned to the house When the young inventor started the electric had to encounter but the score of redskins who suddenly revealed its presence did not materially alter Frank's plans.

Still he was intent upon rendering assistance to Above the saturnalia of the Indians there reach-

"Help! Help! Help!"

Thus it was known that within that burning cabin, environed by fierce and merciless enemies, a helpless woman was menaced.

A moment fraught with supreme excitement for all within the electric tally-ho elapsed while nearer and nearer circled the howling Sioux at the full

They were only to be likened to a human maelstrom, whirling nearer and nearer, like the deadly whirpool, toward the center which was Frank Reade's electric tally-ho.

Suddenly the voice of the woman in the burning

"Save my child! Oh, save my little one!" she uttered. It was a frantic, despairing appeal wrung from Frank's sympathy was awakened, and all his

He thought of his own wife and a little son "Oh, Barney-Pomp, save my husband-save whom Heaven had sent to gladden his heart.

"We must reach the cabin! We must and will There was a moment of awful suspense as save the poor woman and her innocent child!"

"Right, by powder! You kin skulp old Yank But all at once Barney uttered a yell. He had Beckbridge an' feed him out for wolf bait, ter pizen ther critters, ef he ain't with ye on this leetle fam-The succeeding instant out of the burning work-bly picnic excursion clean up to ter the gills!" ex-

> "Whoop! Erin-go-Bragh, an' the Seventeenth are after, bad scran til the loikes av thim, an' sure its mesel' as will bate the heads of the murderin'

"Put her dar. You done bet your life, Barney, The work-shop was doomed. The fire company dar am a heap o' iron in dis child's blood. Iron am from Readestown presently arrived, but they came what gibs the colored folks de fine brunette comgers!" cried Pomp, grasping Barney's hand en-said Barney, jeeringly.

"Begob, an' I kin do that same, sure."

"Den s'pose yer turn on yer wisdom onct." "Be the powers, an' it's dirt, an' dirty dirt at

"Barney, I done hate ter disagree wid yer or ter cure 'em." baten intil yez. Come on, yez image yez!" roar-for their lives, the two ridiculous fellows seemed so great was his emotion, but he grasped the hands Barney regained his feet and seized Pomp by the determined on what Barney would affectionately of his rescuers and shook them warmly. term "a bit av a shindy."

ward toward the settler's cabin.

the Sioux' discharged guns as they surged about see those whom he had rescued to a place of said. the swiftly moving coach.

cupied all of Frank Reade's attention. But now Frank that there was a settlement twenty miles an' not took a han' in de game," replied Pomp. Dr. Vaneyke touched the young inventor on the further West which he desired to reach. arm.

Frank turned quickly, and asked:

"What is it, doctor?"

"Barney and Pomp are at it again!" replied the to reach. good doctor, indicating the absurd pair of chronic "What is to be done with the redskin we have wildcats." quarrelers.

Barney had got his coat off, and he had discard- him, and yet I don't like to have him shot. ed his gun for his favorite shillalah, and he was pose we turn him loose," said Frank, as the party Pomp's method may accomplish his conversion," brandishing the stick as if about to attack Pomp. | was getting ready to resume the journey.

he was evidently all ready to meet Barney's threat- red are wiped out," said Yank Beckbridge. ened attack half way.

"Hold there, or I'll fling you both out of the save in self defense." foot.

At that moment there was the sound of a heavy lenly. fall on the roof of the tally-ho.

Yank Beckbridge, who was looking out of one of sign, an' den you'se welcome to him for missionary the loop-holes, sprang back with an ejaculation.

"Injun on the coach, by mighty!"

tally-ho in place. Like a flash the door slid back, and "thump!" down into the vehicle a huge Sioux warrior was Frank.

precipitated. skin. He had gained the side of the tally-ho, bate the spalpeen until he'll never want to foight and a-holdin' up the coach," replied the old trapmounted on his mustang, and one bound from the the white folks again, be dad." back of his pony, had enabled the agile fellow to reach the top of the vehicle.

Sioux motionless.

Frank was promptly obeyed. Then all hands sprang to the loopholes and sent yez are, docthur!" exclaimed Barney.

a volley of bullets among the Indians.

Meanwhile the cunning redskins had sought to Frank. stop the coach by shooting down the metal horses.

Volley after volley of bullets had been discharged at the team of the tally-ho in rapid succession. The Indians saw the bullets strike the horses, with which to stay a dozen such teams as that at. av the heathen blackguard!" cried Barney. tached to the tally-ho, had they been real living horses, Frank Reade's equine wonders continued of the coach, disarmed him and then set him free, look of terror at a revolver, which was leved at on, of course, as though the hostile bullets of the Indians were so many snowflakes.

The superstitious Indians were amazed and it but he was hemmed in by. Frank's party. alarmed. To them the strange vehicle and its four steeds assumed supernatual attributes. The oldest warriors drew off and shook their heads as they muttered:

"Great medicine! Great medicine!" reached.

Frank saw the necessity of immediately dispersing the enemy.

He accordingly gave Pomp some instructions, fists he made a rush at Barney. and the darky made haste to get out some handgrenades.

The door in the top of the tally-ho was then opened again and a shower of the explosive gren- were at it tooth and nail.

ades were hurled among the enemy.

This strange volley completed the rout and consternation of the redskins. The party from Indian was seen to reach out into the prairie grass the woods wheeled their ponies and galloped and pick up a long, keen-bladed Sioux scalpingmadly away.

"Great Medicine, shoot thunder and lightning have dropped.

balls!" they yelled.

tering-ram, and beat down the door.

fearful execution among the howling savages, on the spot. and in a brief space the survivors fled for their The old trapper's rifle leaped to his shoulder Now on through the night, under the moonlight, lives. Then out of the cabin amid a torrent of like a flash. He meant to shatter the knife hand came the wonderful vehicle at full speed. the woman clasped a little child.

CHAPTER V.

ROAD AGENTS.

We owe our lives to you." said the settler's wife, as tated. alighted from the coach which he stopped a mo-thud, and he remained motionless. ment previously.

The poor woman's husband could scarcely speak out of his body.

black sky.

safety.

So the inventor took the settler and his wife Pomp, and the old trapper said: and child on board the electric tally-ho and prom- "Them two are the dratedest fools I ever run captured. I don't want to burden the coach with "Come. Let's be off. We will leave the redskin purposes," said Pomp.

"But it isn't Christian to slay even an Indian out delay.

"I specs he'd need a missionary powerful bad "Thin, begch, he's my meat!" roared Barney, about den if dar was any funeral fur de red," the and as quick as thought he touched the electric darky added showing his ivories in a grin.

spring which held the sliding door in the top of the "Be the shamrock so green, I'll tell yez what to do with the murderin' spalpeen," cried Barney. "Well, what is your advice, Barney?" replied

Barney and Pomp fell upon the astounded red-me have a bit av' a ruction wid him. Sure an' I'll road agent, Injun Ralph, was up ter his old game,

Frank laughed, and the doctor said:

"It is evident we must get rid of the Indian, and "Bind him securely, Barney," said Frank we do not want his blood on our hands. Perhaps Reade, as the Irishman and the darky held the it would be as well to allow Barney to teach him a lesson before we let him go."

"Right ye are. Shure an'it's a foine wise man the coach," said Yank.

"I guess you're about right, doctor," assented

"You may release the Indian and have your ruction with him if you like," added Frank. "Whoop! Paddy forever! Bogs an' turf! Shades and they heard the sharp "ping" of metallic contact. o' Donnybrook! Kape yer two eyes on me. Pomp, black hosses, and evidently full of passenger was and he would have taken to his heels and ran for whose face was hidden by a black mask.

But although they discharged bullets enough til yez see how nate I'll be afther batin' the head drawn up on the trail.

a moment.

"Ugh. White man want fight, eh?" grunted the huge Indian.

"That's the music this band is playin', begob! In a moment more the burning cabin would be Come on, Reddy, ould boy, till I pate yez one good ould Irish belt on the smeller!" roared Barney.

"Ugh! Injun whip white man heap quick!" uttered the huge savage flercely, and with clinched the passengers to hand over their valuables.

"Let her go, Gallagher!" roared the Irishman, Ralph!" said Frank.

who was now in his glory.

They were pretty well matched, too. Suddenly they clinched, and as both went to the ground the knife, which one of the warriors who had fled must ney's friends.

upon Barney.

with a bellow of rage, ducked his head, and shot seemed like unearthly flame. forward at the Indian who threatened Barney's No driver was visible on the tally-ho. All about Pomp's head struck the savage below the belt inspiring.

The cabin was doomed, and the roof fell with a "Forgive me all I ever done agin yez, Pomp! Meanwhile the electric tally-ho had sped on-crash sending up a shower of sparks against the Begob, ye are a foine gossoon as iver stood in shoe leather, if yez are a nagur! Begob, I'll bate the "Crack, crack, crack!" came the sharp report of Frank felt that duty demanded that he should head av the man as dare say a word agin yez," he

"Dat's all right, Barney. I reckon I wasn't er The din of the fusillade had for the moment oc- He questioned the settler, and the latter assured gwine ter see dat red nigger pull his razor on yer

Then Barney pulled out his flask and treated,

ised to convey them to the settlement they desired agin. Now they are a-havin' a love feast, an' the next moment they may be fightin' like a pair of

Sup-to reflect upon the error of his ways. I trust said Frank Reade.

That sable gentleman had his head lowered, and "One less o' the pizen whelps every time a Then the party boarded the electric tally-ho, and the wonderful conveyance was got in motion with-

Ten miles further on the electric vehicle struck coach, you rascals!" cried Frank, stamping his "I ain't gone into the missionary business yet the Chippeway road. The stage line from Chippemyself," growled the old trapper, a trifle sul- way to Little Boseman mine traversed the Chippeway road, and so it was kept in pretty good repair "Luff me git jiss one shot at dat cigar store by the stage company.

Frank ran the tally-ho along the stage road toward Chippeway, for that was the settlement the rescued settler wanted to go to. Good time was made on the road, and soon the_ tally-ho was in among the hills.

Suddenly from ahead came the report of arms, the clatter of wheels and affrighted con nre-"Hello! What's that?" exclaimed the doctors.

"Ther Chippaway stage are in trouble sure "Lave the red nagur loose an' let the loikes av shootin'. Shouldn't wonder if that there infernal

"Indian Ralph!" exclaimed Frank. "Ah! bo met the scoundrel before. I shot away his eared he vowed vengeance upon me at the time."

"Let's put on all ther speed we hev got and down on the road agents if so be they are atti

Frank depressed the main lever, and the of the coach was increased. A bend in theroad had concealed the scene ahead, but this beniwas quickly turned by the electric tally-ho.

Then under the moonlight the party in theallyho beheld a thrilling sight.

The stage from Chippaway drawn by fou fine The driver had dropped the reins and sawith

Then he and Pomp dragged the big Indian out both hands held above his head, staring with a The Indian leaped to his feet with a defiant yell, his head by a man attired in full Indian gart and

"Indian Ralph, to a dead certainty," said Old Barney was dancing about before the Indian in Yank, as he and Frank Reade looked throug the front window of the electric tally-ho.

The road agent who covered the frightned "jehu" was mounted on a splendid steed, an he had a dozen men with him, who were also were mounted.

These latter had surrounded the Chippeway coach, and, with leveled revolvers, were ordering

"We'll spoil this night's work for Mr. Indian

The next moment Frank gave the word to his The succeeding moment Barney and the Indian friends, and they discharged a volley at the road robbers as they came thundering down upon them in the great tally-ho.

CHAPTER VI. A PRAIRIE FIRE.

Indian Ralph's band was not composed of Almost the very next succeeding moment in the heroes, and the chief of the road agents was him-Now the score of Indians on foot about the struggle which ensued between him and Barney, self a coward. He could hold up a coach full of burning cabin were preparing to rush against it the Indian came on top, and a cry of horror then timid passengers well enough, when backed by his with a log. They meant to use the log as a bat-went up from Frank Reade and the rest of Bar-men, but he never contested with anything like an lequal force.

But Frank Reade's tally-ho came charging up just | They saw the treacherous Indian raise the scalp- | The appearance of the electric tally-ho was calin time to defeat the purpose of the savages. | ing knife which he had secured, and they knew culated to strike a feeling of awe and terror to the A shower of rifle-balls and hand-grenades did that the miscreant meant to murder poor Barney heart of any one who did not know what its secret smoke rushed a man and a woman. In her arms of the Indian before his deadly blow could fall The electric lights on the sides of the tally-ho reflected brilliantly, and the blazing light of the elec-But as the trapper raised his weapon Pomp, tric fire in the horses' eyes flashed forth rays that life like a human missile from a powerful catapult. it was to the road agents mysterious, terrible, aw

"HEAVEN must have sent you to our rescue before he could deal the murderous stab he medi- Suddenly the electric bell began to ring, and that sound and the detonation of the shots fired she sank down at the feet of Frank, Reade, who had The Indian went back on the ground with a loud from the interior of the vehicle completed the con-d sternation of the road-agents.

Pomp's terrific blow had knocked all the breath They fled, nor stood not on the order of their go-d ling.

Pell-mell, as though each man wished to be first in the race, the road-agents dashed away at their ing Frank Reade shout "all aboard," Barney and the battery." best speed.

ally came from Readestown, yelled in delight:

ventor forever!"

who had marked him for life, shouted as he turned hind. in the saddle:

hand, Frank Reade! Beware of our third meet-them to task for it. ing!"

the road agent chief thundered on and disap-Barney and Pomp at all. peared among the hills.

of the party.

briskly on toward its destination.

band then.

ten miles from Chippeway.

admiration, and great was the wonder of the behind them.

miners about the inn when Frank Reade "Do you know what that is?" asked the trapper, plained for their diversion how the tally-ho was pointing. Wor vked.

ty was outside about the coach the Irishman sure as you live that fire is gaining on us." filled.

Almost immediately after Barney entered a six- were licking up the prairie grass at race horse craw de line at buffler bulls. 'Deed I does!"

foot miner strode into the bar-room.

drinker-o'-the-Rockies. Hi ham ther terror o'comin' this way too!" nothink hof Irish, niggers er Chinamen," bellowed by the fire." the English bully.

discovered Barney's nationality, as he could scarce-ther are in 'em!" cried the old trapper. ly have failed to have done, since the map of Ire- Frank Reade promptly followed this advice.

and was written on Barney's face. English Hicks was known as a bad man. buffalo?" asked the doctor, anxiously. Everybody about the inn was also aware that he "Perhaps," rejoined Frank. particularly hated Irishmen.

Irish "tenderfoot," unless he ran for it.

The landlord slyly whispered to Barney. "You better git out, stranger, or English Hicks creased. will just eat ye up. All the six roughs who just The buffalo and the chasing flames gained on our came in with Hicks are his followers, an' they will friends.

stand by him." "Begob, I'm an Irishman, long loife til the coach. loikes av me. An' sure an' it's not the likes av a bafe Barney and Pomp were on top of the vehicle. the herd. atin' Englishman as kin scare the loikes av me. All at once the wheels of the tally-ho struck a Begob, I'll bate the head av the brayin' bully, rock.

Sure there niver was an Englishman yet hatched The shock made Pomp lose his balance. as could stand forninst Barney O'Shea-whoop!" Thus cried Barney, and he threw off his coat ing buffalo beside the tally-ho.

and spit on his hands. They didn't know Barney there, and all pitied thinking the darky would be trampled to death him. They thought he had about as good as under the hoofs of the rash buffalo herd. ordered his own coffin.

Barney pretty soon.

The big English bully was destined to make his mal dashed on at increased speed.

acquaintance at once.

ther room. Git down hon yer marrer bones han' Pomp's safety, the electric tally-ho's course was The presence of the yelling darky among the ax me parding, or Hi start the circus," roared the changed, and it was started to follow Pomp on his buffalo not only served to frighten the animal he English rough.

He advanced on Barney as he spoke.

"Somebody hide me. Begob an' Johnny Bull scares the without av me," cried Barney, and then with a sudden leap he dealt the huge bully a heavy blow with his clenched fist right between the eyes that made him see stars and dropped him like a IT was a very exciting time for Frank Reade and log.

Donnybrook lads forever. Ould Ireland's shamrock which Pomp clung for dear life.

is on top!" yelled Barney.

free fight with the English bully's gang.

The six roughs who were the Englishman's fugitives.

comrades now rushed at Barney. but all at once a jolly voice shouted:

"Clar de track fo' de black cyclone! Dar's a blizzard from de old Kentucky shore right on deck!"

The same moment Pomp shot into the bar-room, and ducking his head, began to butt Barney's an extra outfit of galvanic jars, and the necessary with Pomp warmly, " it's the champion buffler assailants, while the Irishman's fists did him good chemicals wherewith to charge them, so as to gen-rider yez are, an' buffler ridin' bates the jantin'service also.

In just about ten seconds the Englishmen's "Doctor," said Frank, a moment after the buffa- "I done wonder if I am all here. 'Specs I done ever seen in Montana.

Pomp rushed out of the inn.

Pomp and Barney got aboard the tally-ho started. us down," replied the doctor, as he placed himself "Frank Reade has come! Hurrah, the boss in- Swiftly it sped away, and Pomp and Barney at the guiding levers.

laughed as they heard the ugly yells which were Frank at once got out the needed jars and ap-And Indian Ralph, hearing the name of the man presently uttered by the roughs they had left be-pliances to repair the battery, and Barney and

Frank Reade was aware that Barney and Pomp "Begob," said Barney, glancing through the "For the second time you hold the winning had engaged in a fight at the inn, and he took front window, "Pomp, the nagur, is doin' av the Frank's only answer was a defiant laugh, and had first insulted him, Frank said he didn't blame av the big buffalo. Bedad, it's a bad fix he is in!"

Chippaway village was reached in safety.

enough pleasant things to Frank. But the young After a day's rest, during which time Frank and jump, for the buffalo kapes in among the herd, an' inventor did not pause long to listen to the thanks the old trapper devoted themselves to the study of if Pomp was to lep, it's thrampled intil the sod he'd the old Indian map, upon which they depended be in the whisk av a skeeter's ear."

prairies again.

had parched the prairie grass until it was a mass lag behind for a minute, an' I'll try a shot," said The electric tally-ho kept on without further ad- of yellow hay, save where the ground retained the trapper, venture until it arrived at a primitive wayside inn some moisture along the water courses. "That's an excellent idea, Beckbridge. I can do

Of course the tally-ho came in for a great deal of tention to an ominous dark cloud on the horizon a chance for a shot at Pomp's strange steed," said

"I do not, unless it is a prairie fire." rney scented whisky, and while the rest of his "Right. The wind blows from the east, and as went into the dingy bar-room to get his flask As he spoke, in the dark on-coming cloud Frank legged bullgine, er I'se a goner suah! I'se a hosssaw the flash of the red devouring flames which man, I is, clean from me butes up, but I done speed. "Hi ham Hinglish, dontcher know, an' me "And as I live a big herd of buffler are being monument 'er the fifteenth amendment mighty 'andle is 'Henglish Hicks. Hi ham ther boss fire chased by the fire, an' the mighty army o' bison are suddent. Buffler hoofs are mighty depressin' ter

Chippaway, han Hi kin lick henny bloomin' "Then we are menaced by a double peril. We "Dat's all right. Hangin' on am jiss de only job blawsted galloot of a white man in Montana, tersay may be run down by the buffalo and be overtaken I'se 'gaged in 'bout now, an' I'se doin' two men's

"Yes. Put on every grain o' 'lectricity ye hev nuffin' else at de present moment.. Oh, gollie!"

All thought Hicks would unmercifully beat the the battery. Frank opened the door of the battery- very near falling. room, and saw that four of the generating jars Despite the extreme peril of Pomp's situation he had exploded. The speed of the team was de-made such a ludicrous appearance that his friends

"Poor Pomp are a goner, begob!" cried Barney, Dr. Vaneyke anxiously.

But they were a-going to get acquainted with ed upon the neck of a huge buffalo bull. There the battery in order.

"Irish! Hi ham ha goin' ter cuff ye all round course, and while all experienced great fear for ho forged ahead again at its old speed. involuntary buffalo ride.

CHAPTER VII.

POMP'S RIDE-THE ELECTRIC CANE.

his friends, as they raced on in the electric tally-ho ward leap, and landed all in a heap on the prairie, "Come on, ye murderin' blackguards! Whoop! in pursuit of the buffalo bull, upon the back of in the rear of the fallen buffalo.

black cloud of smoke hung above the heads of the feet and staggered on.

The odds were so largely against the brave Irish-four generating jars which formed a part of the and in the exuberance of his joy turned a flip-flop man that it might have fared hardly with him then, electric battery retarded the speed of the wonderful that would have done credit to a professional vehicle.

Frank Reade recognized at once the urgent necessity for repairing the battery.

He carried, carefully packed in the supply locker. erate galvanic electricity very rapidly.

dered by, "please take my place at the levers, and feeling himself ruefully.

There was not one of them standing when hear-guide the team, while I try to repair the injury to

"All right, Frank. Make haste for your life. Then the stage driver, whom it turned out origin- Frank was all ready for a start, and as soon as We must gain more speed, or the flames will run bareback act in foine style. Faith, an' it's better But when Barney related how the English bully thin a circus to see him batin' toime on the hump "True, since he cannot jump off of the buffalo without endangering his life," assented Frank. Then of course the passengers could not say There the rescued settler found friends. "No, be me soul Pomp can't be afther makin' a

Yank Beckbridge, the old trapper, assisted him.

Soon the tally-ho was in motion, continuing to- to find the lost gold mine, a new start was made. | "An' ther old bull the coon is ridin' ain't likely ward Chippeway, while the stage coach was driven The electric tally-ho was soon far out on the to separate from the herd. But if I git half a chance ter drop the sights o' old 'Kill Sure' on the Nothing more was seen of Indian Ralph and his The dry heat of a September day without rain bison, I might drop him. Jist let the old buffler

In miles from Chippeway.

Toward the close of a beautiful day old Yank very well now with Barney's assistance, and so if There our party stopped for refreshments.

Beckbridge, the trapper, called Frank Reade's at-you will go on top with your rifle, you may gain

Frank. "Good! Here goes," assented the trapper. Then, rifle in hand, he ascended to the top of the vehicle. Just then Pomp's voice was heard.

"Fore de good Lawd, honies, stop dis yere four-

"Hang on, nigger, er there 'ull be one less ther system !" called out the old tapper facetiously.

work at it. Couldn't done hire dis chile ter do He was fighting drunk, and he had at one glance got in ther bilers, an' let the old hosses go for all Pomp gave a yell of fright, as at that moment the frightened bull made an extra high bound.

The darky bounded clear off the animal's back. "Do you think we can outrun the flames and the but fortunately he came down astride of the huge hairy hump again with a bump.

Pomp's wool stood right up straight. He was But as he spoke there came a strange sound from frightened almost out of his wits, for he had come > were compelled to smile. Beckbridge, with his rifle held ready for a shot.

had crouched down on the top of the tally-ho, and Presently the buffalo herd was all about the he was waiting for an opportunity to drop the buffalo ridden by Pomp, if the animal dropped out of

Frank worked as swiftly as possible, striving to get the battery in shape again.

And meanwhile the air grew-warmer as the pur-Down he went amid the compact mass of mov-suing conflagration steadily approached.

"Hasten with your task, Frank," admonished

Frank needed not to be thus urged, and in a shorter space of time than he would have deemed But not so. By a singular chance Pomp alight- possible, urged by stress of circumstances, he had

Pomp clung for dear life while the frightened ani- Immediately then there was an increase of speed due to the augumented electrical supply, and The buffalo herd swerved southward in their Barney uttered a delighted "whoop" as the tally-rode, but also alarmed the rest of the herd.

The other animals strove to draw away from Pomp's bull, and presently, as the tally-ho gained rapidly, the bull ridden by Pomp stumbled into a prairie dog's hole, and the other animals forged ahead.

As the huge bull went down Pomp gave a back-

At the same time, very nearly, the old trapper's The flames of the conflagration behind them were rifle cracked, and a shot struck the buffalo. But He was right in his element now, and in for a steadily gaining upon the tally-ho, and a dense it was not a dead shot, and the animal gained its

> But Pomp was saved. The delighted darky The danger was imminent, for the explosion of the sprang up none the worse for his involuntary ride, acrobat. The tally-ho was soon brought to a standstill beside Pomp, and the darky was taken aboard.

"Bedad," exclaimed Barney, as he shook hands car for jouncin' clane out."

crowd was the sickest band of roughs and bullies lo herd had swerved to the southward and thun-dropped part ob myself on de prairer l' said Pomp, with a comical wink.

took his "medicine" like a man.

to act strangely. The animals stumbled and strug-story, while the others went out to watch the cow-face wore an expression of terror. His horse was gled for all the world as though they had all run boys. into a swamp.

"The herd has struck a dog village. Ther course ranchman, addressing Frank and his friends. o' the tally-ho must be changed, or we'll git caught But Frank looked askance at the vicious looking bit, if yez are a Christian!"

in the holes."

ing-lever, and he promptly changed the course of buck before to-day, and I had rather be excused," mustang, and caught the animal by the lits. the vehicle.

The prairie dog town was thus skirted, and presently a green bottom land, along a water-course, was reached. the electric lights further illuminated the plains.

Frank ran the tally-ho straight for the green bot-cattle had led from a corral. tom land, and the speed which the electric vehicle was now enabled to attain was sufficient to dis-a gallon av the ould stuff I kin!" cried Barney. tance the conflagration in the rear.

The tally-ho reached the bottom land, and there, Pomp.

close by a stream, it was halted.

The flames came on, but they stopped at the edge of the green grass, and struck southward. It dem yere mustangs. Am dat de size ob de wager, was pretty hot where the coach was, and the air sah?" was full of smoke and cinders, but soon the fire had passed, and our friends were unharmed.

According to Beckbridge's understanding of the vellow mustang what's got his ears laid back like old Indian map, the course of the tally-ho should dey was ironed down agin his head."

now be due northwest.

the tally-ho struck north. It was not necessary to out a wild looking wan?" cross the stream which at this point curved almost The cowboys who were standing by grinned, and "Thanks for your kind intention. But full two due west.

a strange-looking cane in a rack inside the tally-there was sport ahead. ho. At a first glance it looked like an ordinary "It's an Irishman I am, begob, an' I'll never "But begob, yez can't go far. Sure, yez horse cane, but there was something about it which take a dare from a nagur. So here goes to mount is blown, an', be the powers, it's fallin' under yez caused the doctor to suspect otherwise.

So he said to Frank:

"Is that cane some new electrical device of to the yellow mustang. A cowboy who held the ye till me masther, Frank Reade, Jr."

yours?"

low. In the large metal handle is an electric coil -a miniature battery, in fact. Passing the whole belly almost touched the ground was a sight to and I know he is a wonderful man. Would to length of the cane is a metal rod, which terminates see. in the ferrule of the cane at the bottom. The rod is Barney was innocent of what was coming, and "Sure, an' yez may," said Barney. insulated by means of a layer of non-conductor. he said: Thus it is perfectly harmless to the person carrying it by the handle, but one has only to touch a knale foreninst the rider to let him mount." and they soon reached the place where Frank man with the bottom end to give him a severe shock. I made the cane merely for amusement, leaped upon the back of the mustang, and up went "Begob, here's a poor feller that the vigilantes but it may come handy to startle the natives with the back of the "bucker" as though his back was are afther huntin' like he was a wild beast!" cried yet," replied Frank.

Early the following morning the tally-ho came in sight of a great cattle ranch.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE BUCKING MUSTANG-A HUNTED MAN.

Frank determined to halt at the great cattle was a funny sight indeed. about it, and he was interested in what he saw.

The ranch-house was a large, low structure sur-around his neck.

rounded by a veranda.

and vast herds of cattle dotted the surrounding the head av ye!" roared Barney. plains.

with the graceful, reckless abandon characteristic of pen.

'rounding up" the herds.

driving in the herds. At this season of the year oc-branding iron and a desperate struggle he had "I know this man. He is honest and square and curs the "grand round up." The cattle are all made for escape, crashed through the gate of the my friend. Will you help me stand by him and driven in and counted. The yearlings, two-year-branding-pen. olds and" mavericks," or those that have as yet es- "Get out of the way, stranger, or the mad bull There was a shout of assent from the cowboys. cared branding, are separated from the others, and will charge ye!" yelled a cowboy at Barney. the process of branding, with the hot iron, which is the stamp of the owner of the herd, is then com-Barney. menced.

deal of excitement at the cattle ranch.

The proprietor of the ranch, and a number of his cowboys rode out to meet our friends, and when Frank introduced himself and his companions the land," he groaned. ranchman, who was a genial fellow, welcomed them with true Western hospitality, saying:

"It's an honor and a pleasure to receive a visit ted bull shot by him. from such a distinguished inventor as yourself,

Mr. Reade."

said affably:

"We are very glad that chance has led us here, Then a cheer went up from all present. Pomp to git yer mad up. You heard my music!" sir, and we should like to witness the interesting had once more given evidence of his great skill as "Begob, an' it's til a foine pass things are comand exciting proceedings your men are about."

"I reckon I done need medicine mighty bad. Of course Frank was invited to stay, and in a The mad bull plunged forward and fell on the 'Spose dat you han' me a dose, Barney," he added few moments all his party were made to feel at plain. Pomp's bullet had passed through his home.

"Faith an' I will that. Shure an' there's the The tally-ho was drawn up in front of the ranch- But on went the bucking mustang toward a medicine yez are afther nadin'," replied Barney. house, and when it had been duly inspected and clump of timber near by. Barney still clung to His flask was forthcoming at once, and Pomp admired by the wondering ranchman and his his back. cowboys, it was left in charge of the old trapper, As the mustang approached the timber a mount-But now the fugitive buffalo herd was observed to whom the incidents of ranch life were an old ed man dashed out of it. He was hatless, and his

"We have plenty of horses; suppose you all Barney had almost lost his wits, and he cried as "I know what's up!" called out Beckbridge. mount and take a hand in the sport?" invited the he beheld the stranger:

mustangs and shook his head, as did the doctor.

Frank had now resumed his place at the guid- "Many thanks, but I've seen these mustangs fully brought his horse up alongside of Barney's said Frank, smiling.

The ranchman laughed.

Just then, however, the voices of Pomp and Bar-animal tore away from the stranger's hold. ney were heard, and, as usual, they were wrang- "I must on; the men who are pursuing me are Night had now come, but there was a moon, and ling. They had gone up to a lot of mustangs, close behind!" exclaimed the stranger, and now

"Gollie! I done took dat bet, Irish," asserted

"Begob, an' I'll not back down from me worrud." "Then youse done bet youse kin ride any ob cent man," came the surprising answer.

"Bedad, nagur, an' ye hev it right." "Dat's all right. Den luff me see yer takel dat Accordingly, after some little time had elapsed, the critter an' not half thry. Why didn't yez pick if I don't play the part av a friend foreninst yez!"

looked at each other knowingly.

the yeller jackass," cried Barney.

reins surrendered them. Barney grabbed the reins "Then lead on. If I can only hide somewhere, "Yes," replied the inventor. "The cane is hol-and made an attempt to mount." and throw the bloodhounds off my track, I may a hickory bow, and up also went Barney.

Then with perfect assurance the jolly Irishman Reade and the others were standing.

jackass I've sthruck!" he yelled, as he came down arrival uttered exclamations of recognition upon on the back of the "bucker," and got a terrible beholding each other. shaking up.

The cowboys shouted with laughter.

Pomp rolled over in the grass and "haw-hawed" your Eastern home said the ranchman. in delight, Frank and the others laughed. Barney "There is no time for explanations of any length ranch, for he observed, as the tally-ho approached Up he went the next moment, as the mustang been in Northern Montana for some time. Yesterthe ranch-house, that there was a scene of activity bucked again, and then away the animal dashed day at 'Ravens' Gulch 'a man was killed and a with Barney clinging to his back with both arms horse stolen. I bought the stolen horse innocent-the men at the branding-pen.

Naturally enough, the arrival of Frank Reade's was now coming right at him, his head down and strong." party with the electric tally-ho occasioned a great his terrible horns leveled for a charge, while he But while these remarks were being made uttered bellows of mad rage.

Barney thought it was all up with him then. "Shure, an' I wish I was safe back in ould Ire-ride.

Meantime Pomp had snatched up a rifle and laugh, nagur!" cried Barney. ran to the rescue. All at once the black dead "Sho', go long wid yer! You done had de and there was a loud report.

la marksman.

neart.

evidently well-nigh exhausted with hard riding.

"Stop me horse! Stop the long-eared jack rab-

The new-comer was a splendid rider, and he skill-

Barney jumped to the ground the instant the mustang stopped, and making a sudden leap, the which those of the cowboys not yet out among the Barney had time to see that he was a young man, possessed of a fine handsome face, and with an "Begob, an' it's mesel' as will bet yez the price av honest look about him altogether that quite won Barney.

"Sure an' who is afther yez?" he asked.

"The Montana vigilantes. The hounds mean to hunt me down and hang me, though I am an inno-

CHAPTER IX.

WORKING TO SAVE A LIFE.

"BE the harp av Tara, it's a good turn yez have done the loikes av me by stoppin' av the jackass, "Bah, what yer thinkin' av? Faith, an' I'll ride an' sure an' it's not an Irishman I am at all at all said generous, reckless old Barney.

score men, whose evil passions are aroused, mean As the journey was resumed the doctor observed Frank and the others came up, and they all saw to execute an unjust vengeance upon me, and flight is my only resource."

the animal wull be if ye kape on. You look like Then he threw off his coat and hat, and ran up an honest man. Faith, an' I'm thinkin' I'll take

Then the way that mustang squatted until his yet be saved. I have heard of Frank Reade, Jr., Heaven I could enlist his sympathy."

Then the stranger urged his horse forward, and "Begob, an' it's well trained the jackass is to Barney ran beside him. On they went at full speed, Barney. "Murther! Worra! Worra! It's the divil's own But at that moment the ranchman and the new

"Why, Tom Hampton! Where in the world did you come from? I thought you were far away at now, friend Benedict. Suffice it to say I have ly, as I now suppose of the assassin. The vigi-"Whoa! Whoa! Stop, ye spalpeen! Stop, ye lantes were on his trail. He denounced me to All about it were large, well-built cattle-pens, murtherin' crature, yez! Stop, or bedad I'll bate them when he was overtaken, swore I was a road robber, and had tried to 'hold him up.' The fact But the mustang tore straight on toward a lot of that I was in possession of the stolen horse, and a A number of cowboys, well mounted and riding cattle which were being driven out of a branding-stranger, sufficed to satisfy the vigilantes, and they are seeking to hound me to my death," said the horsemen of the wild west, were engaged in All at once there was an alarming shout from Hampton, and there was not one present who did not feel that he was telling the truth.

"Rounding up" is the term of the locality for A mad bull, rendered mad for the time by the "Friends, all!" cried Benedict the ranchman, protect him?"

Frank Reade then said:

"Worra! Worra! It's kilt I am!" roared poor "You can count on me too, sir. I am always on the side of the right, and it's a pleasure for me to He had no control over the mustang and the bull champion the cause of the weak against the

> Barney had observed that Pomp was still laughing heartily at the recollection of Barney's mustang

"Begob, an' I saw yez havin' a mighty lot av fun But the next instant the mustang, understand-wid yeself, whilst the loiks av me was havin' meing his danger, wheeled sharply, and the infuria-|sel' pounded intil mince-mate be the yeller jackass. It's on the other side av yer mouth I'll make yez

Frank modestly disclaimed any celebrity, and shot halted, his weapon sprang to his shoulder, laugh on me when I was humpin' on dat buffler. Turn about am fair play, Irish, so doan' yer go for

ing whin an Irish gintleman can't take a bit av a an' did yez think I didn't enjoy the ride? Be me vehicle began to advance. faith, in ould Ireland it's not a ridin' horse yez All Frank's party ran for it with Hampton. can find that isn't trained to make the same Frank came last, having paused to say a parting playful leps as the yeller divil was up to. Faith, word to Benedict, the ranchman. it was all nuts for me. I never enjoyed a ride But now the vigilantes came charging back again. since I left the ould sod so well before. But it's and as Frank Reade ran for the tally-no one of the of the bearded rascal, who sought by means of false not a nagur I'm afther allowin' to guy me, all the vigilantes skillfully cast a lasso at him. same," said Barney, and he pulled off his coat and The succeeding moment Frank was jerked back-young inventor made a sudden forward bound. rolled up his sleeves.

"Hole on, dar! I done feel de blcod gittin' hot inside ob my head. Hole on, Irish, fo' I butts. Dat am de only way dat dis coon kin cool off his system, when he once done got his fightin' heat on!" warned Pomp.

just then.

gover whence the fugitive had come, and with tor. shots of triumph they advanced toward the ranch. All realized that Frank was in great danger. The A dark, evil face, beardless save for a brigandish numbering nearly a score, came riding in. vengeance upon some one. Frank Reade believed that a conflict between the It was clear that the vigilantes concluded on his head.

an ordinary vehicle. tric cane in his hand.

can," said the ranchman.

"Yes," assented Dr. Vaneyke.

ther until you state your business!" The vigilantes drew rein.

belligerent couple.

We can distance your foes. Come, Pomp and Barney," said Frank.

Then they started to retreat, accompanied by the he had in mind.

Instantly the vigilantes dashed forward, circled part of the country." electric tally-ho, thus cutting off their retreat.

"Too late! We have delayed this move too long!" cried Dr. Vaneyke.

desired to be sure I was right first," assented fallen behind the vigilantes, rode up. Frank.

At the same time he and his comrades ranged name. his cowboys also rode up to their support.

"We want that fellow, and we mean ter hang him as their glances met. ter er thar'll be trouble," cried out the leader of cealed his excitement, and let his eyes drop from in' bets," replied the leader of the vigilantes. the vigilantes.

have been fooled. He bought the horse he rides, ed like a rough miner, just down from the moun- with their prisoner. and the fellow who set you on his trail is the man tain mines. who is guilty," retorted Benedict.

I'll be!" cried Barney.

trical cane into Hampton's hand and whispered low we are hunting a few days ago in Red Bend. the noble work you have accomplished during some instructions in his ear.

Hampton. His hoss stumbled and he fell behind," indignantly. said one of the vigilantes.

from the timber.

But a climax was now reached in the thrilling of the tally-ho.

scene.

"Forward, men! Charge altogether, and we'll who denounced him the lie.
snatch Hampton away from this gang!" cried the He saw that both his devoted servitors wore their It was not now necessary that Hampton should "vigilantes' leader, and they made a rush.

bloodshed, and in a moment the fugitive was alone the days of chivalry. on his horse among his deadly foes. His left hand Frank understood, of course, that the devoted party. clutched the reins; in his right he brandished couple meant to make an attempt to extricate him The cowboys gave our friends a loud, rousing Frank Reade's wonderful electrical cane.

to rear and plunge, and snort and wheel and dash rescue without assistance. Suddenly he caught away, despite all the efforts of their riders. It Barney's eye, and gave him a covert signal. seemed as though the horses of the vigilantes had The Irishman understood the sign and he gone mad. Screaming, snorting, they tore away whispered to Pomp:

in every direction over the plains.

ror seized them.

But Frank Reade understood it all.

strange conduct of the animals. No wonder they sah." were wild with terror.

ventor, and he blew a shrill whistle. Instantly retorted:

ride widout a nagur givin' av him the guy. Shure, Beckbridge set the tally-ho in motion, and the ward and surrounded by the enraged vigilantes.

CHAPTER X.

A VILLAIN UNMASKED.

A fight was imminent, but a diversion occurred reached the electric coach. In a moment they gained transpired. the interior of the tally-ho, and then, glancing The bushy beard the fellow wore came off in Fully forty mounted men dashed out of the back, they saw what had befallen the young inven- Frank's grasp, and with it the bandage about his cowboys and vigilantes was imminent. He ran Frank was a friend of Hampton. None of the Frank had recognized him as he rode up. back to the electric tally-ho, gave Beckbridge some lynchers knew who Frank was, and they took the Now, as the unmasked villain sprang backward instructions, and then returned carrying his elec-tally-ho, which had now come to a stand still, for and uttered a yell of rage as he sought to draw a

We must try diplomacy, and avoid a fight if we against Frank, not only because he was evidently man of a hundred crimes stands before you!" a friend to Hampton, but also by reason of the fact that he was a stranger.

Benedict ran his horse forward and shouted: ran for the coach with Hampton are his gang, at the head of his robber band. Halt! You are on my land. Advance no fur- We've lost a good many head o' stock, an' more than one up-country man has been wiped out kin run down his coach outfit sooner or later, if we darted forward and seized the villain. "Come, we will gain the electric tally-ho. In it set out fer it," said the leader of the vigilantes.

Just then Benedict rode up and addressed the trated him. lynchers sternly.

"Men," said he. "The man Hampton I know been duped. doctor. But the vigilantes caught sight of Hamp- to be an honest man, and the gentleman you have Frank was applauded, and, having bound the ton, and they seemed to comprehend the purpose made a captive is Frank Reade, Jr., the great road agent hand and foot upon the back of his between Frank Reade and his companions and the and the leader of the vigilantes asked of the young Nobody need fear of meetin' Injun Ralph on the inventor, as he regarded him with new interest: stage roads of Dakota arter to-day," said the "Are you really Frank Reade, Jr.?"

Frank was about to reply in the affirmative when But the road agents' chief was strangely cool "We should have acted more promptly. But I the man who had accused Hampton and who had and calm in the face of his peril.

saw the accuser give a sudden and violent start sneeringly.

the face of the last arrival.

"Ha!" he exclaimed in a voice vibrating with dict: "Whoop! It's a ruction we'll have soon. A shin-fierce exultation, as he shifted a red handkerchief "I think I shall now continue my journey." dy wid a big S, begob, or it's mightily disappointed which he had tied about his head as a bandage. "I see ye have caught one o' the pals o' the hoss- if you are bent on going on I will not attempt to Frank Reade quietly slipped his wonderful elec- thief an' murderer. I saw this chap with the fel- detain you. However, let me congratulate you on They were pals, you bet."

"Hello! Here comes the feller who accused "You lie and you know it!" thundered Frank "Don't mention it," said Frank, modestly.

moment or so later, Barney and Pomp leaped out cals unhung," replied Benedict.

fine chain armor over their clothing. The burn-continue his flight, for his innocence was pro-So suction was the onset that the men about ished steel flashed in the brilliant sunlight, and claimed. So Frank and his friends said good-bye Hampton vere driven back. They hesitated about Pomp and Barney looked like gallant knights of to the man they had saved and the ranchman, and from his situation of peril.

Then suddenly the horses of the vigilantes began But the inventor hoped to accomplish his own sending back an answering shout.

bate the heads av' the rascals."

given him, Hampton had dashed hither and you dance the old Virginny breakdown when I gits That night, however, a halt was made on the open among the vigilantes, touching their horses with among 'em. Lor', but de ole doctor done charge our prairie, and the road had been left behind for some the electric care as he followed his erratic course. armor chuck full of 'lectricity, an' I specs will make hours. Each horse received a shock as the cane came in dem trash think dat we un's am two fuss-class Frank directed Pomp and Barney to build a fire contact with it, and this was the secret of the thunder and lightnin' storms sot on legs; yes, and get supper.

"Of course he'll deny it. I say, men, let's stop his wind. There's nothing like making an example of such fellows once we get hold of them."

The speaker and most of the vigilantes had now dismounted.

As the words last above recorded passed the lips evidence to condemn Frank Reade to death, the

The lasso which encircled his neck Frank at the same moment cast aside, and before any one present anticipated his purpose, or could lift a hand to prevent it, he reached his lying accuser.

The succeeding moment Frank clutched the villain Dr. Vaneyke, Hampton, Barney and Pomp by his bushy beard, and then a startling surprise head. The ranchman blew a whistle, and his cowboys, vigilantes were enraged and anxious to vent their mustache, was revealed, and it was also seen that but the stump of the fellow's right ear remained weapon, Frank shouted: "The vigilantes outnumber us two to one. The suspicions of the vigilantes were aroused "Behold Indian Ralph the road agent! The

There were men present who had seen the face of Indian Ralph when it was not concealed by the On the vigilantes until they were quite near. "I reckon this chap and the other fellers who mask he always were when he was in Indian garb

"He is Indian Ralph!" cried several voices. Then a rush was made for the road-robber.

by the robbers. Let us make an example of this But he sprang away, and he might have escaped Then Frank whispered to the fugitive and the one if we can't get Hampton. Though I reckon we had not Barney and Pomp, at a word from Frank,

He received a double electric shock that pros-

The vigilantes were now convinced that they had

American inventor, who has just arrived in this horse, the lynchers set out with him for the timby the group of cowboys, and ranged themselves The name of Frank Reade made an impression, "We'll hang him as a warning to all his kind.

leader of the party.

"You're sure of your prey, you devils, but The fellow heard Benedict pronounce Frank's there's many a slip between the cup and the lip. I'll stake you an even hundred in Uncle Sam's themselves beside Hampton. The ranchman and The eye of the inventor was upon him, and he good gold coin I don't hang to-day!" he said,

"You're game; but your bravado won't do ye fer hoss-stealin' an' murder. Surrender the crit- A thrill traversed Frank's frame. But he con- no good. Better say yer prayers instead of mak-

Frank Reade and his friends watched the vig-"No, sir. We know he's an honest man. You The latter was bearded to the eyes, and he look- ilantes ride away until they entered the timber

When they had vanished Frank said to Bene-

"I wish you could longer remain my guest. But your short stay."

"But I must. Such deeds are not to be passed Meanwhile Frank's friends in the coach had de-over lightly. Why, man, you have saved a precious Just then a solitary horseman was seen coming cided how they would assist him. Suddenly, a human life, and unmasked one of the greatest ras-

> "Betther say greatest rascal hung, for, begob, the Frank saw them approaching as he gave the man laddybuck is no doubt takin' a swing in mid-air

the tally-ho moved away with all the inventor's cheer, and away they went waving their hats and every direction over the plains.

"Sure masther Frank wants us to wait a bit. A MESSAGE FROM AN UNKNOWN—AN INDIAN SURThe vigilantes were amazed, a superstitious ter- Begob we must halt, but it's mesel' as is achin' to Both stopped, and Pomp replied: THE tally-ho made good time for some hours. Obeying the instructions the young inventor had "Gollie, I'se gwine ter make dem white trash The route led along a coach road leading north.

Then he and Yank Beckbridge, the old trapper, But when Frank gave the fellow who brought took their guns and sauntered away toward a "Now for the tally-ho!" shouted the young in-the false accusation against him the lie the latter prairie island, or clump of timber, standing isolated upon the clear plain.

when they beheld a riderless horse come dashing war-whoops of the Sioux Indians-rang out over take to clane a nagur white."

into sight and advance toward them.

"Frank gave a "horse whistle"—such as is usually employed to call horses—and the coming horse tion of the timber. heeded the sound, thus showing he was familiar Turning, Frank and Beckbridge beheld a thrillwith it.

until he halted near Frank and the old trapper. tangs, had suddenly emerged from the cover of the All animals confided in Frank, seeming to know prairie island. instinctively that he was their friend.

ventor had grasped the horse by the bit.

soned with a lady's saddle, and as he examined ing cabin of the settler, as previously recorded. further, his glance fell upon a folded bit of paper | The sudden outburst of yells with which the Insecured in the buckle of the stirrup-straps.

Frank hastened to remove the paper, and un-ened the white horse Frank was leading.

from a daily newspaper.

But it contained a thrilling message for all that, bridle rein. Upon the blank margin of the newspaper was the following lines of writing inscribed in a delicate white horse, and Frank and the old trapper broke female hand with a pencil, and undoubtedly in into a run. great haste:

Frank read the writing on the fragment of newspaper aloud to Beckbridge, thus:

that he may bring help to save my-"

The writing ended abruptly, as though the writer rapidly.

had been interrupted.

"I consait thet a darter o' Mother Eve are in dan-cried: ger, an' I sort o' reckon there's some red deviltry a-goin' on in this emijit neighborhood. There's a sort o' loadstun in my natur that draws me ter Injun diffikilties, an' I guess I'll make a scout inter the timber," said the old trapper.

"We set out to procure game, such as a deer or an antelope. But we must now think only of serv-

Frank.

"Good. But this here are one o' ther kind o' speculations about which ye want to go easy. We're right in the heart o' the worst Sioux country. Old Sitting Bull's village ain't fur off, I reckon, an' the this speakin' see no likely way o'doin'," said Beckchances are that there's more than one pair o' eyes in the head o' a redskin a-pipin' us off frum the cover of yonder timber at this blessed moment."

near?" said Frank, starting.

"I do, sartin, an' I'll prove it to ye. This hoss ain't run far. Well, jist step around on this side o ther critter. There, that 'll do."

"Heavens, you are right. A Sioux arrow is buried in the pad of the saddle!" exclaimed Frank, aim. as he saw what the keen observant man of the plains had noted as the horse came dashing up.

"Yas, an' two or three cuts where Injun bullets have grazed the citter's back," said Beckbridge.

He indicated some slight wounds on the flank of the horse as he spoke, and then placing the finger of his right hand on the palm of his left, and making the pantomime of checking off each statement been witnessed by Dr. Vaneyke, Barney and they seized them. in a way which was peculiar to himself, Beckbridge Pomp. went on.

cipher. Fust, there was a hoss an' a gal-fust pint. intense solicitude written on their faces, Barney severe that the Sioux leaped clean off his pony. A Second, there was Injuns_second pint. Third, and Pomp breathlessly watched the thrilling race more surprised set of redmen were never seen. there was a hoss without the gal, an' Injun with for life in which Frank Reade and Beckbridge The way they scudded off howling, as fast as the gal. There's ther hull thing 'cordin' to the rule were engaged. o' three, an' it's just as plain as the back end o' the The doctor meanwhile hastily started the tally-Barney fairly yell with delight. spellin' book, where all the pages are torn out."

"Yes, and we must rescue the captive." "Correct. Thar ye hev' the final answer o' the But we have seen that the savages came on too a volley of musketry, was heard. 'sample. But if we go on ter that timber right swiftly for the accomplishment of the doctor's The electric tally-ho seemed to belch forth fire now, you'll stop an Injun bullet an' so will I. My purpose. Injun load-stone are a pulling me fer that timber Soon a small army of the red demons were bemighty hard now, so I know there's redskins a tween the buffalo-wallow in which Frank and and it was, indeed, a success.

lurkin' on the edge of it."

self, friend Beckbridge, but I understand you."

"I'm powerful glad to hear it," replied the trap-termined attack upon the electric tally-ho. per dryly.

question I read in yer face," he went on.

"Right," Frank assented.

"Well now I'll tell ye. We hev got to lay low Then, while we leave the others to look out for the ages a blow they will not forget. I see that a de-cleared the way of the foe. until it gets dark, and that ain't agoin' ter be long. tally-ho, which the reds may try ter capture, you cisive battle is impending," replied the doctor. an' I'll go out ter circumvent whatsomever diviltry ther reds are up to."

"I see the wisdom of your plan," assented

Frank.

"Sartin you do. Now let's go back to the tallyho.

They turned and were retracing their steps, Frank leading the beautiful white horse, who had the box marked "W. R. B." "But it's rainin' young inventor's friends. brought its mistress' message, when all at once lead outside!" tide was rudely broken in upon.

But not far had Frank and his comrade gone A chorus of loud, fierce yells—the blood-curdling the plains.

The appalling sound emanated from the direc-

ing sight under the fading light of day.

Gradually then the animal slackened his speed A band of Sioux, mounted upon their hardy mus-

They numbered two score hideously painte He had no difficulty in approaching the trem- braves, who were on the war-path, and bent upon down came Barney's end on the Irishman's toes. bling, panting runaway, and soon the young in-exterminating the whites, or driving them from the hunting grounds of Montana.

Then he saw that the horse, which was snow- Of course these were not the Indians Frank white and a remarkably fine animal, was capari- Reade and his party had encountered at the burn- av me it's time to kick!" roared Barney.

dians signalized their rush from the timber, fright-was compelled to relinquish his hold upon the per!" cried the doctor.

Then away through the gloaming dashed the another time, nagur," said Barney.

It was now with them a race for life.

the savages. But the speed of the mounted men marked W. R. B., and took out four sections of "I send Snowflake, my horse, away, with the hope of the Sioux band of course exceeded that of the what looked like rifle barrels set in a frame. These two whites on foot.

The Sioux gained on Frank and Beckbridge very where there were rows of loop-holes.

"This way, Frank. There's small buffler waller cess." yonder, an' I reckon we'll git inter it an' try to hold ther reds off a spell."

They changed their course, and a moment subsequently they were in a depression where a waterhole, now dry, had been wallowed by a bison.

Scarcely had Frank and his comrade gained the I am with you to the end, Beckbridge," replied making a pandemonium upon the plain with their electricity. This hopper full of bullets is the selfexultant yells.

our scalps or we give 'em the slip, which I doan't at doctor. bridge.

"My friends will not desert us. The tally-ho is a fort on wheels, and just the thing for an Indian "Do you really think concealed savages are battle on the plains," said Frank hopefully.

Then, with their repeating rifles, Frank and the old trapper opened fire on the Sioux, while showers of bullets and arrows flew over their heads and all around them, tearing up the dirt and dashing it skins, and make a charge on them with some hope in their faces so they could scarcely see to take

CHAPTER XII.

HEMMED IN BY THE INDIANS.

ho. He meant to run the vehicle for ward, so that But suddenly the tally-ho began to move again. Frank Reade and the old trapper might reach it.

Beckbridge had sought refuge and the tally-ho.

"You have a singular way of expressing your- While a part of the Sioux band surrounded the ho was guided.

"Be gob!" cried Barney, as the doctor brought before it. "Now what are we agoin' ter do? That's ther the coach to a stand-still in the midst of the howl- The discharge of the electric battery was deing Sioux. "Fat's the matther wid the loikes av structive and many of the Indians' ponies dashed ye? Sure an' why don't ye charge on wid the tal- riderless away from the scene of conflict. ly-ho til the rescue av Masther Frank?"

certain box marked "W. R. B," which was among ahead through the window of the coach. the supplies and scientific appliances in the locker. They were anxiously trying to catch a glimpse

The Irishman and the darky hastened to obey of Frank and Beckbridge. the doctor, and meanwhile the bullets of the They saw the howling Sioux circling around the tally-ho like hail.

"Whoop!" cried Barney, lifting on his end of A dread fear took possession of the minds of the took a baff, Irish!" said Pomp.

"Sure, and it's more than a lead storm it would "Do yer mean to cast 'sinuations, sah?"

"Don't ye swear at me, nagur!"

"Golly, I didn't swear." "Yes, yer did! Begob, fer two pins I'd bate the head av yez!"

"Am dat so? I'll gib yer three."

"Worra! Oh! the divil fly away wid the nagur I He's broke the big toe av me."

Pomp had given his end of the box a jerk, and

"Bedad, it's addir' insult til injury the nagur is doin'. I'll bate the head av him! I'm a paceful

mon, but, begob, whin a nagur murthers the loikes

Then off came his coat.

"Keep yer close on!" cried Pomp, tantalizingly. "Here, here, you rascals, your master is in danger! Quick! Quick! Open the box, or we may be folding it he found it was merely a fragment torn The animal gave a tremendous leap, and Frank too late to save Frank Reade and the old trap-

"Begob, that's so. Sure, an' I'll settle wid ye

"I'se right at home, sah, all de time. You won't have to get no search warrant ter found dis chile, I done tole yer," replied Pomp.

They knew they must reach the taily-ho ahead of Then in a moment or so they opened the box were quickly set up on each side of the coach

"Now then," cried the doctor when early of the Seeing they were to be run down, Beckbridge tubes projected through a loop-hele, we shall see if Frank Reade's new scientific appliance is a suc-

As he spoke the doctor attached a couple of wires to a series of strange-looking clock-work compartments at the ends of the queer racks.

"This is a Winchester Repeating Battery. Something entirely new. Winchester rifles of sixing the poor woman, who is the author of this note. wallow when the Sioux began to circle about them, gun plan improved. The discharging power is teen shot repetition, each to work on the Gatling feed of the rifles. When the electricity is applied a "Treed, by powder! My Injun load-stun tells fusillade can be kept up for as long a time as bulme ther reds will be drawed to us until they raise lets are poured into the hopper," continued the

"Begob, it's like a coffee-mill!" exclaimed

Barney.

"Dat's so, an' mighty strong coffee it done make," assented Pomp.

But a moment or two had actually been consumed in getting out the battery and arranging it. "Now all is ready. We will open fire on the red-of success," said Dr. Vaneyke. But now the Indians, growing bolder and bolder, came riding right up to the tally-ho.

There were a couple of metal hand-rails around the top of the vehicles.

These rails the doctor had already charged full of electricity.

The Indians attempted to board the coach, and THE charge of the Indians from the timber had as the hand-rails afforded the only hold for them

But they didn't hold on.

We cannot depict their excitement and anxiety. Every Indian who touched the hand-rails re-"What's the conundrum? Ter me it's plain ter With nerves tense with suspense and alarm, and ceived a shock, and in some instances it was so they touched the electric rods, made Pomp and Then a rattling detonation, like the discharge of and smoke, and the bullets fell in a deadly shower. Frank Reade's new electric battery was at work

Straight for the buffalo wallow the electic tally-buffalo-wallow, the remainder inaugurated a de- And as the wonderful vehicle came in and on over the plains the savages fled in consternation

On, on, like a cyclone, resistless swept the tally-"I mean to open the way and deal these sav- ho, now that the rain of death it belched forth

Through the cloud of powder smoke and the Then he directed Pomp and Barney to get out a gathering shadows Dr. Vaneyke and Pomp peered Indians pattered against the metallic plating of the buffalo-wallow. They heard the report of many rifle shots.

They thought that Frank and Breckbridge must the peaceful quietude of the vast solitude at even- "Yah! dat's so. You better done gone out and have exhausted their supply of ammunition. In that case the very worst was to be anticipated.

their capture was sure. A cold sweat started upon throat, and was holding a pistol at his head. the doctor's brow.

Barney groaned and Pomp evinced his despair back toward the electric tally-ho.

by muttering:

machinery of the vehicle, and its speed could not man was really more frightened than hurt. be further augmented.

were seen riding away uttering wild, exultant yells explained Barney.

that indicated a victory. And on shot the tally-ho.

pression in the plain was empty.

They had expected to find the dead bodies of "Let me put a head on the blackguard. Sure of their beloved master. doctor's mind. "Frank Reade and his old com-foot!" cried Barney. rade have been carried away into captivity by the He would have fallen upon the redskin tooth "Begob, an' yez will find this the funniest bit av Indians!" cried the doctor.

CHAPTER XIII.

A DETERMINED REDSKIN.

THE doctor stated the actual truth when he said "No. But do you not understand that this In-doubled him up like a jack-knife. ried away into captivity by the Indians.

beroically defended their position in the buffalo ter Frank, an' I done spec dat de docthinks he'll one he had just administered to Barney. Wallow

With their repeating rifles they held their red foemen off until their ammunition failed.

Then, when they had fired their last shot, they yielded to despair.

The red demons swooped down upon them, and, Injun is a-gwine to help us." after a hand to hand fight they were overpowered "I will explain my idea. It is this: Since the and dragged away.

and they were hurried swiftly away.

When the electric tally-ho arrived at the buffalo some village." wallow the Sioux who had made Frank and Beckbridge captives were entering the timber at a considerable distance.

The doctor and his companions knew that they eould not pursue the Indians into the woods with the tally-ho. made, and so they did not follow the red marauders doctor," said Barney admiringly.

further. Wallow was an evidence of the heroic and deter-deadly peril, and it rests with us alone to rescue mined resistance which the young inventor and them. The task is one not to be undertaken light-Beckbridge had made.

fallen under the bullets of the two white heroes. |appliances we have brought with us."

av a ruction as a mon could wish for that Masther questioning the red hathen thief o' the worruld, Frank had here. Faith, an' it's sorry I am that I said Barney. missed it," said Barney, regretfully, as he surveyed the scene of recent conflict.

allers done spilin' fer a fight. 'Spec's you oughter He now led his captive before the doctor.

head 'bout now," said Pomp.

Barney and the darky had got out of the tallyho, and they were walking about among the dead replied the Indian, with evident pride. Indians.

Just as Pomp spoke last Barney uttered a whoop, ters." and made a jump straight up into the air.

"Worra! Worra! I'm stabbed!" roared Bar-man.

ney, dancing about like mad.

Pomp.

ney?" the doctor asked.

"The red nagur cut me root. Sure an in the red nade at all, at all!" answered Barney, and he "We shall see."
"Be gob, an' it's mesel' as 'ull make the red na-"The red nagur cut me foot. Sure an' he ain't savage, contemptuously. cumbent form of an Indian.

Pomp made a dash at the savage.

Then a surprising occurrence took place. The seemingly dead Sioux sprang to his feet and said Pomp.

started to run. Pomp leaped after him, shouting:

"Hole on dar, Mr. Redskin! I'se got a mighty big bone ter pick wid youse!"

"Catch the blackguard, Pomp! Catch the red heathen what cut me foot, an' begob, I'll be yer friend for loife, so I will!" shouted Barney.

Pomp was a good runner, and he gave the Indian a fine chase.

had stumbled into a pitfall on the plains.

evinced his surprise and solicitude by exclaiming: tery," replied the doctor. "What can have happened now?"

"Begob, and they only stumbled intil another buffalo wallow!" cried Barney, as the succeeding moment he again saw Pomp and the Indian.

"Whoop! Give me black nagurs agin' red ivery day in the week, an' twice on Sunday, begob. guard!" added Barney, delightedly.

If they were left without the means of defense Just then he saw Pomp had the Indian by the will loosen the tongue av the red nagur," said

"Po' Mars Frank am a goner dis time, I 'spec." found that he had received a cut on the instep. "shocks." All the electricity was already turned on to the But the wound was a mere scratch, and the Irish- But the doctor did not propose to liberate the Suddenly the Indians about the buffalo-wallow and gave me a dig wid his knife as I passed him," far too wily for that.

plied a plaster to Barney's wound, and then it was battery, around each of the Indian's ankles. The buffalo-wallow was reached, and then the seen that a rifle ball had creased the head of the This the two jolly comrades hastened to attempt Frank Reade and the old trapper, but their re-an' I'll bate the ugly mug av him. Faith, an' I'll But Mr. Sioux objected. mains were not there. The truth dawned upon the tache him not to cut an Irish gentleman in the "White men heap fools. No make Santah serve and nail, but the doctor interposed.

"Hold, Barney!" he cried.

"Fat! begob, an' will yez be afther tellin' me to the ankle of the Indian. shake hands wid the red nagur, I dunno?" said "Ugh!" grunted the savage, contemptuously, Barney indignantly.

that Frank Reade and his comrade had been car-dian may be of great service to us," said the "Yah, yah, yah!" roared Pomp. doctor.

make de red nigger help us," cried Pomp.

the doctor.

"Then, begob, the Injun is saved!" said Barney.

Indians have captured Frank Reade and the trap-Their captors hastily mounted them on ponies, per, in accordance with the custom of the Sioux, at escape and obeyed the doctor's command, they will, no doubt, hurry our friends away to

" Dat's a fac."

"And it may be difficult to find the Indian vil-

"Widout a guide, begob," said Barney. "So it's my idea to make the Indian Pomp has captured act as our guide."

The doctor smiled as he rejoined seriously: The scene of the desperate fight at the buffalo "The lives of our friends and comrades are in ly. The powerful Sioux tribe will be pitted against

All around the buffalo wallow the ground was us, and we must place our greatest reliance on the should be subjugated. strewn with the bodies of the redskins who had wonderful electric tally-ho, and the scientific pelled to aid in the deliverance of Frank Reade "Worra! worra! Sure, an' it was as fine a bit "Thrue fer ye, docthur. But let's be afther

"Yes, I propose to do so."

Pomp had bound the hands of the Indian behind "You'se de biggest fool I ebber seed. You'se his back, and put a noosed rope around his neck.

be glad dat you'se got de scalp on de top ob yer "Do you understand English?" the doctor asked.

"Ugh! Santah know heaps white man's talk," thing surprising to behold.

Santah heap brave. No help white keeping time for a breakdown. "Ugh!

"Gollie, Irish hab done gone crazy!" exclaimed Well, if you have made up your mind not to assist cried Pomp.

us we shall have to find means to make you "So it really seems. What is the matter, Bar-change your determination." "White man much talk, say little," replied the Indian.

gur serve us!" cried Barney.

"Gollie! I'se de one to took charge ob dat. done cotch the red nigger an' he am my meat," taken off," panted the exhausted savage.

"Wait, I will try the Indian further," replied the doctor.

Then he again addressed the Indian:

"Where will the Sioux take their captives?"

"To the village of Sitting Bull."

"Where is that?"

"Where the white man will never find it." "You shall lead us to the village of Sitting Bull." All at once both vanished, just as though they "Never. White man may kill Santah, him no the ankles of the Indian. guide them."

Barney uttered a cry of alarm, and the doctor "We shall see. Barney get out the hand-bat-tor demanded.

CHAPTER XIV.

TACK.

"BE the shamrock so green, doctur, yez never "And you will guide us there and make no at-Faith, an' Pomp has surrounded the redskin black-axed the loikes av me to do anything that was tempt to betray us to your people?" mare plazin' til mesel'. Sure, an' it's the battery "Yes, Santah so promises."

Barney.

In a moment Pomp began to march the Indian Then he hastened to the electric tally-ho, and presently returned with a small battery, such as Then the doctor examined Barney's foot, and are ordinarily used in public exhibitions to give hands of the murderous redskin in order to enable "Ye see, doctor, the red nagur just rached out him to grasp the handles of the battery. He was

Instead, he directed Barney and Pomp to wind Pomp came up with the Indian as the doctor ap- a wire, which he attached to each handle of the inmates of the electric vehicle saw that the de-Indian and knocked him senseless. His comrades very willingly. The devoted fellows were entirely had left him for dead beside the buffalo wallow. ready to undertake anything looking to the rescue them by tying box to him feet," he remonstrated.

a box yez iver tackled, Mr. Injun," remarked Barney, as he attempted to secure the wire about and then he gave Barney a sudden kick that

But the next moment his mirth was charged to The young inventor and the old trapper had "Gollie, Irish, dat am so. We's got to save Mas-grief, as the Indian dealthim a kick similar touthe

Pomp went sprawling, and though his arms were "You have the idea exactly, Pomp," assented still securely bound behind his back, the Indian started to run.

The doctor, however, promptly leveled his rifle ' Dat's right. Now we'se got to find out how the at the Indian, and shouted:

"Halt, or I'll drop you in your tracks!" The Indian knew that it was death to go on, and so he reluctantly abandoned his foolhardy attempt

Barney and Pomp were on their feet in the twinkling of an eye, as one may say, and the way in which the irate pair west for that belligerent redskin was a sight worth seeing.

In a moment they had him on the ground, and despite his stubborn efforts at resistance, he was now unable to foil his captors' purpose.

Very soon the wires attached to the handles of They saw that immediate pursuit could not be "Faith an' yez have a head on your shoulders, the electric battery were secured about the Indian's lankles, as the doctor desired.

> The good old man, in the great humanity of his kindly nature, certainly had no desire to inflict unnecessary punishment or torture upon the treacherous Indian. But he was fully resolved that he > and the old trapper, was sufficient to make the good doctor regard any means for the attainment of the desired end as justifiable and right.

> As soon as the wires were attached around the ankles of the Indian, the doctor turned on the electricity, and then ensued a ludicrous scene. The Indian began to execute a dance such as > probably was never witnessed before. The way he jumped about and yelled and howled was some-

And for Barney and Pomp, the redskin's exhibi-"Good. Your knowledge will facilitate mat-tion was great fun. They laughed in delight, and Pomp began to pat his hands as though he was

"How yer done like dat? Go in fo' de cake. "Ah, you have overheard our conversation, eh? Heel an' toe, hoe it down, Indjun! Yah! yah!"

> "Ugh! ugh! Santah take all white men's scalp! Burn at stake. Make run gantlet!" yelled the

> But the electricity was running through his limbs at lightning speed, and at last he fell down. "Tell me where Sitting Bull's village is and promise to conduct us there!" said the doctor.

"Ugh! Injun do that. Let the lightning-box be

The doctor answered sternly:

"The white man will release the Indian, but if he speaks with a crooked tongue he will turn the lightning snakes, which he carries in the coach yonder, loose upon him, and they are a thousand times worse than the 'medicine box.'"

"Santah will speak with a straight tongue," replied the Indian.

"Release him," said the doctor, and Barney and Pomp made haste to remove the wires from about 1

"Now, where is Sitting Bull's village?" the doc-

Santah pointed away to the south-west beyond the growth of timber, in which the Sioux had disappeared with Frank and Beckbridge, and ne said: "The village of the great chief, Sitting Bull, is the village of Sitting Bull?"

THE POWER OF ELECTRICITY—AN UNEXPECTED AT- yonder among the mountains, where the white man has never gone."

taken prisoners shall be brought to him."

The doctor was not confiding enough to think and attack. for a moment that the Indian would keep faith "Shut up, nagur!" cried Barney, and he poured self as is afther thinkin' this is a likely bit av a spot with him if a favorable opportunity for treachery a small quantity of whisky down the doctor's for an Injun camping place. Let's go along like presented itself. But he meant to watch the Indian throat. The result was admirable.

so closely as to render it impossible for him to beIn a very short space of time the doctor revived, may come ontil the nagurs before we know it." tray his trust.

"Very good. You will guide us on the trail of again. the doctor.

startling incident.

sidiously approaching our friends.

Four Sioux scouts had been crawling back cover. oward the buffalo wallow from a depression in the The blue ethereal vault above was devoid of almost reached the electric tally-no.

The stealthy red trailers had discovered that ing world below. Santah had been left alive upon the scene of re- Afar the prairie was alight, and upon its level cent conflict and that he had fallen into the hands surface objects were readily discernible with sur-of the whites.

They came now like serpents, so silent and still, bent upon a surprise. They hoped to slay the timber, and already obtained a good start on their FRANK READE and Yank Packbridge, the old whites, rescue Santah and capture the wonderful supposed journey to the village of Sitting Bull, or trapper, had not finally abandoned all hope of coach.

But suddenly, when the four warriors were very the doctor. near, Barney chanced to catch a glimpse of a feath- "It is me own idea, begob, that the red nagurs must have failed them. ered head as it appeared for an instant above the have fled long ago," said Barney. The two brave and chivalrous spirits were not tall grass.

he had brought from the coach, and blazed away moonlight observations, and which he had himself main in captivity among the Sioux. In the prairie at the place where the head of the Indian had van-constructed. ished.

shrill and terrible, and the four warriors made a all directions. dash at the whites.

They discharged their rifles as they came.

Quick as thought itself the doctor grasped Santah satisfactorily answered. and held him before him as a shield. Barney and down in the grass.

One of the Indians fell under Pomp's deadly aim

Pomp and Barney.

As if to intensify the thrilling scene, at this su- a large band of mounted Indians. preme moment Santah, with a desperate effort, succeeded in freeing his hands. An instant and soon the tally-ho reached the plainly defined trail was called Eve. She it was who had written the the sinewy hands of the redskin were fastened of the Indians, which led in the direction of the note which Frank had found secured to the saddle upon the throat of the old doctor, and the murder-band he had sighted. ous savage was strangling the good old man.

CHAPTER XV.

"MEN OF FIRE."

den attack upon the doctor, and as may well be "No, and so I have kept the tally-ho far enough horse away at full speed, when the Indian guard presumed, they did not leave the aged scientist at behind the Indians thus far to be out of range with came rushing at her. the mercy of the revengeful Indian long.

"Bang, bang!" came the sharp, whip-like crack the doctor answered. of Pomp and Barney's rifles, as they discharged Soon the electric vehicle approached the hills in he told how he had been captured.

them almost simultaneously.

surviving member of the party which had come to chinery and stopped the tally-ho. take the whites by surprise, turned and fled pre- "Golly! I done reckon dat me an' Barney better features. cipitately.

Then Barney and Pomp bounded at the treach-gested Pomp. executing a summary and fatal punishment upon low the tally-no to be drawn into an ambush if we inter ther hands o' the pizeu Sioux varmints." him by the consideration that his life had become can prevent it," said the doctor. of value, as an essential to the trailing of Frank Reade's captors.

Barney bounding at him.

But the instinct of self-preservation remained the night." dominant, and prompted the savage. He flung the "Dat's jess de cheese." half-strangled doctor from him, and as the latter In a few brief moments Barney and Pomp had tion of the lost gold mine once in the possession of

He meant to turn the weapon upon Barney and with phosphorus. Pomp. But as he was in the very act of leveling Startling indeed was the result. it Barney brought his own rifle, which he had In the shadows they seemed like a pair of might better be worritin' our heads about what clubbed, down upon his head with great force.

"Whoop! Begob an' the battle is ours, Pomp, weird, infernal, if you will. doctor's side as Santah, the Sioux, fell and re- of their wits if they see you now," said the doc- pin'-knife at the present time." mained motionless.

"Worra! Worra! But don't be afther tellin' Barney and Pomp each carried a brace of re-ed. me yez are gone dead intirely, doctor?" cried the volvers in their belts, and their rifles were slung The captors of Frank Reade and his eccentric kind-hearted Irishman with real solicitude, ob-upon their backs by means of straps. serving that the old scientist had lost conscious- They shook hands with the doctor, and glided in company with the female captives. ness.

"You's got no sense in dat big head of yours, their preparations had been made. Barney. Deed does yer spec' dat de doctor am Presently the two brave fellows found them- electric tally-ho would be proven by an attempt at agwine ter speak up an' tell yer he am dead?" said selves in a rocky pass. They advanced with cau-their rescue.

"Think you the white captives will be taken to Pomp impatiently, as he proceeded to secure the tion for a mile or more. Then they emerged into fallen Santah.

has spoken, and said that the white men who are the Sioux of his senses transiently, and he did not through which a mountain stream wandered. mean that he should repeat his act of liberation "Begob," Barney whispered to Pomp, as they

and assured his companions that he was all right Pomp assented, and creeping forward cautiously your people and the white prisoners, and if we Santah came to his senses, and then he wa ahead. They advanced further and beheld a thrilsave them you shall be set free unharmed. But placed in the tally-ho, and the others boarded it ling sight. They saw Frank Reade's captors in if we do not find the village of Sitting Bull you The doctor, in the absence of Frank Reade, as camp. And more, they discovered the young inwill never see the lodges of the Sioux again," said sumed the position of chief engineer, and con ventor and Beckbridge bound to stakes, and saw But as these words 'emanated from the lips of ful that they might accomplish the rescue of the evident the savages intended to burn their victims the excellent old scientist there occurred a most celebrated inventor and his comrade in captivity at the stake. the party proceeded on:

While the episode just recorded was transpiring The doctor guided the tally-ho so that they Frank Reade and the old trapper. a great danger unseen and unsuspected was in-skirted the "motte" or island of timber on the Then suddenly two unearthly yells rang out upon prairie, and soon the swift tally-ho was beyond the the night, and into the Indian camp rushed two prairie not far from the timber, and they had now clouds, and the moon reflected its pale light without a single obstacle to shut it off from the sleepprising distinctness, even at a great distance.

"Have the savage captors of our triends left the are they yet concealed in the prairie island?" said escape until they were bound to the torture-stake

Like a flash Barney snatched up his rifle, which produced a field-glass especially designed for they felt that other imperiled whites must now re-

Then the warwhoop of the Indians rang out tor swept the wide expanse of the vast solitude in and his companion found a young and beautiful

ery, and the question he had just propounded was of a settler, who had been making a journey in their

Pomp returned the fire of the Sioux and dropped earth and sky blended, he saw a line of minute only the mother and daughter we have mentioned moving objects.

and the other three dashed at the hiding place of fying power of his wonderful nocturnal telescope, a fate worse than death, and Frank had found an discerned that the objects he had discovered were opportunity to converse with them, and thus ac-

The doctor made known his discovery, and very Their name was Eldridge, and the young girl some hours later the Indians disappeared, and saddle horse, and the girl had taught the intellipresently in the shadowy distance a range of hills gent creature to obey all her commands. with mountains beyond them were developed to She informed Frank that she had been detected the sight of the inmates of the tally-ho.

the naked eye. They cannot have discovered us," Frank assured the fair captive and her mother which the Sioux had disappeared. Then the doc- Beckbridge, the trapper, said little. All his gone on ahead an' make a scout bout now," sug- "The fact are, me pard," said Beckbridge to "Less fix up ter scare de wits out of dem red son?" asked Frank. niggers if we done find 'em," said Pomp to Barney. "Yas; it's in a little buckskin bag hung around sank upon the prairie the desperate Sioux snatched put their fine steel armor on over their clothes the Sioux, we might as well abandon all hope of up the rifle which the aged scientist had dropped. again, and then they rubbed each other all over ever reaching it.'

tor, clapping his hands in delight.

away silently into the shadowy hills when all The inventor and his friend knew the devotion of a valley among the hills. Here there were clumps "Yes, they are sure to go there. The great chief Pomp saw that Barney's blow had only deprived of stunted trees and bushes and open glades > halted in the shadow of a clump of trees, "it's mewe was a-walkin' on eggs, for be the powers we they suddenly made the discovery of camp-fires gratulating themselves on their escape, and hope the Sioux heaping dry wood about them. It was

A moment and the red flames leaped up about terrible blazing specters.

The Indians yelled to each other: "The evil spirits! The evil spirits!"

There was intense excitement and alarm in the Indian camp.

CHAPTER XVI.

AT THE TORTURE-STAKE.

in the Indian camp. Then, however, their hearts

The doctor made no immediate reply, but he only despairing on their own account, but because island, guarded by half a dozen Indians, whom With this powerful night-glass at his eye the doc- Frank Reade's captors joined, the young inventor white maiden of sixteen, and her mother.

The doctor's scrutiny was rewarded by a discov- The female captives were the wife and daughter company with an emigrant train.

Away to the southwest, almost at the line where The train had been surprised and captured, but survived the slaughter of the battle.

Quickly, then, the scientist, aided by the magni- The fair captives felt that they were destined for quire some knowledge of them.

of the white horse.

The tally-ho made good speed on the trail, but The beautiful snowy steed was the maiden's own making "the talking paper," as the savages desig-"Sure, an' we don't want the red nagurs to know nated it, and had barely time to thrust it incom-BUT Barney and Pomp witnessed Santah's sud- we are afther them," said Barney. | plete into the saddle-buckle, and send her trained that he had hoped to render them assistance, and

The two foremost of the Sioux fell, and the one tor turned off the electricity from the driving ma-thoughts seemed centered upon escape, and a look of intense anxiety was discernible on his

Frank in a whisper, "I'm desperate afeard the erous Santah. They were only restrained from "Yes, I approve of that idea. We must not al- map of the lost gold mine trail will now fail

"Have you then the map now on your per-

Probably Santah thought that the moment of his "Be the powers, yez are roight. We'll put on my neck. I'm pretty considerable worrited, pardfinal doom had arrived when he saw Pomp and our suits-of-mail and rub thim all over wid phos-ner. If the pizen Sioux onct set eyes on ter that phorus, so that we'll look like men made of fire in old Injun tracin', they could read the sign-writin' a mighty sight easier than you or I kin.'

"That's true. And with the secret of the loca-

"Perzactly. By powder, I'm clean on pins and needles 'bout ther map. I s'pose, though, we blazing specters, like demons of flame, unearthly, kivers 'em. Scalps are right in the line of ther varmints, an' my Injun loadstun seems ter be ame jewel!" cried Barney, and he sprang to the "Excellent; you will frighten the redskins out drawin' my har right fer the steel of a Sioux scal-Further conversation was at this point interrupt-old comrade hurried them away out of the timber

the comrades they had left behind them in the guard aginst surprise or stratagem, that Frank rescue must be accomplished at once if at all. and Beckridge scarcely dared hope that their res- In a moment the "fire-men" reached the two "Yas. We hev got ter make out what we're tally-ho.

The mp of the route to the lost gold mine had bound the captives.

the hillsind bound them to the stake.

nation, h person. The bloodthirsty old chief de- flight. on to hi village.

were secured to the torture stake, as they reclined away before their very eyes. upon the ground, bound securely hand and foot, Then such a howl of rage as went up from yer fer ter know dat I can't swim," said Pomp, as stream.

futile to attempt to have the white women try to to a degree, recovered from their surprise. cut their bonds or make a rush to escape.

The Indians did not offer to prevent the white the two ladies. women's kindly service. They were allowed to The slight delay made by the Sioux in starting Frank. give the white men all the drink they needed.

Mrs. Eldridge carelessly stood, for a time, so that her daughter, who held a cup of cold water they meant should prove their salvation. to the ched lips of the old trapper, was, for a All four were excellent runners. Despite his ger settin' starin' at us like a graven image. I see hidden from the sight of the watch- years, the hale and robust old trapper kept pace reckon I'll hev to send Santah arter ther gals. ful In as.

was going on between Beckbridge and Eve El- the valley among the hills was left far behind, and whose name are Yank Beckbridge." dridge which none of the Indians, and not even the rocky pass leading to the same was reached. "Ah! You mean to personate Santah among Frank Reade himself, suspected.

sympathy, the two ladies withdrew from the side enemy. He had snatched up his rifle when he

of Frank and the trapper.

bound to the torture-stakes.

Frank Reade was thunderstruck when he saw Beckbridge's hunting shirt and rude garment rudely torn from his back, and yet saw no trace. As the fugitives ran Barney had told Frank anxiously awaited by his comrades. of the buckskin-bag which the trapper wore sus- where he had left the tally-ho. pended about his neck, and which contained the The idea occurred to the inventor that the tally-along the far eastern horizon, when Barney, who map of the lost gold mine.

had lost its value for Frank Reade. He regarded This was a signal long before agreed upon be-the plains, begob, an' they are follerin' our trail!" it as naught, and for his life he would have sur-tween him and the doctor, and Frank knew that rendered all the wealth of the world.

Frank's mind was occupied with serious tally-ho toward him. ance of the map of the lost gold mine little con- From time to time, as the pursuing Sioux came sideration.

The fate which the young inventor was now con- ley at the redskins.

savage cruelty could desire.

The ordeal of fire was about to begin, and al-then they beheld the welcome sight of the tally-ho. But the thought that the new-comers might aid earthly shouts with which Pomp and Barney and impressive sight. heralded their approach.

den hope.

The coming of Pomp and Barney was to Frank ously. Reade and Breckridge like the arrival of two an- As the tally-ho came on the Sioux halted. Then "Do so by all means, doctor, for you know one gels of deliverance.

wrapped in seemingly unearthly flames, Frank them with tears of joy in his eyes. But Santah, Frank. was delighted.

No wonder the Indians shouted: "The evil spirit! The evil spirit!"

The Sioux rushed about in confusion for a mo-tural tones: ment, but Sitting Bull called upon several of his men to e upon the "fire flends."

A fusillade of bullets were discharged at Pomp The tally-ho quickly retreated from the rocky and Barney, but their armor turned the leaden pass and Frank remarked: storm, and they were not harmed.

At first the savages thought the strange looking men were supernatural. Now they were sure of it. emphatically as he said: "Getchemanito, the mighty!" cried a chief, away the fire demons whom the bullets of thy red the white gal."

sons cannot harm!" Barney and Pomp continued to advance. Sud-ladies does you credit," said Frank. denly two balls of fire sped from their hands and exploded among the Sioux.

CHAPTER XVII.

BECKBRIDGE IN DISGUISE.

hurled two of them among the Sioux.

the Indians and uttered the most terrible yells they once more to rescue the young girl and her moth-sented Pomp. were capable of, the two brave fellows made a sud-er," replied Frank. den forward rush.

They well knew that they must not allow the again.

But the sioux were so numerous, so well able to Sioux to recover from their fright, and that the "Let us consider our future plans," said Frank, cue coulcbe accomplished, even by a resort to the captives at the torture-stake. They hurled away agoin' fer ter do in the way o' rescuin' the gals. scientific appliance contained in the wonderful the blazing brush, and with quick, powerful blows Jist at the present speakin' ther Injun loadstun in of their hunting knives severed the cords that my natur are a drawin' powerful towards the pizen tunity must be sought for their rescue.

As theband reached the hills they were met by The succeeding moment the young inventor, with Old Beckbridge shifted an enormous quid of to-

at the sake on the spot instead of being marched warriors understood that the white man's strange ho, just missing Pomp's head by the sixteenth of arts had been employed to blind them to the an inch, to be accurate in measurement. A few moments before Frank and Beckbridge truth, and that their captives were being spirited "Golly, I specs it am lucky dat dis yere coon Eve Eldridge, the beautiful girl captive, who, with those murderous hostiles was seldom heard be- he dodged. her mother, were left unbound, came to them with fore. They were enraged at their own folly in "Colored man, heed ther advice o' one as the camp.

and Beckbridge, and it was recognized as utterly which was inaugurated as soon as the Indians, water."

the chase was of great value to the fugitives.

with the foremost.

The Sioux came bounding on the trail close be- the redskins?" said Frank. Presently, having spoken words of comfort and hind. Beckbridge suddenly halted and faced the fled from his foes, and now he was ready to fire. which we need not dwell ensued. Not many moments subsequently the two cap- The detonation of his weapon was the succeeding tives were seized, and stripped to the waist and moment blended with the reports of two other left the tally-ho and struck into the woods. rifles.

Barney and Pomp also fired on the Sioux. The pursuit was checked for an instant.

ho might traverse the rocky pass. He put his fin-stood watch on the top of the coach, shouted:

hearing it, if possible, his old friend would run the thoughts, and he gave the mysterious disappear- On and on continued Frank and his comrades. THE ENEMIES OF LITTLE SUNSHINE AND BECKwithin range, they wheeled and discharged a volthe rocky pass, the rattle of wheels was heard, and approach of a mounted party of white men.

ready, as mentioned, the red flames began to lick | With the bell ringing, the electric lights blazing on them in the rescue of the white captives in the up the dry brush which had been heaped about the each side of the coach, and flashing from the glass event of Yank Beckbridge's failure, was the first captives when Frank Reade heard the strange un- eyes of the leaders, the tally-ho was a remarkable reflection in their minds.

faithful followers, and his heart gave a leap of sud-battery, which had proven so destructive to them rocky pass. when they made their attack on the coach previ- "Let us take an observation of the strangers > whose presence was explained to Frank and Beck- The doctor placed his field-glass to his eyes, and bridge, sat bolt upright upon the bench in the through it he looked steadily for the space of sevcoach to which he was bound and grunted in gut-eral moments.

men."

"The captive ladies must not be deserted."

"You are a true heart. Your resolve to save the said Barney.

"An' I want ter save ther map of ther treasure Pomp. mine."

"I thought you must have lost it."

when she brought me a drink of water. The gal wint foreninst us." BARNEY and Pomp had brought with them a has the map of the lost gold mine, and we must "Gollie! We do dat. But doan yer make no to find the mine."

presently.

varmints, an' I reckon I can't fight agin ther magnot yet ben discovered on the person of the old The Sioux had gathered about the two white netic 'traction long. Ther fac' is I want ter git artrapper hen the Indians went into camp among women, and Frank understood that another opporter the varmints right off, and start a quiet little retail business in the way o' hair liftin'."

Sitting Bull, the head chief of the great Sioux Beckbridge and the two rescuers, were in full bacco from one side of his jaw to the other, glanced solemnly at vacancy and expectorated a cided that the white men should be burnt to death Then, and not until then, Sitting Bull and his deluge of nicotine out of the window of the tallywan't born ter be drown, Mister Trapper. I'd gib

a drink of clear, cool water from the adjacent standing by and allowing the captives to leave knows whereof he exhorts. Larn ter swim, fer sometimes ther smartest on us can't paddle his At this time the Indians were watching Frank Sitting Bull led the pursuit of our friends, own canoe, an' are obleeged ter take ter ther

"There is wisdom in that remark, friend Beck-But a guard was left to prevent the escape of bridge. But what is your advice now as to how we shall undertake to save the captive ladies?" said

"I consait we shill have ter work some dodge, They thus were enabled to gain a start which an' I've got an idee a-workin' inside o' my brainbox. I am drawed powerful toward the red nig-That are ter say, send the outer Santah with ther During that brief space of time a lot of by-play And so on they went in a swift race for life until inner man a white trapper, ther fust letters of

"Perzactly!" laconically replied the trapper. A discussion of plans and contingencies upon

Then Yank Beckbridge, fully disguised as Santah,

The tally-ho was drawn up in the shadow of a small clump of timber, and there the return of the daring old trapper from his mission of rescue was

The first faint light of a new day was glowing

But now, standing in the shadow of doom, gold gers to his lips and blew a shrill whistle. "Horsemen, an' white men at that, in sight on

CHAPTER XVIII.

BRIDGE.

FRANK READE, and the others with him in the tally-ho, were very much surprised when Barney fronted with was probably the most terrible which But suddenly, when they were almost clear of shouted the announcement of his discovery of the

The white horsemen continued to approach rap-The Sioux thought so. They had a wholesale idly. They rode straight toward the hills, follow-The young inventor recognized the voices of his dread of the tally-ho and the electric repeating-ing the trail the tally-ho had made in entering the through my glass," said Dr. Vaneyke.

Frank Reade and his comrade gained the electric cannot always be sure of the character of white When Barney and the darky came in sight vehicle, and entered it. The old doctor welcomed men here on these far western plains," replied

The doctor's face, however, betrayed emotion.

"Some day great chief Sitting Bull kill all white He seemed to be somewhat startled by what he saw, and his brow clouded.

"What have you discovered?" asked Frank Reade, with some anxiety evinced in his tone. "I do not like the looks of the men who are ap-Beckbridge brought the stock of his rifle down proaching. They seem to me to be a rough, dangerous party whom we would do well to avoid." "Right ye are. Not another mile kin we go in "Bedad, an' the min will go intil the pass on our using the Sioux term for the Indian deity, "send search of the lost gold mine until we have rescued trail. Sure, an' Pomp an' meself kin git back there in the whisk av a nagur's heel foreninst thim,"

"Dat's so. But what fo' we go dar?" questioned

"Faith, an' the head av a nagur is no use to him at all. Don't ye see, ye thick head yez, that the "Not so. I gave it to Eve Eldridge to keep for likes av us might hide in the rocks beside the pass me. She took it off my neck in the buckskin bag and hear fat the blackguards was sayin' whin they supply of explosive fire-balls, and they had now save her, and git back the map before we can hope marks agin dis chile's head. I tell yer, honey, a nigger's head am what he 'pends on. Yah! yah! Then, while they showered the fire-balls among "That's so. But anyhow, I was resolved to try yah! Deed, yer oughter know dat by dis time," as-white men rode into the pass.

Frank Reade and the doctor approved of Bar-The fally-ho was now running on the open plains ney's plan, and having made some preparations, the two old comrades left the tally-ho and crept There they concealed themselves.

were a wild, reckless-looking band. Their faces for one year. If at the expiration of that year, They momentarily expected to see ad hear the would have testified against them in a court of jus- which will be next spring, he failed to repay me outlaws in pursuit of them. Puttingforth their tice, and at the first glance Barney whispered to my five thousand dollars he bound himself to sur-best speed, however, Barney and Pom made ex-Pomp:

"It's an ugly lot they are, sure."

"Right yer am, I'se mos' sure," assented Pomp. adopt the child, as I did agree."
"Listen now, nagur, till we are afther hearin' fat "A singular contract, certainly."

the blackguards are saying."

tion.

overtake our man presently," said a man who rode month's time he would repay my loan." at the head of the band, and who was evidently a half-breed.

Brant Forges?" said another of the party.

ours," responded the half-breed chief.

other. Sunshine as though she was his own child. While against his will, and so I hired you with your Almost exhausted as they were with the race alhe lives, Adam Marvan, your plot against the little band to help me find the old trapper, and secure ready run, Barney and Pomp made another effort.

to baffle you." est in the capture of Beckbridge. First I engaged tally-ho. and the child, Owen Strathmore's little daughter, the rocks, and soon came out on the plains.

earn my gold." "True," replied the half-breed. "But since then I made a discovery. I traced the possession of a secret I have long vowed yet to make mine to Yank Beckbridge, the old trapper."

"Yes." upon the scene of a battle between old Getch- pass where they had overheard the nefarious plot complished only at the expenditure of all their ewan's band and Sioux enemies I found the which revealed the secret of Yank Beckbridge's old strength. old chief of 'the gold mine Indians' of Montana pard-Owen Strathmore-and explained why the They were assisted into the vehicle by Dr. Vandead. It seemed that all the old chief's band had one supreme purpose of his life had become the eyke, for Frank Reade was busy with wrench and perished. I had been on old Getchewan's trail for acquirement of gold, was in truth most startling. hammer, at work in the forward part of the conmany days, for it was the secret of the lost gold To the southward, directing their course straight veyance. mine, which the old Indian held, that I had vowed for the electric tally-ho, Barney and his colored Santah, the Sioux, lay in the bottom of the tallyto have. I searched the dead chief, hoping to dis-comrade saw two parties, composed respectively ho like one dead, and there was a blood-stain on cover a clew, but I found nothing, and then I was of whites and redskins. ready to conclude that I was doomed to failure. The foremost were Yank Beckbridge and Eve As soon as they saw that the ladies had entered But all at once a half-breed-my foster brother- Eldridge and her mother. The Sioux were in pur- the electric tally-ho, Beckbridge, Barney and Pomp who had acted as my advance scout, appeared, suit, and every member of Sitting Bull's band had gave the redskins one farewell volley and then ran dropping from a tree at my feet. It was now eve- joined in the chase. ning. My brother made haste to tell me that the But it was not the sight of the large band of In- The Sioux came to a halt at a safe distance from night before, when he found himself dying, Getch-dians who were advancing toward the electric tally-the tally-ho, which had inspired them with such ewan had revealed the secret of the lost gold mine ho which of itself occasioned the consternation now great dread. to Yank Beckbridge, the trapper, and given him experienced by Frank Reade's devoted servitors. At this juncture Brant Forges and Adam Marvan an old Indian map which would enable him to There was yet another reason for their apprehen-rode out of the adjacent hills. The half-breed and find it. My brother had arrived at the scene as sion that a calamity to the great mechanical triumph the secret enemy of Little Sunshine and her lost the old chief gave the trapper the mine map. The of the inventor's skill was presaged. white trapper and his comrade did not discover A red flag was waving from the top of the elec-rades came in the rear. my brother. He kept well concealed. Since the tric tally-ho.

trailing him," confided in me. I will tell you why I want Beck-since they left it. bridge out of the way and precisely what interest And yet they were assured that Frank Reade sever his bonds by rubbing them against the metal I have in securing the child Little Synshine. The would certainly not have displayed the danger sig-guards of the seat to which he was bound. I dischild believes herself to be the daughter of Owen nal save he was confident that the threatened peril covered him just as he sprang up, and seeing that Strathmore. Such is the real truth. Strathmore's was of the gravest character. wife, now deceased, was the only daughter of old At one sweeping glance, which took in all the sledge, and before I could anticipate or prevent it Squire Baldwin of Ohio, a man of great wealth. wild prairie landscape and the living beings upon he dealt the connecting rod of the main lever a When his daughter married Strathmore against his it, Barney and Pomp saw that Beckbridge, the old tremendous blow, which drove it down against the will the old squire vowed he would disinherit his trapper, and the rescued white women were en-cylinder of the clock-work appliance under the daughter who was his only child. But the old man gaged in a thrilling race for life. did not do so. When he died, some time since, he They heard Beckbridge shout in ringing tones until the damage is repaired. I am at work at the left a will which gave his fortune to his daughter, that vibrated with anxiety: Strathmore's wife, or in case of her death the for- "Come on with yer 'lectric wagin, pard, fer ther ing it if I am only granted time," said Frank tune was to go to her children, if any. But if she gals are about done out, an' I'm desprit consarned Reade. died without leaving children, then the fortune bout 'em."

van, myself.

"Now Owen Strathmore does not know of the moving appeals the electric tally-ho did not move. petered out already?" said Beckbridge. death of his wife's father, nor of this will. I met Barney shook his head, and Pomp's comical "No, I knocked him senseless as an act of selfhim in Sioux City last spring. I had set out to black face assumed an expression of blank sur-defense," replied Frank. find him and make sure that the heirs who stood prise. in my way were removed. Strathmore was broke, But he and his comrade did not for a second de-say so I'll turn him loose. The sooner we're rid and in despair. I was in disguise, and he did not lay about proceeding. They ran for the electric o' him the better." know me. I assumed to befriend him, and learn-tally-ho as if for dear life. ed that his wife was dead, and that he had one Behind them, in the rocky pass, they could hear Frank, while he continued to work away at repairchild called Little Sunshine, who lived with him at the voices of Brant Forges—the halfbreed outlaw ing the injured driving-rod. a lone prairie lodge, in company with an old trap- and Adam Marvan, 'Little Sunshine's' secret and "Injun stock takes a tumble. It nigh a'most per, Beckbridge by name, who was his pard. vindictive foe. Strathmore was in desperate need of a certain sum Barney and Pomp were, of course, fully aware hair on his cocoa-nut. But I s'pose 'tain't 'zact-swiftly away to the mouth of the rocky pass. of money to develop a gold claim he had great that the sound of the bell on the elecic tally-ho faith in. I offered to loan him the money for one must have been heard by the halfbreed band and They had not long to wait before the mounted year. A singular compact was made between us, they doubted not that the wretches yould preand put in the form of a legal contract by a law-sently seek the origin of the sound wich was so The party numbered more than a score. They yer. I loaned Strathmore five thousand dollars strange to those remote solitudes. render his daughter, Little Sunshine, to me, as a cellent time. parent legally may when the other party agrees to The electric tally-ho was at comparatively but a

"Yes. But Owen Strathmore was so very con-hills. Pomp did not make any answer to this admoni-fident that he would find millions of dollars' worth Breathless with hard running, Barney and Pomp of gold in his claim that he laughed when he arrived at the electric tally-ho. "The trail is getting fresher, men. We shall signed the contract, and said that in less than a Frank Reade and Dr. Vaneyke were inside

"But he did not?"

"No. His claim proved worthless. Then re-door. "Yes, and when we do overtake him, what then, cently I heard he had been captured by the In- "Fat's up, Master Frank?" cried Bariey, pantdians and killed. So I resolved to seize the child, ing. "Death! Death for him when the secret is Little Sunshine, at once, as it is clear Strathmore "The treacherous redskin Santah- But not an can never make good his part of our contract. I instant must be given to explanation now. Hasten "Yank Beckbridge will die hard," said the am warned that Beckbridge would be likely to to check the advance of the Indians, or Beckbridge send a bullet through the heart of any one who at- and the ladies will be run down!" replied Frank "Yes, but die he must. They say he loves Little tempted to take Little Sunshine away from him Reade. one cannot succeed. Yank Beckbridge is the man the child who stands between me and a fortune." The inspiration of their chivalrous purpose gave and who is known as Little Sunshine. You had, at Then a scene which thrilled them with awful check. the outset, no interest in the undertaking save to fear for the tally-ho and their friends burst upon The rifles of the three brave fellows belched their sight.

As the villain thus spoke, Barney and Pomp were them new strength.

CHAPTER XIX.

THE TRAPPER HEARS OF SECRET FOES.

THE sight which Pomp and Barney beheld, when Mrs. Eldridge and her daughter Eve gained the fold interest in finding Beckbridge. I mean to ously been agreed upon between Frank Reade and peared. wrest from him the map of the lost mine and earn his comrades.

should have run the trapper down before this. some sort had happened during their absence and-glove with ther reds!" The infernal electric tally-ho's speed has enabled which endangered the electric tally-ho.

though I do not believe he even suspects we are cident could have occurred to the tally-ho while it as you say, they are outlaws bent on plunder and was standing still, for they observed that the posi-friendly to the Indians," said the doctor.

the mother and daughter, and yet despite these the pizen varmint on the floor. But I consait he's short distance from the place where hey made their entree upon the prairie as they cam from the

the vehicle.

But the former met Barney and Ponp at the

"Perhaps. But now you have a personal inter-startled by the ringing of the electric bell on the They met Beckbridge, and while the ladies were continuing their flight toward the electric tally-ho you and your lawless band to help find Beckbridge Instantly they began a covered retreat among the trapper, Barney and Pomp croud in the prairie grass and momentarily held hope of in forth in a destructive fusillade. Sitting Bull's warriors recoiled.

Then up and on for the electric conveyance, still covering the retreat of the ladies, went the three heroes.

"It was a rare piece of good fortune. Coming they emerged from the concealment of the rocky electric tally-ho, but the supreme effort was ac-his face.

as swiftly as possible for the vehicle themselves.

father rode side by side, and their outlaw com-

Beckbridge, the trapper, from within the tallynews I have related came to me I have had a two- This was a danger signal which had long previ- ho caught sight of the white outlaws as they ap-

"By powder!" exclaimed the eccentric scout, your gold. I have trailed the old trapper well, Now as plainly as though the information had "now we are in for more trouble. Yonder comes and but for the fact that he had linked his fortunes been conveyed to them in so many words, Barney the wust renegade outlaw gang in the Nor'west. with the great inventor, Frank Reade, Jr., we and Pomp at once understood that an accident of Brant Forges are half Sioux himself, an' he's hand-

"Those fellows are white men. They will seek Beckbridge to keep out of our way thus far, They were perplexed to comprehend how an ac-no doubt to take sides against us, for all that, if,

"Evidently not. Now Brant Forges, you have tion of the remarkable vehicle had not been changed "And yet we cannot retreat or take to flight for half an hour yet. Santah, the Indian, managed to his escape was foiled, the Indian selzed vender lever board, and it is impossible to stir the tally-ho bent rod now, and will have no difficulty in repair-

"Traps an' trappers! The Injun load-stone in was to go to a nephew by the name of Adam Mar- Alarmed, entreating cries burst from the lips of my natur' are a drawin' my huntin'-knife toward

"Ther varmint ain't no use to us now, an' if you

"All right. Put him out of the coach," assented breaks me heart ter let the pizen critter go with his remarked Beckbridge, regretfully.

first.

Much the surprise of all the redskin bounded again," said Frank Reade, sternly.

up and mde off on a run instantly.

ter resca the gals. Wouldn't hev' lost them buck- "Then make haste. Get out the keg of cart-end to the battery. his only pair o' trousers."

chew of tobacco.

A stream of liquid nicotine was ejected skillfully said Frank.

narrow escape from the flood. dis colored gent a word o' warnin' nex' time youse av cartridges among the murtherin' blackguards." the explosion of the cartridge cask. gwine ter open der dam. You better keep dammed "Yes." away from yer," said Pomp.

and he exclaimed in tones of agitation:

lift a finger agin my old pard's leetle gal."

OHAPTER XX.

AN EXPLOSION ON THE PRAIRIE.

Sure, an' it's a blackguard's scheme that Pomp an' in Beckbridge's hand saying: meself overheard be chance," said Barney. "Here is the article with which you intrusted fused sounds.

half-breed outlaw, Brant Forges, and Adam you." Marvan.

He saw the power of gold impelled Marvan to get mother was a baister an' me father was a paster. Yank Beckbridge and those he loved rode un-Little Sunshine in his possession, as she alone Mother worked in a tailor shop, father pasted bills scathed—lived, perhaps to hunt the noble old trapstood between him and the inheritance left by the fer a poster of 'em. Between ther two they stuck per and innocent Little Sunshine to their doom. child's grandfather, "Squire" Baldwin.

erful incentive had actuated his partner, Owen grandmother several thousand years ago name o'came anxious as the moments passed and Barney Strathmore, in his quest for wealth. He knew that Eve. She took up a claim in a garding 'long of a did not return. short-sighted bargain.

much to be regretted obstacle had arisen to hamper sarpent gi'n my great grandmother Eve ther ap- "I have fixed the bent bar all right. Now let us to the trapper.

man, and that he would be trailed and hunted by Injun," said Beckbridge gravely, while his merry chinery gradually, so as to avoid anything like a the half-breed outlaw, who sought to steal away his eyes twinkled. map of the route to the lost gold mine. The ladies smiled.

"We hev' got new trouble on our hands sure as "You are a strange humorist. Under such cir- "All right. We can leave our enemies behind shootin'. The two white fiends, Forges and Mar-cumstances as the present, Sir Trapper, I should very easily now, I think," said Frank. van, are more ter be dreaded than all the redskins. apprehend that your mood would not be suited to "But dis yere colored pusson ain't a-gwine fer I foresee we hev' got to have a long an' desprit levity," said Mrs. Eldridge. struggle fer ther lost mines," said Beckbridge, seri- "Never cry till yer hurt, are a motter o' the Beck-find dat Irisher," cried Pomp earnestly. ously, when a moment's silence had succeeded the bridge fambly, handed down in the Beckbridge "Certainly we shall not run away and leave Barconclusion of Barney's narrative.

"The nagur is right. See ther blackguard spal- Pharo." half are pintin' at us, an' begorra, it's mesel' as will laughing. wager a pint av the ould stuff he's axin' the red Pomp at that instant made a sudden jump and Barney had caught the last part of Pomp's renagur ter some on at us," said Barney.

upon the truth.

fore the latter can explain away the superstitions open window. the former have formed regarding the tally-ho," said Frank.

"Begob, I'm the mon fer the job!" cried Barney. his men. fust of ebberyt'ing. I'se de pusson fer de job my- it saw Santah evidently making some communica- "Barney-I golly, I--" self!" put in Pomp.

"Begorra, sorry's the day a nagur trys to take reached. the place av an Irish gintleman. It's breakin' the mug av yez I'll be afther doin'!"

Pomp. "Take back the insult yez gave me, or begob, said Beckbridge.

it's moppin' up av the flure wid a nagur is the act nixt on the programme, begob!" Barney made a pass at Pomp, but the nimble united bands of white and red foes narrowly.

against the metal side of the tally-ho.

me!" roared Barney.

What I want is this; a blasting cartridge package cartridge cask." must be carried out to the white and red scoun- "Yes," assented the doctor.

ly etterkiter do any hair-liftin' afore ther ladies," drels, and suddenly and mysteriously exploded. I "We shall hear from Barney soon, I think, uncount upon the result to strike them with con-less the Indians and their white allies detect him. Then h pitched Santah out of the tally-ho head sternation so deeply that they will not attempt and I can as yet see no sign to indicate such a to attack the tally-ho before we are under way thing," he added, still peering through his glass.

"Whoop! But it's the illegant foine brain yez Then suddenly there came three sharp twitches "Possm was his game, by powder! Gewhew! have, Masther Frank. Shure an' Barney O'Shea is on the wire. Ther pizn critter hez run off with me buckskin the boy to give the spalpeens beyant the bit av a skins fera farm in Texas. A keep-sake them was, ridges, and take one end of that coil of a thousand An instant and a tremendous report—the detoas I sot ome'at store by. An' ter think o' a pizen yards of fine malleable wire, crawl away to the en- nation of an explosion was heard. A great red red runfin' around in Yank Beckbridge's buck- emy under cover of the tall prairie grass, carrying flame flashed for an instant among the enemy, and skins. his world are a vale o' tears an' sorrer, the keg and the end of the wire, which will un-then a dense black smoke swept upward amid I tell ye it comes home ter a feller when he loses wind as you go. When you are among the vil-flying missiles. lains place the keg, attach your end of the wire to The oli trapper glanced ruefully at the Indian it and crawl back. As soon as you are at a safe leggingshe wore and consoled himself with a fresh distance I'll do my part. You must tell me when all is ready by giving three sharp jerks on the wire," charge of electricity through the wire from the Reade, as the electric current transmitted along "Look year, Mister Trapper, jes' you done gib bathery in the tally-ho, and explode the whole keg the wire from the battery in the tally-ho occasioned up ter flood dem yere white trash what's arter ye' Three moments subsequently Barney was crawl- he hab got away from de wercinity ob dat yar an' means ter steal a gal named Little Sunshine ing away from the tally-ho with a small keg under 'splosion, er he wouldn't hab up an' pulled de one arm and a wire in his hand, which played wire," said Pomp, clapping his hands in delight. The old trapper started. His bronzed face paled, out from a revolving standard in the tally-ho as he The mysterious explosion, for such it was to the advanced.

got a change o' buckshot for the critter as dares looked to it that it did not become entangled, bands into confusion. while Frank Reade worked away as rapidly as This was certainly the only result that could possible at the task of repairing the injury wrought have ensued, for the explosion sent a shower of deby the vandal hand of the vindictive Santah.

Mrs. Eldridge and Eve were able to converse and the white renegades.

Then he went on and narrated the conversation me. We owe our lives to you. I am very happy to The savages ran hither and yon, and the white which he and Pomp had overheard between the think I may have been of some slight service to renegades scattered away from the vicinity of the together. Your name's Eve. You're like enough a Those inside the tally-ho watched the scene A clear realization of the fact that a new and the duce an' all was to pay. Some claim 'twas a the machinery: and impede the search for the lost gold mine came ple, but I know 'twas a Injun 'cause unbeknownst see if the machinery will work?" to Adam an' Eve, there was an old trapper, a Frank made the requisite test, applying the mofambly ever since one o' my great uncles acted as a ney," said Frank. "Gollie! I done say fo' such dat trouble am guide fer a party of emigrants thet was crossin' "I done thought dat you couldn't done gone peens av Satan are shakin' hands wid the red na- "I am afraid your version of the events to which As he spoke the door of the tally-ho opened, and gurs an' they are all good friends. The half an' you refer are scarcely orthodox," said the doctor, Barney, who had crept up unseen, leaped inside enemy under cover of the tall grass.

"You'se always done jump yahself up ter de The doctor picked up his field-glass, and through left beyan' us!" roared Barney. tion to the white outlaws whom he had now "Shut up, ye nagur! Shut up wid yez, an'

The doctor mentioned what he saw.

my han's, an' when I done do dat I'se bad," warned ther news. But they haven't wiped out old Yank doin'! Whoop!" or got the treasure map or Little Sunshine yit!" Barney came at Pomp like a mad bull.

Some suspenseful moments now elapsed.

darky dodged, and the Irishman bruised his fist Presently Frank Reade turned from his task and irate Irishman and Pomp.

said: "Worra! Worra! The nagur haz murthered "I've almost repaired the damage done to the machinery by the redskins. It's time Barney with a low bow. "Shut up! You are served right. Now, then, reached the enemy and gave the signal to fire the "Excuse me, ladies. Faith an' savin' yer pris-

A moment or so more went by.

"The signal!" exclaimed Frank, and with a pair trousers hat I put onter him when I turned Injun Fourth av July celebration, just as you say." of pincers he severed the wire and attached the CHAPTER XXI.

NO COLORED FOLKS WANTED.

"Busted, by powder!" exclaimed Beckbridge. from between his teeth and Pomp had another "Begob, I understand. Yez mane to sind a "Yes, and in a literal sense," assented Frank

"Gollie! Dat Irisher done bully! I specs dat Indians and the white outlaws, occasioned them "What do you mean, nigger? Speak out, I've The doctor watched the unwinding wire and the greatest consternation and threw the united structive missiles among the murderous savages

by this time, and the latter placed the buck- Wild yells, howls of mingled rage and terror "BE the powers av turf, I'll tell yez all about it! skin bag containing the map of the lost gold mine made a direful pandemonium, and the comparative quietude was converted into a saturnalia of con-explosion as swiftly as possible.

"Don't mention it, gal. Don't mention it. Ther And, amid all the confusion and tumult, the two Beckbridge grasped the entire subject at once. Beckbridges as a fambly allers was clannish. Me men who were the wolves upon the trail of old

The trapper understood now that the most pow-distant relation o' ther Beckbridges. Had a great upon the prairie in silence for a time. But all be-the father of Little Sunshine had been working to feller named Adam. All went fuss class with 'em But presently, to the satisfaction of all concernsave his child from the consequences of his own 'til one day an Injun come along an' give Eve a ed, Frank Reade said, as he drew a deep breath of pizened apple an' she give Adam a bite, an' then relief and put aside his implements for repairing

He understood that henceforth he was a marked friend o' mine, hid in the garden and he seed the tive power from the battery to the delicate mashock or a jar.

Immediately the tally-ho began to move.

ter desert ole Barney. No, sah! I'se gwine ter comin' mighty soon!" said Pomp. ther Red Sea ter git away from a big Injun name o' leave Barney behind ter be skulped by dem red niggers," replied Pomp.

all safe and sound.

tumbled over the stand of wire which was now mark. He heard Pomp say "leave Barney behind The indications were that the Irishman had hit rapidly unwinding, as Barney advanced toward the ter be skulped by dem red niggers," and he did not hear the preceding words.

It's necessary that we should intimidate those A stream of tobacco juice passed the spot Pomp "Be the turf an' the bogs! Worra, me soul, red scoundrels and the white outlaws anew. be- had vacated so suddenly and went through the but it's the loikes av me, Barney O'Shea, as wull make the murtherin' spalpeen av a nagur ate the At the same moment a chorus of exultant shouts words av him, begob! It's lavin' an Irish ginwas uttered by Brant Forges, the half-breed, and tleman behind wid the red nagurs ye'd be afther dcin', is it? Faith an' it's a nagur that wull be foight loike a mon. Shure, an' it's an illegant ginteel bit av a shindy I'll be afther givin' yez, "The Injun haz up an' told ther renegades that I an' I'll bate the head av yez in a whisk! Orrah! "Keep way from me, white man. I done spit on am here all right, an' they are a-yelling fer joy at it's lavin' av the loikes av me yez would be afther

"Hold! Ther presence of ther ladies are agin yer. 'Tain't ettekit. Put it off. Yer kin chaw The occupants of the tally-ho watched the each other up nice an' fine some other time," said Beckbridge, throwing himself between the > Barney was nothing if not gallant. He halted, and turned to Mrs. Eldridge and Eva ence I would be afther massacrein' the nagur.'

"Irish, you'se de--" began Pomp, when Becksped quickly away Frank interposed his authority now on the top of the vehicle. the time at least averted.

The enemy was soon left behind and out of sight. rushed out of the grogshop. some length, and when Frank Reade learned that him Banty Briggs addressed his order to stop the a rude but formidable barricade. they had friends at Wind river, he decided to take tally-ho. them to that settlement.

and having seen the ladies welcomed by their during the absence of Barney and Pomp, when the Frank, as well as Barney and Beck ridge, was friends, Frank Reade set the heads of his team savage appeared in pursuit of Beckridge and the very much surprised at the first sight of the barnorth-west again and went forward on what Beck-captives he had rescued. bridge claimed was the proper course to pursue to Barney had not as yet discarded his armor which But a second glance served to occasion them adcamp called "One Horse Bend." The camp was the best one. We will not halt here, but continue Their voices were heard by Frank and his friends one of the roughest and most lawless places in the right on." West. But for all that Frank and his comrades de- One Horse Bend was located in a pass of the ment an apparition appeared on the wall. cided to pass the night there.

camp, Frank Reade's attention was attracted to a Indian map, or tracing, was to be relied upon, the gings, and carrying a light repeating rifle.

sign nailed to a tree which read thus: NOTICE.

riggers, not ter set foot in ther city o' One Hoss Bend. straggling line of rude shanties for a quarter of a to one so beautiful, fair maid! We are strangers 'Cordin' ter ordernance by ther city council made an' mile along the defile. approved, any Chinaman er nigger caught in this berg will be strung up, as a warnin' ter future arrivals o' ther Briggs to halt. same sort.

BANTY BRIGGS, (Signed) Mayor.

Frank Reade read this aloud. Poor Pomp listened, and he looked rather The roughs uttered fresh yells of rage, and a "The roughs of One Horse Bend have tried to troubled as he said:

"I specs dat done mean Pomp. I can't help it midst. white heart. But I doan' want ter get friends in- of the coach, and the bullets did not hit him. ter trouble on my account, nohow. So I'll jist slip Frank and Barney were both struck, but not in-claim," said the girl. leave dis place."

"No, begob! Faith, an' yez will do nothin' av The roughs rushed pell-mell at the heads of the the sort. Tare an' ouns! Be the powers, an' it's iron steeds and at the coach. ashamed av yez I am! Shure an' it's yersel' an' Several of the toughs were struck down and the loikes av me haz fought blackguards all over trampled, and the others sprang away. They had the worruld, an' yez don't mane to back away made the discovery that the horses were mechanifrom a shindy at this toime of loife? Shure, an' cal. it's ould Barney as wull shtand by yez, Pomp, an' if the spalpeens hangs wan, they have got to hang Let somebody sing a hymn. I reckon ther world pass your barricade?" asked Frank. gob!"

loon a few feet distant, caught sight of Pomp's a blow from the iron-clad hoofs.

black face.

roughs poured out of the rum-hole and surged to-hold of one of the metal guards into which Frank open a passage for the tally-ho." ward the tally-ho, shouting: "Hang the nigger! had just sent a charge of electricity. Hang the nigger!"

CHAPTER XXII.

THE BARRICADE IN THE PASS.

FRANK READE and his comrades understood that Pomp was in real danger. The rough and lawless element of "One Horse Bend" was clearly in the thing done or said to provoke hostilities, had man-ready to carry it out at once. ascendancy. The crowd of men who issued from aged to keep Barney quiet. the grog-shop and raised the dread shout of But now the Irishman yelled in delight: Judge Lynch advocates, were evidently in dead earnest.

by direful purpose, was ever uttered in such tones a sthick an' bate the heads av ye!"

as theirs.

hope for the least modicum of mercy if he was of the tally-ho. once in the power of those howling rufflans of the "Put that little runt av a blackguard on ice an' shall come to you by reason of your so doing." mines.

prayer for forbearance would avail, Frank and his him," retorted Barney.

comrades were convinced.

dared more dangerous than, perhaps, otherwise merrily. might have been the case by reasons of potations Doors flew open and people rushed out to see the depended on!" the old man cried. long and deep. Inflamed as now by rum, the strange vehicle. roughs of "One Horse Bend" were veritable The yelling mob behind added to the excitement, Frank and his comrades heard him shout: wolves.

As was usually the case when strangers saw the a scene of great confusion. electric tally-ho, the remarkable vehicle was now Frank smiled with satisfaction, saying regarded as an ordinary stage coach, somewhat "We shall soon leave this delightful place, which out of the common in design.

The roughs of One Horse Bend as yet had no behind." idea of the real character of the conveyance, or In a few moments more than two-thirds of the poodle dog!" replied Barney. that the noble steeds by which it was drawn were distance through the straggling mining camp was Barney alighted beside Frank in a trice and the other than horses of flesh and blood.

shop in answer to the yell of the miner who had "One Horse Bend" was left behind, and the first discovered Pomp, was a thick set, undersized roughs of the camp who were still in the pursuit tions, and he and Barney ran back to the bend in ruffian whose ignoble features indicated a nature of the tally-ho did not gain on it. of the lowest description.

the mayor of One Horse Bend, who had been elect-steep-walled mountains which towered on each around the curve. ed by the toughs, who were in the majority.

"Hold on there with yer hearse, er I shill be wagon trail. compelled ter salivate ye, pilgrim!" shouted The electric tally-ho rounded a bend in the nar- With sudden leaps the inventor and his brave bridge discharged a nicotine overflow which shut Briggs, as he advanced toward the tally-ho at the rowest part of the pass and then, all sonce, Frank and the trouble between Pomp and Barney was for Pomp and the doctor, at a word from Frank, caused the team to stop. had retired inside the tally-ho as the miners Before him, completely closing the arrow pass

The inventor now wore his suit of mail under rocks and bowlders. These were placed so as to The journey to Wind river was made in safety, his ordinary garments, having donned the same form a wall ten feet high.

transpired to require special mention.

"I think," said Frank to Beckbridge, "that in a row of eight rifle barrels.

But one evening the tally-ho reached a mining this instance the easiest way out of a difficulty is There were men behind the rude fortification.

Montana mountains.

route of the hunters in quest of the lost gold mine "Friends or enemies, which are you?" demanded ran through the pass, so it was necessary to go the wild mountain maid, laconically. Warning are hereby duly given ter all Chinamen and through the mining camp, which was built in a "Friends, certainly. Who could profess enmity the main lever of the battery and increased the can pass your fortress, and why is it here?" said speed of the wonderful iron team.

volley of pistol shots were discharged from their wrest my father's claim from him because it is the out an' hide in de woods til youse git ready ter jured, thanks to their chain armor, which once At this moment the yells of the men of One Horse again proved wholly impervious to bullets.

"Bears an' beavers! Horses made o' iron! both, an' that won't be no picnic for thim, be- are a-comin' ter an end an' we're sent fer, an' have got to go!" bawled out a tattered, trampish look-space." As Barney spoke a miner who stood before a sa- ing rascal who was one of those who had received

But the roughs who had come at the tally-ho had ed by my father." "A nigger!" he yelled, and a score of their own troubles. Banty Briggs had grabbed "Then I propose that they at once set to work to were piled up in a struggling, kicking, swearing not be, stranger." mass, and every one of them was ready to make "But I guarrantee that if you will have an openoath that he had been struck by lightning.

The tally-ho kept on.

Thus far Frank, who did not wish to have any- His quick brain had grasped an idea and he was dirthy blackguards. Faith, an' wan good mon loike man added. No idle menace, no simple threat, unsustained mesel' could stand foreninst yez all wid a sprig av "You Frank Reade, Jr., of whom I have read so

"Surrender the nigger!" roared Banty Briggs, "Yes, miss. But quick, your answer. Will you kape him fur me til I come back. Sure, he's the The girl hesitated. No plea for leniency, no cry for clemency, no missin' link, an' me friend P. T. B. is lookin' for But at that moment an aged, benevolent-looking The speed of the tally-ho was now excellent.

The evil of the nature of the ruffians was ren- It bowled along through the mining camp right and soon all the camp was aroused and there was "To work, men! Down with the rocky wall is a land to Chinamen and negroes tabooed, far leaping off the tally-ho.

traversed by the tally-ho.

One of the first men who came out of the rum- Then soon the last shanty in the suburbs of "We have got to work a ruse."

side that was scarcely wide enough for a single

Pomp off by compelling him to dodge.

The tally-ho was now set in motion, and as it Frank Reade, Barney and Yank Beckbridge were threw back the main lever, and thus is connected Reade uttered a startled exclamation and quickly the electric current with the machiery and so and rendering it wholly out of the question to run Then Mrs. Eldridge and Eve were questioned at Frank Reade occupied the driver's seat, and to the electric tally-ho further in that dection, was

The obstruction was constructed entiely of large ultimately reach the locality of the lost gold mine. he had worn when he appeared with Pomp among ditional astonishment, for, protruding through For some days nothing of sufficient interest Sitting Bull's band as "a man of fire." | loop-holes rudely made in the high wall, they saw as the tally-ho was halted, and the succeeding mo-

Frank Reade beheld a young girl of surpassing As the tally-ho was advancing into the mining If Yank Beckbridge's interpretation of the old beauty, clad in a buckskin tunic and Indian legon our way west. One of our party chances to be Frank Reade did not heed the command of Banty a colored man, and the roughs of Ope Horse Bend are in pursuit of us vowing to hang he unoffend. On the contrary, the young inventor depressed ing man of color. Is there no way by which we Frank, in a breath.

richest lead in the gulch, and Banty Briggs has set if I is brack, Mars Frank, an' I reckon I'se got a Yank Beckbridge dropped down flat on the top up a fraudulent claim to it. We have barricaded the pass here, as it is the only route to my father's Bend were heard close behind.

"Begob, it's a ruction we'll have now, for sure!"

cried Barney.

CHAPTER XXIII.

BARNEY AND POMP IN A GREAT "RUCTION."

"Young lady, is there no way in which we can

"None-unless the rocks are removed for a

"You have men with you?"

"Certainly. Ten brave fellows who are employ-

"And so allow the men who are my father's foes Several others imitated the example of their and mine to capture us and our claim. No, no, leader, and in about a second a heap of roughs self-preservation is the first law of nature. It can-ing made for our passage the men of One Horse Bend shall not profit by it," replied Frank.

The maiden smiled incredulously.

"I am Frank Reade, Jr., the inventor, and I "Whoop! It's takin' av a tumble yez are, ye never promise more than I can perform," the young

Assuredly Pomp could scarcely anticipate, or picking himself up and leading his gang in pursuit open the way for the passage of my last great invention and trust to my solemn word that no harm > miner appeared beside the mountain beauty on the rugged wall of the barricade.

> "I answer for my daughter. We will open the barricade. I know Frank Reade's word can be

> Then he leaped down out of sight again, and and open a passage for Frank Reade, the great inventor!"

"Now, Barney, come with me?" cried Frank,

"Sure, an' I'm wid ye, as the flea said till the latter said, in a low tone:

Then to Beckbridge Frank gave some instructhe pass.

At some distance beyond the mining camp the They had barely reached it when Banty Briggs This individual was Banty Briggs-so called-pass narrowed until it became only a cleft in the at the head of his band of roughs came tearing not Barey, in accordance with Frank's instruc- coon off dar han's!" cried Pomp. tions, caght Briggs up bodily and bounded away But just then: with hit to the tally-ho.

> "Now!" cried Frank. "Whoop!" yelled Barney.

Frankfollowed closely.

the electic battery to the side of the pass not more barricade. than twinty feet from the bend on the side of the trail toward the tally-ho.

Befor the roughs behind Banty Briggs fully understool that their leader had been so to say snatchel out of their midst and carried away, Barney had him safe in the tally-ho.

and the doctor, Pomp and Barney instantly joined the Irishman up. him there, and in a second's time four rifles in the Down went Barney sprawling. hands of the defenders of the great electric invention were leveled at the roughs of One Horse after Pomp. But Barney was mad. Bend.

seen to dart across the trail between the miners' black rascal whin we git out av this shindy!" cried Frank Reade's shoulder, and said: mob and the tally-ho, trailing a copper wire be-Barney.

hind him.

the side of the pass whence he came. Now, in a ment. Pomp was already inside the vehicle. which theold trapper had darted.

The atter ion of the roughs was entirely center- barricade, which was now complete. ed on the tally-ho. The light in the high mount-ain-walled defile was imperfect, and the mob did mines, recovering somewhat from their discomfit-trail. Presently he came back with a white hand-before them.

ing the whole length of the wire, invisible, but pos- roughs. sessed of awful power.

The roughs halted at the sight of the rifles lev- Beckbridge the trapper. eled at them from the top of the tally-ho, and mean- Meanwhile the doctor, so instructed to do by The young man's eyes instantly discovered a while the men behind the barricade were working Frank, had got the repeating Winchester battery in name in one corner of the lost handkerchief. with a will to open the way for the passage of the place. tally-ho.

Reade as the roughs stopped. "Ye dassen't harm Banty. He's chief o' the vig-tention was merely to intimidate. ilantes o' the gulch. Tech a hair o' his head, an'

burly desperado of the mines shouted back. when we have passed the barricade, and it has As the enemy fell back, he and Beckbridge seized be saved!" cried Frank.

to you," replied Frank.

powder!" added Beckbridge, who had crept back side of the pass. the vehicle.

am all howlin' ter git at one poor colored man. Briggs while he was being secured to the rock. Dar am more dan forty ob yer, but yer all settin' But Barney shouted: my music-box, an' dat's de tune I'se turned on, fo' smithereens!" suah!" cried Pomp.

the last speaker among the mob.

Then on they came in a mad rush for the electric ter, by powder!" cried Beckbridge.

tally-ho.

brook broke loose right forninst me. Whoop, it's who, with old man Walters, the owner of the dis- "What's ther matter, Barney? I consait ye hev a shindy av illigant ruction at last we'll have!" puted claim, were standing by the barricade. cried Barney, now in his element, and brandishing "The cowardly curs who want to rob a fellow trapper. his shillshal, the reckless fellow leaped off the top creature of his life simply because his skin is black, "Yah, yah! If I done had sich mighty big of the tally-ho.

away from the mob peacefully. But now his in- his tracks if they attempt to come through the Pomp. dignation carried him away. With a bellow like a opening in the barricade," added Frank. mad bull he followed the foolhardy Barney.

did not expect to encounter.

from their lips were seldom heard before.

They received terrible electric shocks, and trip-thus far succeeded. ping over the wire the foremost ones fell head first. of the roughs tumbled over their fallen comrades, with a will to repair the breach in the barricade. "Come, come, no quarreling. We shall have and they all presented a most ludicrous appearance.

Some began to scramble up as Barney and Pomp rushed at them.

wherever he saw one, and Pomp butted right and fellers mean biz, an' I know it." left, knocking down man after man in quick succession.

that, ye blackguard! Shure, it's crackin' the heads Beckbridge was called in. av ve I'm afther doin'!" shouted Barney.

Irish carade darted upon Banty Briggs, and "Gib de mean trash fits, Barney. I'se done as when we came?" asked Frank of the honest Frank calt him a stunning blow which would butted mo' dan a dozen out ob tune. Guess da'll miners. have feed the stunted rascal to the earth had let somebody else take de contract ter hang dis "It is! it is!" was the quick, unanimous re-

"Ding! ding! ding?" sounded the electric bell, ise, and now we will say good-bye." and turning, Barney and Pomp saw that the way Beckkidge meanwhile had run out a wire from for the electric tally-ho was opened through the said the old miner's beautiful daughter as she gave

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE WAGON TRAIL-INDIAN "SIGN."

Pomp and Barney ran at once, straight for the Frank. tally-ho. Barney tried to dart by Pomp and. Frank Reade leaped on the top of the tally-ho whether accidentally or otherwise, Pomp tripped

But he regained his feet with alacrity, and ran on the range, and again traversing the prairie.

the ground and secured among the rocks, into machinery began to move, and presently the tally-ter attack ther wagon train. Look yere. Just ho glided onward through the opening in the rocky stop ther team a bit."

barricade was open.

powerful battery in the tally-ho, and at that mo-Come on, boys! The biggest pay-streak in ther struck ther trail of ther emigrants near here, an' ment the subtile fluid of the lightning was travers-gulch are a-waitin' fer us!" shouted one of the are now a follerin' it. I read ther signs like a book.

we shall give you a deadly volley," cried Frank None of them were hit, for the inventor had no de-chief. sire to needlessly sacrifice human life, and his in- "An' he's likely to lose his scalp!" said Beck-

The roughs recoiled as the detonation of the tre- At that moment the distant report of a volley of ve'll all be hunted outen Montana er hung!" a mendous fusillade reverberated over their heads, rifle shots reverberated over the plains.

been replaced, Banty Briggs shall be surrendered Banty Briggs, and ran him to a great rock about He was about to say more when the blood-curdthree feet on the further side of the barricade. To ling warwhoops of a large band of savages indis-"An' ye kin reckon yer mighty well off, fer we the rock they bound the rough, and Beckbridge tinctly reached his hearing. oughter skulp ther pizen varmint. We hed, by clambered to a perch among the bowlders on the Just as Frank threw back the electric lever and the side of the pass, and who now vaulted upon jecting ledge for a breastwork, and leveled his rifle heard to shout: at the bound man. There had been an evident in- "Murther! It's kilt I am intirely!" "Gollie, dat's so! Youse no 'count white trash tention of the roughs to make a second rush to free at one. I'se a nigger, but I hain't no coward like "Come on agin, ye blackguards, an' the nixt you uns, an' if dar am any two ob er gang what toime the battery goes off, be dad an' it's depressed

"Yes, and if yer make a move to rush through as we have stated. "Down with the nigger! Hang the nig!" yelled the openin' in the barricade, I reckon old Killsure "Murther! It's kilt I am intirely!"

"Whoop! Is it dramin' I am, or hez Donny-cried Frank to a dozen honest-looking miners, hand.

But the succeding moment the on-rushing est miners, and the beautiful mountain maid re-Sure, yez know me gun wint off be accident an' roughs from the mining camp came in contact garded the young inventor with such admiring barked the big toe av me." with the wire stretched across the pass, which they glances as any one of the miners would have given "Yah, yah, yah!" laughed Pomp. all they possessed to have won from her.

Those immediately in the rear of the front ranks iliarly designated the claim owner, set to work I hev."

evil face was as pale as death. He called out to his comrades:

Barney danced about whacking away at a head on account er a nigger or a disputed claim. These outcry from afar.

Reluctantly the roughs withdrew further. "Whoop! Whoop! Take that, ye spalpeen, an' completed. Then, when it was accomplished, "Sure it's a regiment av the red nagurs thet sponse.

"Very good, then, I have made good my prom-

"I hope we shall meet again, Mr. Reade," Frank her hand, while her eyes betokened the more than passing interest the inventor had awakened in her heart.

"I fear not, fair girl, unless you can some time find time to visit my wife in Readestown," replied

The girl's face flushed and then paled.

"We shall never meet again. It is better so," she said quietly, and then turned away.

Less than an hour later the tally-ho was beyond

The trail of a wagon train was struck some "Sure, and that's all a gintleman gits for helpin' twenty miles further on, and Beckbridge, who was They halted, and a moment later Beckbridge was av a nagur. Faith, an' I'll bate the head av the gazing intently ahead, all at once laid his hand on

"There's trouble ahead, for the emigrant train He had bruised his knee and he limped a trifle, that hez just passed this way. Ther tracks are He had given the wire a turn around a rock on but for all that he boarded the tally-ho in a mo- about an hour old, I jedge. There's redskins atrailin' the train. I feel ther Injun load-stun in my moment more it was drawn taut about a foot from Frank Reade worked the electric levers. The natur' a-workin', an' I know reds are plannin' for the slender wire stretched across the pass ure, uttered loud, exultant yells as they saw the kerchief in his hand which he had picked up in the grass.

Frank halted the electric steeds.

But one end of this wire was connected with the "Now we'll run old Walters out of his claim! "Half a hundred Injuns mounted on ponies hev Here's a wipe one o' ther whites must have "An' I reckon it'll wait fer a long time!" retorted dropped," said the trapper, and he placed the handkerchief in Frank's hand.

"Byron Porter! Heavens, my old school friend Frank halted the tally-ho just inside the barri-from Ohio is with that train! Some months since "Halt! We have your leader a captive, and if cade, and immediately the electric battery was dis- he went West, intending to purchase a ranch!" you come on you may fear the worst for him, and charged over the heads of the toughs of the mines. cried Frank, reading the name on the handker-bridge.

and reechoed again and again through the pass. | "We must go to the support of the emigrant "I have warned you. Stand where you are, and Frank Reade's purpose was attained. train. Byron, the friend of my school-days must started the tally-ho there came the report of a pisto the tally-ho under cover of the shadows along There the trapper crouched down, with a pro-tol shot from inside of the coach, and Barney was

CHAPTER XXV.

THE TRAPPER'S SORROWS.

"I RECKON ther Irishman must hev shot himself, will give me a fair fight I'm dar meat. Yer hear it will be, and it will blow the likes av yez intil by powder!" exclaimed Beckbridge, the trapper, as Barney, from inside the coach, was heard to shout > ull go off an' pop Mister Banty Briggs plumb cen- Beckbridge opened the door in the top of the vehicle, and he saw Barney hopping about on one "To work, all hands! Repair the barricades!" foot, while he held a smoking revolver in his > > been makin' a target of yer underpinnin," said the won't sacrifice their villainous leader. They un-gunboats that I couldn't shot a shoot widout hit-Pomp was long suffering, and inclined to get derstand that Banty Briggs will be shot down in tin' 'em I'd done sold 'em for mud-scows!" cried

"Close that hatchway o' yez face, nagur, or be-A cheer for Frank Reade went up from the hon-gob, I'll be afther jumpin' down the throat av yez!

"Faith, an' if the nagur will hav' the illegant po-Then such yells of consternation as emanated Frank had devised his whole plan on the spur of liteness to hold the intrance of the mammoth cave the moment. Ably seconded as he had been it had closed till we are on equal footin', sure, an' it's meself will bate the head av him. The nagur tripped The miners under old man Walters, as they fam- me a bit ago, an' I hev the same in fur him yit, so > Banty Briggs had regained his senses, and his fighting presently in plenty without getting up a row between ourselves I think," said Dr. Vanevke.

> Again the distant yells of Indians were heard. "Stand back, fellers, I don't want ter go under and the indistinct report of firearms succeeded the > "Right ye are, by powder," assented the trapper, and Barney forgot the pain of his slightly The work of repairing the barricade was quickly wounded toe in the anticipation of a "ruction."

> > mesel' an' me black-diamond pard kin get away

"Now, my friends, is your barricade as secure wid. Eh, Pomp, me jewel?" he cried.

two ridiculous rascals became very friendly forth-mentioned," said Beckbridge.

With, and Pomp pulled off Barney's boot and bound "1 stand corrected," assented the doctor, while upon the wagon train had not previously encounup his toe.

All hands were presently on top of the tally-ho roared. and looking ahead anxiously. From the moment "Youse de funniest man I ever seed," said upon it. when the discovery of the name on the handker- Pomp. chief which Beckbridge had picked up, gave Frank "Funny! Sho! you oughter knowed my uncle, while, feeling sure of the capture of theapproachthe assurance; that his quandom friend, Byron Luther Beckbridge. I've knowed folks ter laugh ing coach, the Indians gave it all their ttention. Porter, was in danger, he had caused the tally-ho themselves ter death at that feller. He was fun- When the occupants of the coach hade their to maintain a high rate of speed.

than elsewhere.

were not yet in sight, the inventor relied upon the take a hint from your uncle," laughed the doctor. speed of his remarkable electric-vehicle to overtake "By the way," said Frank. "You have not as direction. them before it was too late to render the whites as- yet explained how you rescued Eve Eldridge and The cannon had been duly loaded with an exsistance.

could be seen.

in sight.

the tally-ho bowled swiftly along, and Beckbridge sued."

remarked:

tah, the pizen Sioux, are with the varmints thet are widder, ther lost gold mine, and ther worryment this, and so a momentary hesitation on their part arter ther wagon train, fer 'tain't possible. An' I've got about leetle Sunshine, I reckon old Yank seemed to indicate. No doubt the Indians expectvit I'd gin half a season's trappin' ter git holt o' has got sommat o' a load." ther critter on account er them buckskin breeches "True, true," Frank affirmed.

o' mine what the red ran off in. Them was a "The pizen scoundrel, Adam Marvan, may dis- Beckbridge had not as yet discarded his Indian keepsake-er token, them was, an' I sot store by kiver thet leetle Sunshine are in Helena, and seize disguize which he had secured from the treacher-'em a heap. Ther Widder Kerridge down ter Fort her while old Yank ain't on hand to pertect her ous Santah, and he now looked precisely like a Smith made fer me them buckskins."

twinkled, and he heaved a deep sigh and ejected a from Marvan."

as it flew by his ear.

idee inside ob yer cranijum dat dis yere colored hain't got no right to be sure o' anything 'cept Everything was in readiness gemman am er cuspidor. Dat am a big mistake, trouble an' death in this vale o' tears. But I've got a warm reception. sah, an' doan yer disremember it," said Pomp. | a presenterment that ther pizen varmint, Brant All at once Barney depressed the cannon and bridge, deftly throwing a huge quid of tobacco trouble yet He won't give up the idee o' findin' ages, who, although not as yet within rifle range, through the window, and causing Pomp to dodge the lost gold mine easy, an' he'll track me fer ter the Irishman judged to be within reach of the canagain.

"Was yer ever in love? I consait yer was. Wall, wounded buffler." inter the inside o' his heart on account o' ther loss said Frank cheerfully. o' them buckskin breeches."

The trapper sighed again dismally, and stowed ter say 'tain't so to be." away something less than a quarter of a pound of "Well, here we are at the ridge!" cried the doc- the savages rushing on in resistless might. fine-cut in the side of his face by way of consola-tor at that juncture.

tion.

choly tones, "sich are the fac, Old Yank hez got as me brother Mike said whin he ran intil the free abrupt jolt pitched Pomp off the tally-ho right ther trouble o' ther heart caused by a darter foight at Donnybrook," said Barney. o' Mother Eve, and he's got it bad. 'Wear'em, A thrilling picture was presented on the plains The darky was stunned by his fall. Barney ut-Yank,' said the widder, 'an' when ye wear 'em beyond. think o' me.'"

Beckbridge brought the stock of his rifle down with a sudden whack, and he added:

"An' ter think that a pizen red nagur are now a runnin' around in the widder's breeches-I mean ther old man's heart."

heartily as did the others.

if it takes all summer. That ere I makes affy-cles favored by emigrants are designated on the But the Indian kept on and did not relax his hold davit to. Why, 'spose I should come back ter ther plains. widder without them buckskin breeches on—without her token of fection—I kin reckon on what to make some preparations for the Indian attack. a Injun—a brack Injun, dat's what I is," roared would happen then. I'd lose ther widder, an' The wagons had been drawn up in a circle with Pomp, in desperation. that long-legged, double-jinted, web-footed crit-the poles locked in the rear axles so as to form a "Wah! Sioux take scalp!" was the far from reter, Sam Sedges, ther post parson, would cut me barricade within which the emigrants and their assuring rejoinder of Pomp's captor. clean out."

must recover the buckskins," said Frank.

them ere buckskin breeches, and that Yank Beck- to the imperiled emigrants. bridge gits inside o' them agin afore he goes back At the moment when the electric tally-ho arrived being carried swiftly away. ter the widder. There's color in her hair-she within sight of the wagon train the Indians to the "I've got the idee. I'll try a bit of a ruse which says it's auburn—an' you kin consait she's got a number of forty-odd were circling about the wagon I consait may do good!" cried Beckbridge. temper o' her own. S'pose she should hear thet a barricade at the full speed of their ponies, lying Then to the surprise of all he sprang out of the p'ison red was a-wearin' her_I mean my breeches. along the further side of their animals and dis- coach and started to run toward the Sioux who Broomsticks would be at a premium when I charging their weapons over their shaggy necks. was making off with Pomp. showed up at ther fort, I consait."

and romantic case. Quite a romance indeed, since fallen under the fire of the defenders of the Beckbridge. the favor of your fair one depends upon the recov-train.

"And how pathetic are the attendant circum- almost continuous fusillade.

stances and future possibilities! The combination The redskins had already made one flerce united The big chief was deceived, for never did a disof red hair and widow, broom-sticks and buck-onset, but the charge was heroically repelled by guised white man more nearly resemble an Inskin breeches suggest a touching fate for you, the whites. friend trapper," said the doctor.

Pomp assented to Barney's gasconade, and as 'ud do better in connection with ther widder an' preservation they were battling, the emigrants there was a prospect of a row with outsiders, the ther handle o' ther sweepin' implement afore made a grand fight.

came in."

her mother from the Sioux so speedily."

the sounds of strife emanated, a ridge of the plains, see ther gals had managed ter give ther reds ther cle, Pomp and Barney yet clad in their suits of such as occurs at intervals on the rolling prairie, slip, an' were a-runnin' fer dear life when I chanced mail, stationed themselves at the cannon which ter meet 'em in ther hills. Then all we had to do they had volunteered to man. Frank surmised that when the ridge was reached, was ter make for ther tally-ho. We did that an' I From inside the vehicle Frank still acted as enthe emigrant train and its red enemies would come reckon 'tain't necessary fer me to gin you a his-gineer, and controlled the movements of the tallytory o' ther rest."

"There's a heap o' trouble on ther old man's charging Indians.

What a pizen fool my old pard Strathmore was to Sioux warrior, paint, feathers and all.. The merry eyes of the eccentric old trapper pledge his leetle gal as security fer the loan he got. The trapper and Dr. Vaneyke had their rifles his claim."

"Mistah Trapper, I reckon dat you done got de "That's just what I blame him fer. A feller rested in a port-hole. get the old Injun map like a starved wolf tracks a non.

"Sartin I hope so to, pard. But suthin' seems

"Yas," he resumed in ludicrously melan-wagon train. It's a foine ruction we hev struck,

CHAPTER XXVI.

POMP IN THE GREATEST PERIL YET.

my breeches. By powder, it's enough ter break HALF a mile or more distant from the ridge and clutching Pomp by the wool, lifted him upon which the electric tally-ho had now arrived at his animal and dashed away. "The case is sad indeed," said Frank, laughing Frank Reade and his comrades now saw a wagon "Help! Sabe me, Barney! Luff me go, Mister train composed of a score of covered wagons, or Injun! I ain't a white man, 'deed I ain't!" yelled "But I'll git them buckskin breeches back agin "prairie schooners," as the canvas covered vehi- Pomp.

hcrses were sheltered.

tack upon the train for about half an hour, al- the danger of hitting Pomp.

"Touchin' I Touchin' ain't the word. Strikin' ones, wives, children, and sweethearts, for whose reached his side. The other Indians, terrified by

Frank laughed, and Pomp and Barney fairly tered the electric tally-ho, and sightingt presently they uttered delighted yells and ore down

For the nonce the wagon train was let in peace, nier than a funeral—a heap; but there was a hasty preparations for a battle upon baring the The air of the northern prairies is peculiarly rare, guide book went 'long with my Uncle Luther's sounds of conflict ahead among other hings that and sounds could be heard at a greater distance jokes, so's any one could find out where ther laugh were attended to a small cannon was go out, put together, and set on the top of the talli-ho. The Although the emigrant train and the Indians "A wise provision. Other humorists might small cannon was provided with a revolving carplosive shell, and now, while all the other mem-At some distance ahead, in the direction whence "That was luck an' a heap on it, I consait. Yer bers of the tally-ho force retired inside the vehi-

Preparations were hastily made for a battle as "Certainly not, since I witnessed what en- The electric conveyance continued to advance in the direction of the imperiled wagon-train and the

"I reckon that 'tain't no use ter hope thet San-mind takin' one thing an' another. What with ther The latter may have been somewhat surprised at ed the supposed stage-coach to beat a hasty re-leveled through the port-holes of the tally-ho, and stream of tobacco juice that caused Pomp to dodge "Yes, but Strathmore was sure of the value of while Frank Reade grasped the main electric lever with one hand the other held a resolver which give the Indians

"It's absent-mindedness, nigger," replied Beck- Forges the half-breed outlaw, will make us more took aim at a compact body of the mounted sav-

Suddenly then a booming detonation was heard. when a feminine gits inter a feller's head, sense "Do not borrow trouble, Friend Beckbridge. The tally-ho shook severely as the cannon recoiled gits out; an' ther critter ain't 'sponsible. Ther Surely we have left Brant Forges and Marvan well from the impetus of the discharge. The shell went widder are in old Yank's head, an' there's sorrer behind. I hope we shall see no more of them," hissing through the air, rising at first and then falling and exploding among the red raiders. Consternation ensued among the Indians and on charged the tally-ho. In a moment it was among

But, as a volley from the rifles inside the vehicle "Yes, an' begob, there's the red nagurs an' the was discharged, the coach gave a sudden lurch. One wheel had sunk in a prairie dog hole and the among the Indians.

tered a yell, and pulling a revolver from his belt with each hand, he blazed away at the savages around Pomp. But with a loud, exultant yell, a huge warrior, who certainly must have possessed herculean strength, bent down from the back of his pony upon Pomp.

Beckbridge had drawn the sights of his rifle on "A melancholy prospect, surely. Certainly you The Sioux had already been engaged in an at- the big Indian, but he feared to fire so great was

"Sartin. You kin put it down thet Santah sheds though the time of the battle seemed much longer "Pomp must be saved! But how?" cried Frank Reade, in solicitous excitement, as he beheld Pomp

But there were several riderless ponies, telling Frank Reade understood Beckbridge's purpose, "Undoubtedly, friend Beckbridge, yours is a sad that more than one of the murderous Sioux had and he wheeled the electric vehicle and pursued

"Save me! I am Wahlata, a great chief of the ery of a pair of buckskin breeches worn by a mur- The latter were making a brave, intrepid defense, Southern Sioux. The white men took me captive derous Sioux," said Frank solemnly. and the rattle of their discharged rifles made an several days ago!" shouted Beckbridge, in the dian.

Sustained and inspired by the presence of loved Pomp's captor pulled up his horse. Beckbridge

"the thuner gun," as they called the cannon, were in full fligt.

Like a ash a pistol appeared in the trapper's further assurance of this. hand. Thee was a flash and a report. The Indian mal's bacland clutched the reins.

charging ack, intent on vengeance.

mal was leing urged at full speed toward the tally- Frank was watching the Mexicans, and he saw of gold, and the Mexican could not reach it. ho, whilebehind it came the entire savage band, them exchange glances. howling lke mad.

The taly-ho was approaching at the same time.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE MEXICAN HERDSMEN.

THE tally-ho and the pony, ridden by Pomp and number of yards behind.

Pomp and Beckbridge threw themselves from edge.

immediately did.

with another shell, sent it hurling among the ene- Mexicans, to prevent his playing. my, and they wheeled their ponies and fled, leav- Soon the half intoxicated old man was rapidly of peril-to act with promptitude which might ening sever, painted demons on the field, who would losing his hard earned gold.

and there Frank wand his old-time friend, Byron and whispered timidly:

wagon-train was in no further danger while the Oh, papa, do come away!" Frank Reade party and the electric tally-ho were Frank heard the child's words and so did Beck-rushed at him. with them.

The emigrants felt that the young inventor had and they understood each other. thoroughly intimidated the hostile Sioux, and of The old miner pushed his child away and went heap. have held out long against the determined foe.

and then a consultation was held.

Frank agreed to guard the train for a day or so. until they had gotten out of the neighborhood of Frank sprang forward and dashed half a dozen heads av the yellow nagurs! Sure an' it's a happy the hostiles and reached a mining town a day's cards from the Mexican's sleeve as he shouted: mon I am wid a nate little ruction on hand!" march or so distant, where they could purchase a new supply of ammunition.

This was done, and there was no further adven-feet and Frank was surrounded. ture worthy of record for the time. The Indians did not make another attack, and, having left the train in safety, the search for the lost gold mine was continued.

Frank and his friends were glad that so many opportunities had come in their way to relieve im- Frank Reade's impulsive exposure of the cheat-swarthy villains in short order. right.

"Ah!" said the good doctor when the party was struggle. human life."

The evening of the day we are writing of the miner had brought to their net.

tally-ho arrived at a herder's camp.

of cattle, under guard of some cowboys, to a long ed for Americans, caused the swarthy men from the rooster's wings and crowed lustily. distance from the home ranch to find good pastur-land of the ancient Aztecs, to welcome an occasion But unless they wished to engage in a further age.

a dozen cowboys on this service. A large herd which had once so completely conquered them. Frank Reade recognized this fact and he said: was resting near the camp. A cheerful fire blazed The assumption of hospitality and friendliness "Come. Now we will get aboard the tally-ho smoking their pipes and playing cards.

herders a surprise, but they had heard of him and Reade and his comrades with as little show of the prostrate Mexicans. Then the old miner staghis inventions, and seemed glad to meet the cele-mercy as their vindictive ancestors massacred gered to his feet, and Frank hurried him and his all Mexicans.

As Frank afterward learned, one Don Miguel "The Alimo." Estevado, a wealthy Mexican, had purchased an The wild, swarthy cowboys from beyond the ment the tally-ho was under way. ranchero's men.

Our friends were not very favorably impressed ever flowed in their veins. with the appearance of the Mexicans, but they in- Now they caught eagerly at a possibility which soon carried our friends out of sight of the camp of and his party at the camp of the Mexicans, there never be revealed. was another arrival, or rather two arrivals, for a As the Mexicans leaped to their feet one of their Frank, that Beckbridge has read the old Indian camp.

was somewhat intoxicated. His first words was a cured in his broad leather belt.

fell from is pony. Pomp remained on the ani-ther big sandy mountings, an' I've been ter the The little daughter of the old miner was close be-The othr Indians, seeing the huge savage who mines with my leetle gal Jule, an' I reckon ter buy him down. was, it chiced, their chief, fall, wheeled and came the best claim in ther range, fer I've got ther rocks | She saw the robber's hand flash out to seize the Beckbrige bounded upon the back of the pony, injudiciously, and he slapped his breeches pocket, with a little gasping cry, the small heroine threw

But they made the old miner welcome, and ure bag yet remained intact. The baffled Mexican in the world.

meant to transfer the miner's gold from his pocket cled Frank Reade uttering deadly threats, he was to their own before they were through with him. | completely environed by his foes and separated

The young inventor's sympathies were with the from his friends. Beckbridge, the trapper, met in a moment or so, indiscreet old miner, and he pitied his little daugh- Recognizing Frank Reade as the leader of the and the redskins in pursuit of the latter were yet a ter who seemed to fully realize the condition of American party, the Mexicans were intent upon her father, and to grieve because of her knowl-making him their first victim.

fact that Frank tried as best he could without ac-that moment of supreme peril. Then Barney, who had swiftly loaded the cannon tually setting himself up openly to defeat the Many thoughts traversed his brain with swift murder and rob no more white settlers.

His little daughter watched him in silence. Her of his assailants.

face was pale, there were tears in her eyes, and rob no more the tally no reached it, several times she plucked the old man by the arm any emergency, and now he struck out straight cards. You said you would bring all the money onrushing Mexicans. The Indians were seen hovering afar, but the home to her. You know how badly she needs it. Then out came his derringers and two deadly course they understood that they were indebted to on with his reckless play, staking his gold wildly. Frank's friends upon the instant made a rush. Frank's party listened with pleasure to the ex-once Frank saw one of the Mexicans draw a breath out of his body. pressions of gratitude which the emigrants made, trump card out of his sleeve and substitute it Barney and Beckbridge came close behind for one which rightfully belonged to his hand. | Pomp.

"Scoundrel, you are robbing this old man!" In a second the dozen Mexicans were on their Barney had clubbed his gun, and he used it as a

"Kill the meddling Americano!" they shouted.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

VILLAINS UNMASKED.

periled white people and espouse the cause of ing Mexican gamblers was apparently destined Beckbridge used his gun as a club too, and in talking of their recent adventures, "it's a blessed The Mexican cowboys, who surrounded the ney expressed it. thing to be able to help unfortunate fellow-creat-young inventor, the moment the cards fell from "Gollie! I done bet free spring chickens, wid deprive them of the golden spoil the reckless old cried Pomp.

The camp the tally-ho reached was composed of against the detested representatives of a nation draw from the scene.

stration.

brated young man, despite the fact that they were brave old Davy Crocket and his heroic adherents little daughter into the tally-ho. at that dreadful scene of heroes' doom, called The others then got aboard, Beckbridge and of Mexico who have been outlaws and insurgents the Americanos.

vited them to share their camp, and feeling well promised plunder without punishment. They the Mexican cowboys. able to protect themselves in case of trouble, thought to estimate their ideas by their deeds-that "What next, I wonder. Assuredly it seems to Frank and his comrades accepted the invitation. | they might massacre the entire American party on me we are destined to meet a constant succession But a short time after the arrival of Frank Reade that remote prairie, and that the dark secret might of adventures," said Frank.

gray-haired old miner, evidently originally from number-a tall, saturnine fellow, with eyes that map aright, and that we are really on the right trail one of the New England States, and a little girl of gleamed with savage light-struck down the old to find the lost gold mine?" twelve, the old miner's daughter, rode up to the miner with a blow from the butt of his pistol, and . "What's thet. Hev' I read the Injun writin' cormade a sudden attempt to snatch away a pouch of rect? Well, doctor, I consait I hev'. But ther

Frank saw at the first glance that the old miner buckskin in which the miner carried his gold se-

But the purpose of the Mexican was frustrated "I'm old Jabe Peters from Placer Pocket, up in in a manner quite unexpected and surprising. post ter sell my dust, an' now I'm goin' back ter ther side her father when the cowardly Mexican struck that talk when ye buy land!" announced the miner gold she had sought to save for "mother," and, and the scceeding moment the doubly laden ani-causing a bag of coin to jingle musically. herself across the body of her father, upon the bag

Two-thirds of the original contents of the treas-

seemed at least to be the most hospitable people would have torn the child from off the body of her father, but something occurred just then and the Frank knew they had an ulterior design. He Mexican went down all in a heap and did not stir. felt that those wild, lawless Mexican cowboys When the Mexicans first leaped up and encir-

But to this the young inventor seriously obthe back of the pony and gained the interior of the The Mexicans presently succeeded in inveigling jected. Life was very sweet to Frank Reade and vehicle the instant Frank stopped for them, as he the old miner into a game of cards, despite the he had never valued his existence higher than at > flight, but the dominant idea was to turn the tide able him to singly defeat the murderous purpose from the shoulder with clenched fists right and left Porter, and the two were dengated at the meet- "You promised mother you wouldn't play and his well delivered blows dropped two of the tubes stared the Mexicans in the face as they bridge. The two good hearts exchanged glances, It was at that instant that the swarthy cowboy who sought to rob the old miner dropped all in a him, for their ammunition had been nearly used Frank and Beckbridge both understood the game Pomp reached the would-be robber first, and the up when the tallo-ho appeared, and they could not which was being played. They were sure that the cause of that enterprising gentleman's downfall old man was being shamefully cheated. All at was a butt in the stomach which knocked all the Acting upon the impulse of honest indignation, "Whoop! Shades av Donnybrook! crack the shouted the fight-loving son of Erin's green isle.

"sprig av a shillalah."

"Whoop! Take that for a kape-sake, an' that fer a love tap! Whoop!" cried Barney.

And right and left his gun crashed down upon the heads of the Mexicans, while Pomp butted, in his usual manner, and knocked out several of the

to involve him and his friends in a desperate much less time than is required to record the episode, the dozen Mexicans were "downed," as Barures. What divine possibilities are crowded into the sleeve of their comrade, were deeply incensed, all the 'riginal springs in 'em, dat dem yer yeller this little span of sorrowing and cares we call a They resented the interference which bade fair to niggers done s'pose dat a cyclone struck 'em !"

"Arrah! an' it's a Cloneyclinty lad it takes to be At heart, moreover, the national antipathy and afther layin' out the Greasers!" said Barney, and In the summer ranchmen frequently send herds hatred which the Mexicans have always entertain-then the ludicrous rascal flapped his arms like a which might excuse any hostile demonstration fight it was evident that our friends had best with-before two large army tents, and the herdsmen which distinguished the demeanor of the Mexicans and be off. Bring the old miner along, there's not were about it. They had finished the evening upon the arrival of Frank Reade and his electric an instant to spare. Beckbridge, you and Pomp meal of steak and coffee and hard bread, and were tally-ho at their camp, was not a sincere demon-keep the yellow rascals covered, and shoot the first one of them who attempts to arise," said Frank. Frank Reade's coming with the tally-ho gave the The Mexicans would now gladly slaughter Frank The trapper and Pomp leveled their weapons at Pomp being the last to enter the vehicle. In a mo-extensive Montana ranch of the United States Rio Grande were descendants of the lower order Some of the Mexicans had already come to, but Government, and these cowboys were the Mexican of Mexicans, and the blood of the flerce brigands they did not get up at once for fear of a shot from

The speed attained very quickly by the tally-ho

"True," assented the doctor. "But are you sure,

Beckbridge fambly are a modest breed, an' they "And if we once find the mine we shall have no off from that pizen Injun agin an wear 'em back thet if any two-legged critter, white er red, kin gold mine Indians have perished." make out ther old Injun sign writin' that animile are Yank Beckbridge," said the trapper, overhearing the doctor's remark.

The good old man smiled.

"Have you taken into consideration the fact, friend Beckbridge, that the old Indian map of the location of the lost gold mine was made nearly a chest thet the lost mine ain't left without a hundred years ago, and that the landmarks may guard." have changed since then."

"I allow, doctor, thet you can't change the mountings an' ther plains, 'less you go to work an' make the world over, which ther same a heap o' understand how you founded your problem. scientific chaps would like to do, thinkin' they "Jist as easy as fallin' off a log, doctor. You player could not let go of the handle. could beat the Creator's hand-work, holler."

"But my friend, scientific research has estab-didn't hev no squaws, did ye?" lished the fact beyond the shadow of a doubt, that "Why, no!" assented the doctor, starting, while volcanic action has taken place among the moun-Frank Reade and the others, who were listening, tain ranges of Montana within less than a hundred suddenly evinced new interest in the conversayears. We find the original red sand stone, the tion. feldspar and the genin as well as the shale and "Good. Was any o' ther gold mine Injuns electric music-box Pomp did not, for it chanced granite formations displaced out of their order, as killed?" established by the law of geology, which is the science of creation."

"I consait that yer out o' my line when ye strike in on yer scientific jargon. Choctaw, Kioway, er Comanche palaver, I kin digest. But I draw ther chance, afore I bate the head av ye," cried Barney. "Gib us a breakdown an' I done show yer de real line onter ther 'oligies. They killed a brother o' "Silence!" admonished Frank Reade. mine. That feller went through 'em all ter college, an' he worked fer a broker at eight dollars a week, are an acute reasoner, far-sighted and keen. an' found himself-when it didn't take a policeman admit that I committed an oversight in not taking ter do it fer him on 'count o' booze arter he gradu-into account the squaws of the dead gold mine In-kin play dat crank-rigged planer if da l'in turn de ated. Eddication wuz a great thing fer me brother, juns," said the doctor. but, as I said, he finally broke down under it, and "I consait ye did. Now, 'cordin' ter Injun na- "'Course. Begob, a child could grind out the petered out."

deep sigh, and wiped his eyes on the sleeve of his made their home there, an' by powder, where ye wanted.

Indian hunting-shirt.

Then squirt went a miniature Niagara of liquid squaws." tobacco from between his teeth, and Pomp exclaimed:

"Gollie! I see I'se got ter learn ter swim!" as he dodged.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A DISCUSSION-AN ELECTRIC MUSIC BOX.

"SERIOUSLY, I believe that topographical feawas made," continued the doctor.

"Wall, it's possible. But I reckon thet if ther mine." changes ye consait hev gone on are sich as ter "True enough, I see you have given all the con- so fast before. bother us, we'll find it out in due time, an' tain't tingencies thought." no use to borrer trouble."

the course we have followed is correct."

"Sartin. But we'll hev a look at the map."

spread it out.

The bleached buckskin was discolored with age, ter lend 'em some." but the unique drawing was legible still. Strange The old trapper looked reflective, and his feel-leased Pomp. figures there were, men and horses and wild ani-ings found vent. A stream of tobacco juice shot Then there would have been a fight between him mals, and mountains and plains. But one line, by Pomp's head, between the darky and Barney, and Barney in real earnest, for this time Pomp was doubly marked with arrows at regular distances, so close that Pomp gave a jump and accidentally in for it. But Frank interposed, and the trouble extended from one corner of the map diagonally struck his head against Barney's. to the other corner where the mountains were "Bad scran til the loikes av yez! Is it taking ad- But Pomp vowed to get even with Barney yet. drawn.

cipal land-mark was especially indicated. Where the trail ended, and where therefore the Pomp. trapper believed the lost gold mine to be situated, there was a land-mark, which if in existence at consait thet we hed better interfere an' pervent lated structure, and when near it our travelers disthis date could scarcely escape discovery.

its head high above all the rival peaks of the sur-admonished Frank.

rounding range.

peculiar and remarkable for a natural formation. house!" roared Barney.

pyramids of Egypt, and it was surrounded by a sah!" great rounded knob which suggested the idea of a "There will be an Irishman and a nigger afoot lested by ther reds, an' there are them as says he gigantic head.

Yank Beckbridge with one bony finger traced gestively. his course along the line marked with the thickly strewn arrows.

"Ye see it's plain ter a blind man, who can't see when he's on beggin' duty, thet this are our trail. Ye see here's the grich which we passed where tering. them fine nigger-hatin' hounds o' One Hoss Bend' "Ye see," resumed the trapper, "ter go back ter with rheumatiz, an' his lame son there 'sides the made us a leetle diffikilty. An' here's ther pass speak of the gold mine Injun squaws, I kin tell ye old woman, Barker's wife. 'Tain't no way likely a where the barricade thet stopped us are. You something about them. They are a fierce, ugly couple o' cripples and an' old woman kin git away recognize 'em'?" said Yank.

right. We are certainly on the right course."

get to ther pyramid mounting we'll find ther that direction. Ther Injun loadstun in my natur' are agreeable we will halt at Barker's tavern and mine."

canic eruptions." "Granted."

never brags none to speak on. Still I'll say now difficulty in taking possession of it, since all the ter ther widder, er you kin plan old Yank fer

"If there ain't nobody else in it the fight is off."

"Who could there be?"

"Prospectors wouldn't dare go there on account o' the redskins."

"Certainly."

"An' yet, doc, I hev an idee inter my brain made for amusement.

"Why, what do you mean?"

"I hev been cipherin' on that pint."

don't s'pose, I reckon, that them gold mine Injuns

" No."

"Then where are they?"

"Gollie! dat's a conundrum," said Pomp. "Shut up, nagur, an' let yer betters have some

"Beckbridge, I comprehend your drift. You

tur ther squaws of the dead gold mine redskins swate tunes wid 13 5yes saut," replied Barney, and Old Yank's merry eyes twinkled, but he heaved a are in possession o' ther mine. Ther warriors he turned a screw and started the tune Pomp find ther home of an Injun there ye find his Pomp made the best of the small space he had

"Undoubtedly you are right. Granting that dance the best he knew how. such is the fact, then, we may anticipate trouble." Then Barney surrendered the box to Pomp.

pelt thet ther squaws won't hev' it so."

us like the female warriors of ancient Europe."

"I so consait, an' that ain't all."

" No?"

tures of the mountain ranges of Montana have un- What's ter prevent 'em making a treaty with the ly trying to release his hold, while the electricity dergone great changes since the old Indian map Sioux? The Sioux would jump at ther chance ter made him turn the crank faster and faster. fight fer ther red Amazons for a share of the gold Barney just fell down and roared.

"True. Then you are confident that thus far That are ther only article o' domestic use the Beck- be. yit I reckon all ther neighbors would a been glad Pomp.

bloodshed!" said Beckbridge.

And the form of the mountain was distinctive, was no gentleman an' me mother kept a boardin'- and roads in Montana, and he replied at once :

"But he tried to stab me, begob."

"Silence!" ordered Frank.

"The nagur has a razor up his sleeve."

lot, and they are the finest race o' Injun women in with sich healthy pilgrims as allers travels this "Yes," assented Dr. Vaneyke. "You are quite the far West. Talk about handsome Injun women I trail." drawed me toward 'em powerful, but ther widder have supper," said Frank. "If the pyramid has not been destroyed by vol-changed ther magnet. But when I think o' them | "An' it's a drop av' the crature too it's mesel" buckskin breeches-ah, me! This world are full as will have!" said Barney to Pomp in an underlo' sin an' sorrer. But I'll have 'em-I'll have 'em tone.

Just as the trapper thus spoke thee was a sound of music in the tally-ho.

All turned and saw Barney turning the crank of a music box which he had taken oulof the locker. This box was an electric toy which Frank had

The handle connected with an electric battery inside the box. When a concealed spring was touched the electricity went to the handle and caused the person who was turning t to hold on "Indeed! I wish you would explain. I cannot and turn faster and faster. Of course as long as the electricity was turned on the blder, or the

But Barney knew all about the contrivance.

CHAPTER XXX.

AT THE PRAIRIE TAVERN.

ALTHOUGH Barney understood the trick of the Frank Reade had not explained its workings to the darky, and Barney, with a view to ultimately getting a joke on Pomp had taken good care to say nothing about the music-box to his comrade.

"Gollie!" cried Pomp, who was fond of music.

old Virginny barn-door fling!"

"Begob, an' I will, thin, if whin I'm through yez I will play me 'The Wearing av the Gran.'

"Oh, dat's all right, I'll do dat. I specs anybody to dance in and he hoed down the favorite darky

"Yes. It's all right for old Getchewan ter give turned on the tune "The Wearing of the Green," away the mine maybe, but you kin stake yer last and sent the electricity to the handle by touching the concealed spring. But of course Barney wait-"And they may prove real Amazons, and fight ed until Pomp got well started at turning the crank before he turned on the electricity.

"Hi-yi! Fo' de good Lawd, I'se done cotched er cramp in my grapplers! Luff go! Ki-yi! Took "Sartin. Them gold mine squaws may git help. dat music-box away frum me!" yelled Pomp, vain-

Never was "The Wearing of the Green" played

Pomp knew at once that Barney had played a

"But as I said afore, we won't borrow trouble. trick on him, and he was mad as mad could well bridge fambly never borrowed. Everything else, "Dat yere am a nice game fo' ter put up on er from a clean shirt ter a tooth brush, the Beck-fren'! Irish, I done make yer laugh annuder tune The trapper drew the buckskin bag, in which he bridges allers depended on ther neighbors fer, but when dis ole music-box am done played out. You carried the precious map, from the cover, and none on 'em ever took ter borrowing trouble, an' heah de tone ob dis coon's woice, I tell yer!" cried was prevented.

But Frank Reade touched the spring and re-

vantage av an Irish gintleman whin his back is That evening as the sun was setting beyond the Along this line there were rivers, plateaus, hills turned ye are afther doing? Begob, an' I'll make eastern horizon, and a crimson glow reflected from and valleys, and in Indian sign writing each prin- a dead nagur av yez. Fat do we want wid a nagur the cloudless sky, bathed the vast prairie in warm, anyway!" cried Barney, and he made a pass at caressing tints, the travelers by tally-ho sighted a large double cabin in the distance.

"Well, if Ireland and Africa hez declared war, I The tally-ho was guided toward the remote, iso-covered a wagon train. This land-mark was a tall mountain which lifted "Barney! Pomp! Subside! Do you hear me?" Yank Beckbridge was appealed to for information regarding the lone cabin and the wagon train. "He called me a thafe and a liar, an' he said I The old trapper was familiar with all the trails

"That there are the trail ter the Oregon line, the The towering peak was almost a fac-simile of the "No, sah-no, sah! Dat's a copper-tottom lie, ther double log cabin ye see beside it are old Barker's tavern. Ther old cuss ain't never mo and alone on the plains presently," said Frank sug-stands in with 'em. His tavern is a handy place fer the Indians to buy whisky an' I consait that's why they are friendly to him. But ther tavern's got a bad name. They do say travelers hev stopped there that have never been seen or heard of Frank had to smile, and Barney subsided mut-since. But I reckon 'tain't so, fer there's only old Barker himself, who is bent nigh about double

Them gold mine squaws are rale beauties. Afore "Well, I've a desire to taste a change of diet, "Correct, ther trail are all hunk, an' if we kin I met ther Widder Kerridge I had a hankerin' in and so, friend Beckbridge, if you and Dr. Vaneyke the front of thelog cabin was reached.

"So far, so good. Now we'll test the larder of him to death. this Hotel de Frairie," said Frank, lightly.

dered old mai, who was bent nearly double and fought his fierce will-battle against the insidious Then he noiselessly leaped out. who hobbled with a cane, came out of the prairie power of the drug which now permeated his In his hand Beckbridge carried his rifle, and his tavern. He vas followed by a powerfully built system. young fellow, one of whose legs was doubled up Mentally Beckbridge vowed he would conquer "Now fer ther tally-ho an' ter give them rascals us?" called out Frank.

"Yes," scheeched the old woman. "Fine ante- Yank Beckbridge felt that he was the one obsta- but Yank could hear them inside of it.

Frank, and then old man Barker and his son, whom menaced them so nearly. seemed very intelligent and he cunningly flattered forms of their victims in hideous satisfaction. Frank, and seemed so curious and interested that "It's our game, Hanky, me son. We hev' trapped glanced along a plain trail which the tally-ho was with pardonable pride the young inventor took the hull outfit santin sure," said the old woman, being guided along. pleasure in explaining everything about the tally-exultantly. ho to him.

and all about how to work it.

his faence, it seemed possible, for there was a man. cunning gleam of satisfaction in old Barker's eyes "Correct, father. We'll plunder the coach, an' the vehicle by climbing up over the "boot" in the when he went into the inn to supper with Frank, then dispose of it as you've said. These here pil-rear.

The party was soon seated around the supper son. table doing ample justice to the excellent antelope "Make haste with ye, then. Don't yer recollect As yet they had not the slightest suspicion that ticularly good and all drank it.

heavily upon the floor, sliding like an inert body old woman.

from his chair insensible. their brains were benumbed, and they could not man.

stir.

The doctor managed to gasp, however:

"What can this mean?"

doctor was overcome and slid to the floor.

The trapper realized that he and his comrades son," piped the hag shrilly. were in a death-trap, and he fought against the influence of the drug with all the power of his house. strong will. But he, too, slid to the floor. Still he But a moment later Hank returned. did not entirely lose consciousness.

He saw a sudden transformation take place in mother. the appearance of the old man Barker and his "Nothing, only dad says you better lock up the side. Old Judas, jist you stop ther caravan right away his crutches.

"Now to plunder the tally-ho and run it over any chance stumble onter our guests."

Old Barker turned quickly to the main lever, the the ledge into Cheyenne canyon," hissed old "Good idee, Hanky. There's suthin' in yer old use of which Frank Reade had unsuspectedly ac-Barker.

CHAPTER XXXI.

YANK BECKBRIDGE TO THE FORE.

per and Indian scout, at different periods of his fastened them on the inside with a hook. and, so to say, look death in the face.

thrilling experiences, had the trave man found that led to the bar from the dining-room, and the strove to overcome the old trapper. himson in any situation which equaled the pres-sounds of bolt and lock told him she had quickly ent circumstances, in point of absolute, material, secured it.

horror. To meet peril when in possession of one's provement in his symptoms. strength and with the senses in a normal con- There was a hope in his heart now. dition, may be sufficiently trying but to confront He tried his strength as soon as the old woman found himself within reach of the lever board deadly danger enthralled by the power of a sub-departed. tle agent, which steals away the strength and Much to his joy the trapper regained his feet and were placed. holds all the attributes of one's nature, which are staggered to a sideboard on which there stood a bot- Suddenly Beckbridge put forth all his great ble past the power of adequate description.

And such was now the condition of the trapper, so he drank deeply. Yank Beckbridge knew all that transpired, and The whisky certainly acted as an excellent anti- of electricity to the steel rod.

his stalwart frame was enthralled.

Fortunately the trapper had drunk less of the moments. drugged beverage than any one of his comrades. He had listened anxiously ever since the old stricken by a thunderbolt. He was the last one served with the coffee, and he landlord and his son left the tavern, for the sound Beckbridge drew a deep breath. had only sipped a few swallows of it.

To this circumstance Beckbridge was undoubt- that they had started the tally-ho. edly indebted for his partial immunity from the in- Beckbridge hoped that, after all, the old tavern- me none while I'm a-gettin' Frank Reade and the fluence of the drug.

That he was apparently under the spell was a under way. circumstance to which he now owed his life. Had The trapper knew that every moment was price-tered. the treacherous, pretended cripples of the prairie less. He saw that Frank Reade and the others The trapper secured the hands and feet of the tavern once suspected that the trapper was taking were yet held by the mysterious thraldom of the murderous landlord and his son, and then he

Dr. Vaneyke and Beckbridge assented to Frank's cognizance of all they did and said, and that he had drug. He knew he could not revive them then, proposition, and so the tally-ho was stopped when penetrated the subterfuge of their assumed in- and that he must instantly direct his efforts to save firmity the assassins would have hastened to put the tally-ho.

This Beckbridge fully realized, and he almost him, removed the fastening of the shutter, and As the tally-lo stopped, a thick-set, broad shoul-closed his eyes while he watched and waited as he pushed it aside.

as though he had a stiff knee and who walked the mysterious power that was striving to drag a surprise. By powder, they are wuss nor ther with a crutch An aged, hag-like old woman up-him down to unconsciousness. He saw his friends pizen redskins," muttered Beckbridge. peared in the door, and so the travelers saw the and comrades at the mercy of the treacherous ene- He glided to the corner of the house, for he had whole family of the lone tavern at once.

my, and he understood that they and the great in-made his exit in the rear of it and peered around "We want to get supper. Can you accommodate vention upon which he depended to find the lost it. He saw the tally-ho yet standing where it had gold mine was in awful danger.

lope steak, corn-bread, and good coffee is ther sort cle which might yet, by divine mercy, be permitted He glided forward. o'grub as Mother Barker sets afore ther pilgrims." to interpose between his friends and the cruel fate. But at that very moment the tally-ho started and "Good erough too. We will partake," said in the persons of their treacherous hosts, which the old woman came to the front door. Beckbridge admiration at the electric conveyance. Old Barker like woman of the tavern glaring at the recumbent would be defeated.

The old bllow asked dozens of questions, and infermation I wanted out of that cute Yankee in-lution. He glided along back of the house where when at last supper was announced old Barker ventor. I reckon old Jerry Barker kin run that the grass was tall, and under cover of it he sped to understood the whole theory of the great invention outlandish 'lectric hearse all right, an' onct it are the timber. dashed to pieces at the bottom o' Cheyenne canyon, He arrived in the cover ahead of the tally-ho. For once Frank had been a trifle indiscreet with then who'll know what became on it?" said the old Presently it came along. Yank allowed it to pass.

Meanwhile the lame young man called Hank had grims carry good money on them, to say nothing Old Barker and his son were inside. Silently gone into the bar with the others of Frank's party, of gold watches and the like. When we hev run Beckbridge pushed aside the sliding door and and Barney and Pomp had "cut the dust out of ther coach inter ther canyon we'll go through 'em, leveled his brace of revolvers. The weapons covered their throats," as Pomp expressed it, several times, and drop them in the usual place," assented the the rascally father and son whose backs were steak and corn bread. The coffee was voted par-nothin'? Hev ye forgot suthin'? Didn't ye ell me anything might occur to foil their dread purpose. ye met Red Wolf up the range ter-day, an' that he But suddenly Beckbridge's voice rang out as stern But suddenly Frank experienced a strange sen-said he and his band o' Sioux would be here arter as fate: sation of numbness about the brain, and he fell their supply o' fire-water this sundown?" said the "Hands up, ye pizen white Injuns!" ordered the

"That's so. Come along, Hanky. The reds Within three minutes Barney and Pomp had al- must not know about our haul, or they will deso fallen insensible from their chairs. The doctor mand a share of the plunder. Let's get this job and Beckbridge knew what was taking place, but over with before the Injuns come," assented the old

"Trust yer old mother fer anything, Hanky, me leveled full at their hearts.

if the reds do come 'fore we get back they can't by Beckbridge sternly.

dad's head 'side live critters," piped the old creat- quainted him with, and immediately stopped the ure. "I'll do just as paw says."

husband, without delay.

fastened it behind her.

But never, in all the course of his varied and Beckbridge heard her go along a hall to a door Hank Barker was a powerful fellow, and he now yet he was powerless. Every nerve and muscle of dote for the drug which Beckbridge had taken. The shock which Hank Barker received was The trapper felt like himself once more in a few very severe. He uttered an awful yell and fell of wheels, but he had heard nothing to indicate "So far, so good. Now, ter bind these two

The trapper silently opened the window nearest belt-weapons were in their place.

been left. The rascals had not yet got it started, knew that if he rushed for the tally-ho then, the old he called "Hank," expressed their surprise and Old Barker and his son Hank stood with the hag-woman would shout an alarm and his purpose

He asked himself what was to be done, and he

At some distance was a clump of timber through "An' how neat an' slick an' simple I got all ther which the trail passed. Yank took a sudden reso-

Then he crept out and managed to gain the top of turned.

trapper.

CHAPTER XXXII.

THE SIOUX AT THE PRAIRIE TAVERN.

"Right you are, dad. Come along. Mother, you The consternation and surprise of the old tavernrun the ranch while we are gone. If Red Wolf keeper and his hopeful son may be imagined when, comes before we return let him have his grog, as they turned like a flash, upon hearing the voice "We're drugged!" answered Beckbridge, as the and don't be stingy with it nuther," said Hank. of the trapper, they beheld a pair of derringers

Their faces paled and they did not hesitate for Then the old man and Hank hurried out of the an instant about obeying the command Beckbridge had uttered.

Up went the hands of the two rascals at once. "Well, sonny, what's up now?" demanded the "Slow an' easy, varmints, slow an' easy. You hey had your innings an' now it's ther time fer our son. The former straightened up. The latter threw dining-room and fasten the window blinds so that yere afore I drop ye in yer tracks. Quick," said vehicle.

Hank hurried out again, and the old woman He knew that any attempt to draw a weapon proceeded to execute the will of old Barker, her would seal his own doom and so he made no such

YANK BECKBRIDGE'S career had often led him She first closed the heavy, solid, wooden blinds When the tally-ho stopped the trapper dropped into peril. As a border man, a plainsman, trap-over the two windows of the dining-room and down into it. Then Hank Barker sprang at him. The trapper's right hand derringer exploded, but life he had been compelled to face great dangers, Then she passed out of the kitchen-door and the bullet sped over Hank's shoulder and struck the old man, who uttered a yell and fell heavily.

A desperate hand to hand struggle ensued between them in the tally-ho.

All this time Beckbridge had felt a gradual im- They surged this way and that, pulling, pushing, striving flercely for the mastery until Beckbridge, who had been compelled to drop his weapons, where the several levers controlling the electricity most essential to the preservation of life, is terri-tle of whisky of which he had seen the old woman strength and swung Hank Barker against a steel drink. He concluded the liquor was all right, and guard-rail, and at the same moment precisely he depressed a small lever and sent a terrific current senseless. It was as though he had suddenly been varmints and leave 'em where they won't bother keeper might not be able to get the electric vehicle others out o' diffikilty. I s'pose I oughter skulp ther pizen reptiles, but I reckon I won't," he mut-them in a thicket beside the trail.

This accomplished Beckbridge entered the tally-Sioux war-whoops rang out. ho again, and, having turned the vehicle, he applied the electricity and sent it on its way back to the prairie tavern.

prairie inn as soon as he arrived there.

Scarcely had the vehicle stopped when out came Mother Barker.

woman was unable to see him.

a wire from the battery to the handle of the door of rob it and murder the travelers with the vehicle. the tally-ho, on the side of the vehicle toward the The Sioux band was that of Red Wolf, one of the tavern.

Beckbridge called out, imitating old Barker's whose arrival had been anticipated.

wheezy voice. "Come yere, old woman!"

"What brung ye back?" demanded the old crea-never have existed. the handle to open the door.

Then Beckbridge turned on the electricity. bled over backward, uttering a scream of pain and Barker.

anger. old creature so as to secure her and threw her and all carried fire-arms. under the porch of the cabin-like structure which A formidable force, indeed, was this band of red Barney. served as the inn.

"Traps and trappers, I reckon the tables are and his comrades felt that a battle was inevitable, for more than half that time. They had jursued bridge exultantly.

Then he ran into the house, and opening the speed of their ponies. door of the dining-room, he saw all his friends.

But they were not as he had left them.

Frank Reade was sitting up staring about him blankly, Barney had also partially recovered.

Pomp was still insensible.

The doctor also exhibited no signs of recovery, for the tally-ho. Beckbridge seized the whisky bottle from the They reached it ahead of the Indians, but only row trail. sideboard and gave Frank Reade a drink. Then had a moment to spare. he passed the flask to Barney. Both Frank and the Indians were within range. the Irishman drank eagerly. The liquor had the The savages adopted their usual method of atsame desirable effect on them as it previously had tack which has often been described, and began ridon the trapper. In a moment or so they regained ing in a circle around the tally-ho, discharging

In a few words Beckbridge explained all that went. understood how close he had come to the hour of and eddied around the tally-ho.

murtherin' min. It's not cripples they were at all holes at the Sioux. be whin the likes av me laves them. Where are the doctor, in tones of deep regret.

won't give us no more trouble, I reckon. I consait our red enemies behind," replied Frank. ther pizen critters expect their redskin friends, good doctor. ther Sioux, ter come here this night, as I heard "No. That is not to be thought of." 'em say when they thought they had put me to "If ther pizen varmints diskiver that ther Irish- For some time rumors had been received that sleep."

mon after me own heart. It's a petty yez ain't an powder," said Beckbridge. Irishman. What an illegant bit av a ruction yez At that instant the voice of the hag-like old wo-clusively of runaway soldiers. had wid the blackguard. But give me the flask man of the inn was heard. till I fetch Pomp to; the docthor is gettin' waked | She yelled to the redskins. up," said Barney.

Just then the doctor groaned and struggled up under the porch. Help! Help!"

to a sitting position.

Pomp were fully revived.

of the expected Indians," said Frank Reade.

to follow him, when suddenly the young inventor ting the cords that bound the beldame. paused, and exclaimed:

sound of a human voice under my feet."

ened intently.

from under the floor, was heard by all. voice.

"As I live, there is a prisoner in the cellar of this Barney. den of horrors!" exclaimed Frank Reade.

cue him. An Irishman niver yet deserted a fellow head and shoulders of Barney. lar," cried Barney.

"I'se wid yer, Irish," said Pomp.

tive, if such there is," said Frank Reade.

the tally-ho, lest the expected Indians should sud-sent the motive power from the battery to the ma- to his order. denly arrive," he added to Beckbridge and the chinery of his invention. The vehicle was turned "Those rascals shall find out they are not simdoctor.

Then the Irishman and the darky ran out into a solitary tavern. passage, found the cellar door and started down Then through the door in the roof leaped Bar- "I reckon I better, jist by the way of a bit of a dragged them both out of the tally-ho and left the stairs. Frank and the others went to the out-ney, and Pomp followed. The two sed along the side door, but at that moment a chorus of fierce ridge-pole to the end which the taly-ho would

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The trapper halted the tally-ho in front of the BARNEY AND POMP LEAP FOR LIFE - STRANGE RIDERS ON THE TRAIL.

STEALTHILY the Indians had approached the Beckbridge was inside the tally-ho and the old lonely prairie tavern. The crafty red warriors ho they failed to discover Pomp and Barney when had sighted the tally-ho from afar, and they had they first appeared on the roof. The trapper had a plan in mind to get the old concluded that it was a stage-coach, and that it woman out of the way for the time, and he had run would be right in their regular line of business to ho which was now slowly passing the end of the most dreaded sub-chiefs of the great Indian nation were leveled at the escaping men. But Barney As the old woman came rushing out of the inn to which he belonged. These were the Indians and Pomp leaped as the savages fired at them, and

> There was a secret treaty between the Indians over the roof. and old Barker, else the lonely prairie tavern could

ture, as she hastened to the tally-ho and grasped The landlord had agreed to sell the savages whisky at a rate much lower than that charged the vehicle through the door in the roof. them by the regular whisky traders, and in return It sped along the wire and the old woman tum-for this benefaction the Indians were friendly to

Beckbridge leaped out, knotted a rope about the They were all well mounted on sturdy mustangs cue made the likes av him faint, an' the first thing marauders, and at the sight of them Frank Reade An hour later the Indians had been left behind turned, and I consait I shill git Frank Reade an' When the travelers reached the outer door of the the tally-ho in vain. ther rest outen this diffikilty arter all," said Beck-prairie inn and discovered the Indians, they were But there was more trouble ahead. very close and dashing for the tally-ho at the full All at once as the tally-ho was entering a timdians!" cried Frank, and he shouted:

"Barney! Pomp! The Indians are upon us. "Halt!" Hasten! Hasten!"

"Ther pizen varmints are layed out. They speed of the tally-ho would soon enable us to leave "finds" of surpassing richness.

In some surprise, as his looks told, the Sioux way to the mines. "Now, to get away from here before the arrival from under the porch.

the expected Indians," said Frank Reade.

"Ugh! White squaw heap tied. Who do?" "the wolf soldiers of the mountains," as the de-their hair lifted!" cried the old woman.

Then a faint voice, which seemed to emanate tavern, dashed it open, and leaped inside like a and wore the skin of a wolf's head as a mask. pack of wolves on the trail of blood.

exclamation indicative of his fears for Pomp and them Barney exclaimed:

"Thin, begob, Barney O'Shea is the man to res-door in the roof of the log tavern appeared the we hev struck now, I am afther thinkin'!"

tomimic signal, which was understood. The young heard on, I reckon," Beckbridge enunciated. inventor began to work the levers governing the "Gollie, dar am bout twenty of dem, I 'specs,"

"Certainly, we must pause to liberate the cap-electricity, while the others discharged shot after put in Pomp. shot at the indians, who began to discover that they The leader of the strange band, who had ordered "While Barney and Pomp descend to the cel had attacked no ordinary stage-coach.

pass. The tavern was only one stor high with a low attic. The top of the tally-ho would be but a few feet below the roof presently. The purpose of Barney and Pomp was understood by Frank and his comrades. That the two brave felows meant to leap from the roof of the tavern upin the top of the tally-ho when the vehicle passed vas plain.

The Indians' attention being turned to the tally-

But just as they were about to leap for the tallycabin, the savages saw the brave pair.

They set up a loud yell, and a score of weapons they escaped the shower of bullets that whistled

The two jolly comrades alighted safely on the top of the tally-ho, and then it sped away.

Barney and Pomp dropped into the interior of

"Where is the captive?" asked Frank. "Dead, sure. Faith, and we found a white man chained in the cellar, but he was almost dead Red Wolf's band numbered forty odd warriors. of starvation, and the excitement of pronised reswe knew he was dead, and so we left hin," replied bered bottom land, near a water course, through "We must reach the tally-ho ahead of the In- which a narrow way had been cut, a stern voice rang out ahead, shouting:

The succeeding moment a file of strange, weird Then he and the trapper and Dr. Vaneyke ran riders all mounted on jet black horses, rode out of the timber and ranged themselves across the nar-

CHAPTER XXXIV.

A STRANGE PROPOSITION FROM A STRANGE SOURCE.

all their faculties and were on their feet. | their weapons at the vehicle in a volley as they | For some length of time previously to the date of this record the officers in command of United had transpired, and Frank Reade shuddered as he A veritable maelstrom of savage beings whirled States regulars, quartered at the several forts in Montana on garrison service, had been annoyed doom. Even Barney was impressed.

But his rage burst out presently.

Be gorra, an' I'll bate the heads av the two weapons and discharged a volley through the port
The moment Frank Reade and his comrades beyond all precedent by desertion. The gold fever gained the interior of the vehicle, they seized their bad smitten the men who had hired themselves out to stand up and be shot at for the munificent stipend of thirteen and a half dollars a month.

at all, do ye say? Well, begob, it's cripples they'll "If Barney and Pomp were only with us," said Almost daily deserters had fled from the forts and set out for the mountains, where new discovthey? Show me the blackguards?" cried Barney. "Yes. In that case I could start on and the eries had recently been made in the way of gold

Fort Shaw, at the base of the Northern Montana we had better git out o' here quick though, fer "But we cannot desert our friend," continued the range, as the government post nearest the scene of the new mining operations, had suffered most by reason of desertion.

man an' ther nigger are in the tavern, they are the deserters, who were diligently hunted and ar-"Right yez are, begob. Shure an' yez are a registered fer skulpin'. They are, I consait, by rested, and returned to the fort when found, had established a camp in the mountains composed ex-

Emigrants told startling stories of a band of strange weird riders, clothed in soldiers' uniform, "Come, Red Wolf, help me! Git me out from whose bodies were surmounted by the heads of wolves, who had stopped and robbed them on the

Some few moments later, both the doctor and chief rushed his pony up to the porch, threw him- These reports had been confirmed by prospectors self off his animal and pulled the old woman out and Indian traders, and Frank Reade and his friends had heard the reports of the doings of

As soon, therefore, as the occupants of the elec-"Ther critters o' ther coach o' iron, an' there's tric tally-ho beheld the file of strange looking "Hark! what was that? I thought I heard the two on 'em inside the tavern now a-waitin' to hev riders who suddenly appeared before them on the narrow trail leading through the belt of timber, Silence fell upon the party at once, and all list- A dozen savages heard this, and with loud, flerce, they believed they had encountered the deserters, exultant yells, they bounded for the door of the for every rider was clad in the United States blue,

Strange, grotesque and startling was the appear-"For God's sake, save me!" murmured the Frank Reade shuddered, the doctor uttered an ance of the singularly attired party, and at sight of

"Worra! me soul! But look at the wolves wid But a moment or so elapsed, and then through a the bodies av min. Faith, an' it's a party av divils

"They are varmints who mean to give us troucreature in distress, an'so here goes for the cel- The Irishman gave Frank and his friends a pan-ble, but they are only the runaway soldiers we hev

the electric tally-ho to halt, repeated his command lar, we three will remain to look to the safety of Frank Reade's manipulation of the electric levers as the vehicle came on, and no attention was paid and headed so as to run close by the side of the ply 'holding up' a stage coach," said Frank Reade, sternly.

suggested Beckbridge, raising his rifle.

"No, it is not necessary. We can speed through "Gollie! I'se___" their ranks, and If they fire a volley, their bullets. Pomp cut short his speech, as he was compelled called into the council. cannot penetrate the metal plating of the tally-ho," to dodge out of the way as Yank expectorated a "We need a keen, superior trailer, one who can objected Frank.

Beckbridge.

But it seemed that the motive of the deserters stepped on his favorite corn. was not yet rightly comprehended by the party of Meanwhile Frank Reade had set the tally-ho in and agile warrior to his side, and indicated that the leader of the deserters ordered his men aside.

They fell back, and then the leader called out: "I know you! Frank Reade, the great inven- The deserters pursued for a short distance, but Then the whites conversed with the young Intor, and a party of comrades are inside the electric they soon abandoned the chase as futile. tally-ho. We would be friendly, and I have a comalone and reveal a great secret."

"What do you think, doctor? It seems to me Beckbridge. we might as well hear what the fellow has to say,"

Frank remarked.

"Yes, it can certainly do no harm," assented the old scientist.

sary levers until the speed of the tally-ho was tice involved in this mine business. Had old followed the instructions of the white schemers to gradually diminished, and the vehicle was finally Getchewan a right to give away the lost gold the letter. at a stand-still.

"Now advance alone and I will hear what you session?"

nave to say."

the tally-ho, Frank opened it and the deserter saw tice. No doubt they murdered or drove away the ling developments, of which Frank Reade and his him.

"I will make my business known in as few discovery," replied Frank. words as possible," said the latter. "Me an' me pardners have lately been on the trail of a couple of handsome Injun squaws who came to a trading post a few days ago to sell some gold."

the handsome Indian women and gold. But the inventor and he went on:

"We meant to find out where them squaws got Frank Reade and his friends had eluded.

their gold and I reckon we have."

and discovered the lost gold mine and seized the sought to remove the obstacle in the way of his same, seemed likely to be the next revelation he possessing the Baldwin fortune by causing the was to hear.

rades as well were suspensefully interested.

"Yes," the deserter went on, "we have tracked tive reached their band. trance of an old mine. I'll stake my life."

"Well?" pronounced Frank interrogatively. warriors on guard at the mouth of the mine, if such trapper. it are. It's a mighty queer thing fer Sioux and When, as they soon did after his arrival, the two Blackfeet to jine hands, but in this case it has been white outlaws questioned Santah as to whether done."

the deserter paused.

your machine on wheels and all your electric fix-the old trapper called Little Sunshine had been by ings you can scare or drive off the reds and help him left in Helena. us seize the mine. We'll give you one-fifth share Until that moment Adam Marvan had supposed of all the gold we find."

"Thanks. But we must decline your offer, as old trapper, Yank Beckbridge. we have reason to believe the mine you speak of "Ha! ha! At last the child whose life stands saying:

the old mine," replied Frank.

The deserter uttered a howl of rage. an infernal Yankee, graspin' ter rob yer betters, little Sunshine's whereabouts. cuss ye. You are a shark, a pirate, a gold hyena, But Brant Forges grasped his companion's arm lay between the tally-ho and the open prairie. a sneak ter get at my secret and then set down on and hissed sternly: me this away," fairly bellowed the irate deserter.

"Hold on, there, you hev called names enough," Sunshine. At least not for the present!" The deserter dodged so suddenly that his wolf's tone of anger and surprise. head disguise fell off, and the red and bloated face of a villainous looking rascal was revealed.

"You old Injun eater, what yer mean by liftin' Yank Beckbridge. "You're a-a--"

The fellow's words were suddenly choked off in a most novel and ridiculous way.

from between his own jaws and with a skillful toss me." threw the quarter of a pound of "cud" down the throat of the insulting bully as he opened wide his capacious mouth.

the electric coach, but he sputtered and strangled so that he could not utter a word.

Barney and Pomp roared.

"Begob, an' it's a nate way to stop the jaw av a interest of the other," said Brant Forges. blackguard, so it is. But, faith, an' it's a rope in- After this a long consultation ensued between arm, and kindly cared for him. Then he was hint, put a small rentilator in one of their skulls," stead av a quid av tobacco that ought to be chockin' the two scoundrels, during which they perfected a the loikes av the crature!" cried Barney.

'im!" cried Barney, enraged because Pomp had for his services," said Adam Marvan.

the electric tally-ho; for, seeing that no attention motion again, and before the discomfitted deserter trailer the whites desired was at their service. was paid to his second command to halt, the could order his band to interpose, the vehicle had "Black Arrow is the greatest trailer of all my

Frank Reade. If you will stop I will advance the dead gold mine Indians seem to have already those who proposed to eventually follow.

"Yas, and we shall have to do some tall fighting trail for a moment.

to git possession of the mine, I consait."

gentlemen may not have considered," said Dr. the tally-ho in point of speed. Then Frank depressed and reversed the neces- Vaneyke. "There is a question of right and jusmine, and have we the right to wrest it from the Then said Frank to the leader of the deserters: hands of the Indian women who are now in pos-

"As to that, I think we may conclude that the The date dressed rode forward to the door of Indian must have acquired possession by injus-Spaniards to whom the mine belonged by right of comrades had no idea.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Frank Reade started as the fellow mentioned THE TRAIL OF THE LOST GOLD MINE CANNOT BE FOUND.

deserter seemed not to observe the emotion of the WE are now compelled to return to the united bands of white outlaws and Sioux Indians whom Brant Forges, the half-breed chief who meant Again Frank Reade gave a violent start. The to rob Beckbridge of the secret of the lost gold as guide-posts upon it could not be found. possibility that the deserters had forestalled him, mine, and Adam Marvan, the arch plotter, who what to do in this dilemma was a ques Little wonder was it that Frank and his com-questioned Santah, the Sioux who had been set free by the inventor's party, closely when the cap-them two squaws to ther entrance of a cave in the Santah was an acute listener, and he possessed Bmountings that warn't never made by natur. Ther a retentive memory, and so he remembered all that party.

Now it chanced that the cunning Sioux had over-"But at ther mouth of the mine er cave er what heard some remarks which caused him to undernot we are stopped. Ther squaws are Blackfeet stand that one who was called "Little Surshine" Injuns, but they hev got a small army of Sioux had been left in Helena by Yank Beckbridge the that the search for the lost gold mine must for the

there was a little white girl in the tally-ho, the In-Marvan most desired to obtain.

"We want you to go in pardners with us. With Straightway Santah told that a white girl whom that little Sunshine was with her foster-father, the footsteps of balmy fall.

gold as the only living heir," said Marvan exult- make tracks as fast as possible."

"Because the child must first serve me."

"How do you mean?"

"True."

"Very well. To save her life I take it he would to move. Yank suddenly popped a huge quid of tobacco even surrender the secret of the lost gold mine to The trapper, aided by all the rest, who were in unison."

"Ah, I comprehend."

daring plan for the abduction of Little Sunshine.

Finally the great Sioux chief, Sitting Bull, was tobacco flood in alarming proximity to his head. be relied upon to trail the white men who have fled "Just as you say. But I'd just like fer to gin "Float the nagur. Sind him adrift on a terbacker in their 'bad medicine' wagon. Can Sitting Bull um one good volley ter wake 'em up," replied tide. Sure, an' we have no use fer the likes av furnish us with such a brave? We will pay well

The red chief assented, and he called a young passed his band and was proceeding swiftly on its tribe, and he is as swift of foot as the antelope,", said Sitting Bull.

dian. It was arranged that he should trail the "So, so. I think we shall find your conjectures electric coach, go where it might, and that he was munication of the greatest importance to make to as to what might transpire true. The squaws of to leave certain markings along the trail to guide > rallied the Sioux to their support," said Frank to Very soon the Indian took the trail of the electric tally-ho and from that time he never lost the

Of course he was far behind the electric vehicle "I have been troubled by a reflection which you most of the time, for no man could compete with

The Indian was faithful to his master, and he

At regular intervals he marked the trail in the manner agreed upon, so that when Adam Marvan and Brant Forges came to traverse the same route, they would have no doubt as to their course.

All this presaged stirring adventures and start-

But to return to the inventor and his friends.

The tally-ho entered the mountains the day after the encounter with the deserter. Beckbridge knew many of the passes and old Indian trails, but soon the explorers passed beyond the range of the trapper's stamping grounds and he could no longer guide them.

Thereafter they were obliged to depend upon the old Indian map.

Often it was consulted, but at length even the map seemed at fault, for the landmarks indicated What to do in this dilemma was a question of serious importance.

It was finally decided, after some three weeks death of Owen Strathmore's Little Sunshine, had been spent in vainly exploring the mountains in quest of the lost trail, that, as winter was coming on, and already there were indications that the close of the October days would no doubt witness the advent of snow storms and unfavorable weather, it would be advisable to seek some sheltered fact are we have run the Injun squaws to the en- had passed between the white men of Frank Reade's place and establish a winter camp, or else set out on the return journey and defer further explorations until the following spring.

> The tally-ho was not provisioned for a winter sojourn in the mountains, and prudence suggested present season be abandoned.

It was with extreme reluctancy that the several members of the party admitted this fact, but there 'To what does all this tend?" asked Frank, as dian said no. But he added the information Adam was no gainsaying it, and therefore, with many regrets, Frank Reade finally turned the heads of his electric team in the direction of home one day as the month of October was drawing to a close.

Already the weather was cold, for in that high altitude the chill of winter follows closely in the

Beckbridge shook his head and advised haste, is the property of one of our comrades, and instead between me and a golden inheritance shall be "I kin feel the snow in the air, and the Lord of one-fifth we shall probably take all the gold in found. Once I hold the proofs of her death I can help us all if a blizzard should catch us up here in return to the east and claim old Squire Baldwin's the mountains. Since we hev got to go back, let's

Bet yer life you won't take that gold. You are antly as soon as Santah had revealed the secret of But no great speed could be attained in the devious passes and winding mountain trails which

The tally-ho had rounded a bend in the mount-"But I say you must not harm the child, little ain trail two days later, when all heard cries of distress from the wayside. There had been a said Beckbridge sternly, as he raised his rifle. "And why not, pray?" demanded the other, in a high wind the preceding night, and now the explorers saw a tree had been blown down near by.

The cries of distress they heard were uttered by some one under the tree, it seemed. Frank. Reade "Why. do you not discern my drift? You are stopped the tally-ho, and he and Beckbridge yer gun on me?" cried the deserter, addressing aware that the child little Sunshine is as dear to alighted. The trapper stalked ahead of Frank, the old trapper as if she was his own daughter." and in a moment discovered an Indian under the fallen tree, where he lay pinned to the earth unable > called upon for assistance by Frank, managed to move the fallen tree and extricate the Indian.

"Certainly. My project must be plain-I mean to The Indian became insensible before the tree use the child little Sunshine to secure the gold was removed. The doctor, however, soon revived The rascal tried to order his men to charge on secret, and then you can do with her as you like." him, and then it was found that his left arm was "I agree. We are partners, and we must work crushed and his shoulder severely injured. A small blood-vessel in the arm had been ruptured, "Yes, and the interest of one must become the and the Indian had fainted from loss of blood.

The doctor and the old trapper set the Indian's was resumed.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

LITTLE SUNSHINE IN CAPTIVITY.

to the theory advanced by Dr. Vaneyke.

canic eruptions or other changes in nature of a duck. mountains since the map of the Indians had been Frank, just as Pomp made a butt. made.

came doubtful. Beckbridge was ready to despair. fight any more. He picked himself up with "Begob, the white blackguards wid the little gal white captive of the lost gold mine, regarding laugh. per's regret was so deep.

When the journey was resumed after the wound- air became full of white flakes. ed Indian was found the trapper remarked: "Snow!" exclaimed Frank Reade.

a sort o' galvanic influence on my huntin' knife have a big storm," said Beckbridge. and rifle when ther's a red around. But sartin The doctor had been conversing with the wound-ing. when an enemy is helpless, even if he are a red-ed Indian, and he now said: skin, Yank Beckbridge ain't ther critter ter go back "The savage tells me he is a Sioux, and that his served to break the spell of the dread discovery he on him, by powder! It don't run in the Beck-name is Black Arrow." It seemed old Good was cumin' hum from a hunt, marked the trail that was to guide the enemy on law chief. when he run agin a wounded Injun beside the trail his preservers' tracks. my uncle Good he up and poured rattlesnak eile for the tally-ho must be found soon all felt. But pulsively leaped from the vehicle at discovering on the wounded red an' fixed him O. K."

The old trapper's merry eyes twinkled, but he voice of Black Arrow was heard.

looked solemn.

ancient one," commented the doctor dryly.

"Sartin. Thar was my uncle Noah on my will keep them warm." mother's side. He was an old trapper. I consait The tally-ho was quickly got in motion. he was a sort o' a sailor, too, fer he got up a first Through an opening in a narrow pass among blinding rays, making the defile like an enchanted class float jest in time to git aboard with his men-the rocks it was guided. But all at once the si-realm, as the snow flakes caught the gleam. agria afore the big flood come."

ination is prone to lead you out of the trail of behind the tally-ho.

veracity," said the doctor, smiling.

and Pomp a chance to cook a supper. But as Santah, the Sioux, and the redskin yet wore the they were kindling a fire Beckbridge called atten-old trapper's precious buckskin breeches, tion to bear tracks and the imprint of Indian moc- "Bars, panthers, an' bufflers!" yelled Beckcasins in the soft soil.

me hez made up me moind to hev the glory av es! H'ar goes ter git 'em back, for the sake o' the the bastes, be the powers!" cried Barney.

hand, and disappeared among the rocks. In a stricken motionless or turned to stone by the sight few moments a yell was heard, and back came of a Medusa. Barney and Pomp closely pursued by a huge The Indians' ranks parted, and behind them grizzly.

Pomp bounded ahead of Barney as they came in held between two desperate-looking white men. sight of the tally-ho. But the next instant down he went. Barney fell over Pomp, and as he tum-trapper.

bled he yelled:

"Kill the nagur! Begob, he hez assassinated the loikes av me. It's a trick av the blackguard to murther a gentleman in cold blood that made him fall."

"Dat's a lie, sah!" roared Pomp.

them, and such yells as emanated from their lips trailed the tally-ho down at last. as they scrambled about ought to have frightened Subsequently to the departure of Black Arrow, yer life, as sure as ther world stan's. He will, by any ordinary grizzly out of his wits.

tally-ho, for it was around a bend just beyond the Marvan and Brant Forges, had temporarily left What do you say in reply to my proposal?" spot where the Irishman and Pomp had fallen, their band and proceeded to Helena. Spot where the Irishman and Pomp had fallen, their band and proceeded to Helena.

There they managed to locate the peaceful home hour for consideration."

Beckbridge shouted:

shot!"

Then suddenly "bang!" went the old trapper's Baldwin fortune. gun, and over toppled the great bear. It was a The time which had been wasted by Frank Reade will be there with the child. I shall be prepared great shot-that of a true marksman. The bullet and his friends in a vain quest for the lost trail had for treachery, so take care." though struck by lightning.

ultaneously, and off came the Irishman's coat and had so plainly and indelibly marked.

yelled:

"Come on, ye murtherin' divil yez! Come on, riors led by Santah. ye blackguard av the wurruld! Begob, is it lavin' The latter was a Southern Sioux, and he and his "No, by powder." ninst the likes av me in a whisk!"

self, Irish."

"An' yez call the a fool! Faith an' I'm a paceful Santah and his braves were bound to the service The childish voice was full of pathetic appeal, mon, an' I am thryin' to git away from the loikes of the white outlaws at least for the present. the little one's arms were involuntarily stretched der, an' I'll take no more av yer dares," roared their own race if they ever encountered them at the Barney, and he made a quick jump and hit Pomp lost gold mine, was, of course, an open question. on the ear.

but he shook his head pretty smartly.

All were ready to admit that in all likelihood vol-iron head!" cried Barney, as Pomp began to home, in the power of the white outlaws.

He plunged at Barney head first like a flash. discovered by the other members of the party, and Now the prospect of success the next spring be-Down went the Irishman, and he did not want to Barney shouted:

his partner, the father of Little Sunshine, as we All but Beckbridge seemed to have overlooked luck to them!" know. It was on this account that the old trap- the fact that there were Indian tracks about. But "Back to the tally-ho for your life, Yank! The the trapper was alert and watchful. Presently the redskins are creeping along the rocks, intent upon bridge fambly. There was a great uncle o' mine This was the truth. The Indian whose life Frank utmost celerity and bounded back to the tally-ho. what figgers in history. That feller was Good Reade and the old trapper had saved was the very Samaritan Beckbridge, an' I hern ther parson Indian who had trailed them so long in the service per by his enemies, for his immediate was down ter ther fort read book if Marvan and Brant Forges. He it was who had not in accordance with the plans of the white out-

"Let the white man go through the pass yonder, Now suddenly the inventor revolved the reflec-"Your family certainly must have been a very and where the great mountain sometimes smokes tors of the electric lights so that they would radiate they shall find a shelter where the medicine-fires in the rear, and in a moment the wonderfully bril-

lence of the mountain solitude was rudely broken.

Glancing back, the men of the tally-ho saw a leaden hail upon you!" cried Frank Reade to the That evening a halt was made to give Barney dozen Indians, and among them Beckbridge sighted enemy.

bridge. "Thar he are—the pizen red varmint as Forges. "Begob, an' it's a grizzly hear that the loikes av wears the widder's-I mean my buckskin breechslautherin'. Come on wid yez, Pomp, an we'll kill widder, or lose what hair time hez left old Yank!"

The trapper recklessly bounded out of the tally-The two reckless fellows rushed away, rifles in ho. But the succeeding moment he paused as if

Yank Beckbridge beheld his darling Little Sunshine

Brant Forges and Marvan confronted the CHAPTER XXXVII.

CUNNING VERSUS CUNNING.

THE desperate and determined enemies of the the Sioux trailer who had been sent to track the powder!"

Barney and Pomp were on their feet almost sim-follow the trail of the tally-ho which Black Arrow as you be fur."

an Irish gintleman fer bear meat yez are afther do- braves were not members of the northern branch of At that moment Little Sunshine, who had thus in'? Begob, an' it's a dead nagur there'll be fore- the great aboriginal nation, which the statement of far remained speechless, said: the deserter-chief seemed to indicate, had become "Oh, papa Yank, take me away from these bad "Go 'long wid yah! Don't make a fool of yer- the allies of the Blackfoot Amazons of the lost gold men! Please do! I am afraid of them. Oh, so mine.

placed in the tally-ho, and the homeward journey av yez widout a foight; but, begob, I'll run no fur- Whether they would take sides against the men of Never during the whole period of his long career as "Dat's all right, come agin!" cried the darky, plainsman, trapper and Indian fighter had old Yank Beckbridge been confronted with such a OF course the failure of Frank Reade's party to "Whoop! But it's an elegant ruction intirely, startling surprise as when he was about to rush find the landmarks in the mountains set down Will yez have the politeness to stand up til me loike upon Santah to secure his precous buckskin in the old Indian map of the route was attributed a man, bad scran til yez. Faith, I have me eye on breeches he beheld Little Sunshine, whom he at yez, an' I see yez are gittin' up steam for yer cast-that moment believed to be secure in her Helena

At the same moment that Yank Beckbridge saw similar character had been at work in the Montana "Come, come, stop that no fighting!" cried the sweet-faced child who had enshrined herself in the most sacred citadel of his heart, she was

He was in his own mind well convinced that the such a rueful expression that all were obliged to are the two spalpeens named Brant Forges an' Adam Marvan, what Pomp and mesel heard plotwhom the old chief Getchewan had spoken, must be There was bear-steak for supper that evening. |tin' agin' the trapper an' the little colleen. Bad cutting off your return!" cried Frank Reade, as through the steadily falling snow and the accumu-"The Injun lood-stun in my natur ginerally hez "Yes, and I'm desperate afeard we're agoin' ter lating shadows, he observed certain movements of the Sioux which were in accordance with his warn-

> As though the words of the young inventor had had just made, Yank Beckbridge turned with the

Not a single shot was fired at the retreating trap-

Frank Reade had turned off the electricity and what all the other trappers had passed by. But Faster and faster fell the snow. That a shelter halted the tally-ho, when Yank Beckbridge imthey knew not where to seek it. Suddenly the Santah, the wearer of his beloved buckskin breeches.

liant light of the magnesium coils, in combustion, was shooting back through the falling snow in "Advance at your peril! We have our electric "Indeed, I think, friend trapper, that your imag- A wild Sioux war-whoop echoed through the defile battery in readiness. Dare to enter the passage we occupy and the deadly battery shall belch forth its

"We don't mean to charge you now. We have another plan to secure what we want. I have suthin' to say to Yank Beckbridge," said Brant

"They have got Little Sunshine in their power, I consait. Old Yank would lay down his life for the little one, and he's got ter listen to the pizen varmints," breathed the trapper in an undertone.

Then aloud he cried:

"Speak out, ye 'farnal renegade!" "You see the child here in our power, so you understand we hold a trump card in the little game we are playin'. Very good. Now to the p'int. I know you have the map of the trail leading to the lost gold mine of the first Spanish treasure-seekers. That map I want. I make you an offer. Surrender the map, and the child, Little Sunshine, shall be delivered to you unharmed. Refuse, and she shall meet her death before your eyes," spoke Brant Forges.

"Varmint," replied the trapper, with difficulty The succeeding instant the bear pounced upon old trapper and his "pard's" little daughter had controlling his emotions. "If ye harm one hair of that leetle one's head, Yank Beckbridge will hev'

It seemed that the grizzly had not yet sighted the electric conveyance, the two plotting villains, Adam "Braggadocia! Speak to the point, old trapper.

"I've got ter think. Gimme time. Say half an of which Little Sunshine had become a member, "That I will do. Then if you conclude to come "Look out! I'm a-going to give the grizzly a and it was not long before the evil men found an to my terms, you will come or send some one with opportunity to abduct the child heiress of the great the map to the entrance of the passage in which you now are. At the expiration of the half hour I entered one of the huge animal's little pig-like consumed weeks, as we have intimated, and there- "Supposin' I agree ter give up the map fer Little eyes, and he fell, with a bullet in his brain, as fore ample time was granted the outlaw and his Sunshine, how will the exchange be made when we friend to rejoin the band with Little Sunshine and meet. I consait I sha'n't trust sich a pizen critter

"You must trust my word. I'll meet you alone down in the dirt went his hat, while he doubled When Brant Forges rejoined his band and set at the spot I have mentioned, and if you give me up his fists and danced about like mad as he out to follow the marked trail his force was aug-the map I'll give you the child. We shall be man mented by the accession of a party of Sioux war- to man. Are you afraid to meet me alone?" said Forges.

very, very much afraid!"

kind and loving bster-parent.

Little Sunshine a captive.

But the outlaw pushed the child before him as a The other three Sioux warriors crept forward in that, what?" said Frank Reade.

shield and called out tauntingly: "Now fire, if you dare!"

ed themselves fercely as though he could have bosom. torn Brant Forges limb from limb.

man? but by powder, he'll do it some day if he an' The arch-traitor glided backward, leaving the to find other caves and they will enter them." Brant Forges both live!" the trapper sibilated.

"Beckbridge, you are placed in a trying position ledge crouching beside it. his hand upon the trapper's shoulder.

Beckbridge bowed his head and the doctor con-reach.

tinued:

some of the landmarks on the map in such a way brave old trapper. that the villain cannot tell it has been tampered with. Do you grasp my meaning?" "Yes."

"Then you can surrender the original map to he outlaw in exchange for the child, and the map will not benefit the scoundrel or aid him to find rare guard. The red nagurs an' the white black-Sunshine. Ther pixen varmints will not spare tue is gold mine."

Fix ther map. I'll balk ther pizen critter yet and an' mesel' av a chance fur an illegant bit av a ruc-Ive Little Sunshine, too, by powder," cried the tion when we kin save the ould man at the same crapper in a low voice.

"Your idea is an excellent one," assented Frank

Reade. "But I suspect treachery."

The movements of the crew of the electric tallyho were entirely concealed from the enemy when Frank, who was not without misgivings. they retired inside the vehicle.

the route to the lost gold mine, and Dr. Vaneyke the shadows hid them. set to work to copy it.

tist produced the needed chemicals, and the work attack, Barney and Pomp rushed to their old cried Beckbridge, incredulously. of obliterating the essential landmarks on the friend's support. Original map was carefully attended to.

the top of the tally-ho and informed the outlaw that he was ready to make the proposed exchange.

Then Brant Forges advanced to the entrance of the narrow pass, leading little Sunshine by the hand.

Beckbridge went to meet him.

At the entrance of the pass was a great projectng rock. Beside this Forges paused. The rock exended ten feet in the direction of the tally-ho. Forges said.

"Place the map on the end of the ledge and retire ten paces. I will come and get the map, and preservation then, and the tally-ho went on his gratitude. Listen." if it's all right I'll send the child forward."

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

THE BLIZZARD-IN THE CAVE.

MEANWHILE, the snow-storm had been almost smoke will keep us all warm." clone of snow and wind was assuredly at hand. Then, soon a scene of wonders was revealed. A peril. w pass furiously.

entle flakes, but on the contrary it was now pul-from the rock-ribbed ceiling. Brized, like frozen sand, cutting, suffocating. The And as the tally-ho advanced, the air became discovered a pit of fire ahead.

ture of the storm.

night had fallen, and but for the rare brilliancy of eyke. the electric light Yank could not have discerned "Undoubtedly we are approaching the crater of the brink of the crater. his way a foot. But the light was reflected beyond an unknown volcano, whose outer opening has All turned and Pomp gave a yell, while the wool the entrance of the pass.

The trapper heard the voice of the outlaw and to make eruptions." also that of Little Sunshine. He caught, as he drew Thus said the old scientist. near them, the faint outlines of their fur muffled The heat finally became so intense that Frank, sight, and one certainly calculated to inspire ter-

by the outlaw.

quick !" the child responded.

as Brant Forges had directed, and secured it The situation of Frank Reade and his friends jaws gaped, and a hissing roar came forth. there by placing a heavy stone on one corper of the was now most alarming, although immediate dan- "Worra! Worra! It's the divil's own knake!" buckskin parchment.

out:

"Ther map is on ther ledge."

Branc Forges did not answer, save for a guttural the spring thaw came.

The remarkable creature vanished, seen say expressive of his satisfaction. But he darted "It's a hard thing ter say, but it's plain we are down into the flery pit of the volcano.

out toward the oll trapper, who had been to her a forward. Four Indians crouched beside the ledge shut up here in the mountain for the winter," said in the rear of the place Forges had occupied. He Beckbridge. Tears of anger ind pity were in Yank's eyes. His gave them a signal as he advanced. One of them "Do you really think so? But there is no need rifle sprang to his shoulder, and for an instant the threw his blanket over the head of Little Sunshine to ask that. A moment's reflection tells me you deadly sights covered the arch-villain who held and carried her backward, while she was unable to are right. But how are we to live? We have proutter a cry.

the footsteps of Brant Forges. He reached the All were silent. The doctor shook his head. end of the ledge, groped about upon it for a mo-Beckbridge seemed at loss to reply. The old trapper lowered his rifle. His broad ment, and then clutched the buckskin parchment "The prospect is disheartening. But we may chest rose and fell swiftly. His great hands clench-Beckbridge had left there and thrust it into his consider that our enemies will perish in the storm,

"Come on!" he cried. "Now I send the child "No," said Black Arrow, the wounded Indian "Yank Beckbridge never yit scalped a white to meet you. Brant Forges keeps his word!"

three Indians who had now gained the end of the "Well, we may as well make the best of the sitand you have our sympathy. Now let me offer The outlaw had planned his trap well. The trance of the cave to prevent a surprise when the you some advice," said the good doctor, placing three Indians were to fall upon the trapper and blizzard subsides," Frank advised. slay him without mercy when he came within their Then wires were gotten out of the supply locker Beckbridge advanced the instant Forges called cave so as to form an impassable barrier. "In less than half an hour I can make an exact out for him to do so. He reached the end of the Then one end of this wire labyrinth was connectcopy of the original map. I have with me chemi-ledge. Then, like a trio of flerce demons of the ed with the electric battrey and the whole wire barcals by the application of which I can obliterate dreadful storm, the three Indians leaped upon the ricades was charged with electricity.

> through his set teeth as he battled for his life. But when he left the tally-ho Barney said:

"Be me soul, Masther Frank, and it's Pomp an' He said: mesel' as will be afther follyin' the ould mon, as a "Now the murderous outlaws will kill Little guards will be afther thryin' on some root game her, since they have the map." Doctor, you are a friend ter tie too, by powder. wid the loikes av him, an' sure yez won't rob Pomp time, plaze the fates av it."

hatched out inside ob my cranicum."

The old trapper produced the old Indian map of crept close to the wall of the narrow passage, and while she is among these mountains," said the

This task was accomplished, and then the scien- laws had left to fall upon Beckbridge made their er ye'll find him powerful dangersome, I consait," skin over.

third Indian fell.

Then the three whites fell back. Beckbridge against the tribe." Sunshine.

Old Yank was well-nigh wild with alarm for the if they want to do so, I take it."

fate of Little Sunshine now.

through the storm. Soon the mouth of a cavern was reached. per, and he spoke long and earnestly.

"Go on," said the injured Indian, Black Arrow. When he had concluded, Yank Beckbridge's here and there hung pendant glittering formations gained. The air was full of snow. But it no longer fell in which were like grand chandeliers suspended Finally, as they drew near the heart of the moun-eath-dealing, blinding character of the snow in warmer all the time. The explorers were filled Its general formation enabled the old scientist to the source of heat. They asked themselves what cano. The wind moaned, shrieked and howled. The i was, and the explanation was given by Dr. Van- "Begorrah, fat's that!" suddenly yelled Barney, forms through the shifting curtain of driving snow. although curious to explore further, was compell-ror. "Little Sunshine!" Beckbridge shouted, as he ed to retreat. He ran the tally-ho back to a Up from the brink of the crater all at once crawl-of the existence of the caves of "the medicine-time to time been discovered in the ocean.

ger might be guarded against.

Then retreating ten paces, Beckbridge called The blizzard, which raged furiously outside the Frank and the doctor had brought their rifles visions on hand which may last a month. After

I think," finally said Dr. Vaneyke.

"The Sioux with the white outlaws know where uation and set up an electric barricade at the en-and they were laced across the entrance of the

This done, Beckbridge was left in charge of the "A trap, by powder!" gritted Beckbridge tally-ho with the wounded Indian, and the others went forward to explore the cave further.

Yank Beckbridge was bowed down with grief.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

SNOW-BOUND IN THE MOUNTAINS.

"Gollie, Irish. Dat's de idee what hab jiss done "BLACK ARROW hears the white man's words. The trailer is his friend because he saved his life "Excellent, Barney. Go by all means," assented when the tree held him fast. Black Arrow speaks with a straight tongue, and he tells the white Pomp and Barney quickly left the tally-ho. They trapper that the little white squaw will not be slain wounded Sioux.

When the three Indians, whom the white out- "What's that, Injun! Don't trifle with old Yank.

"Black Arrow's tongue travels a straight trail. "Whack!" came the fighting Irishman's shillalah These mountains of the medicine fires are by all When all was done Yank Beckbridge appeared on down on the head of one of the redskins. | the Sioux held sacred to the great Manito, and in "Thud!" went Pomp's head in the stomach of no case will the red men allow blood to be shed another of the murderous trio as he butted the red-among them save in hand to hand fight. The traditions of the medicine men say the life of a The old trapper's derringer exploded, and the captive must not be taken among these mountains, or the anger of the great Manito will be aroused > knew Forges did not mean to surrender Little "Thank ye fer them words, redakin!" exclaimed Beckbridge. "Ye mean ter say ther Sioux won't The brave trio regained the shelter of the tally-ho. let the white outlaws put Little Sunshine ter death

"The white trapper has heard aright, and now But nothing more could be done looking to I er Black Arrow will tell him that he means to prove

The voice of the wounded Indian became a whis-

"Under the mountains are the great caves where weather-beaten features were all alight with a new the medicine fires of the mountains that used to hope. Evidently what communication Black Arrow had made, had banished to a great degree Into the cave, whose entrance was spacious, the despairing feelings which the old trapper had related the trapper had been that a dread western blizzard or winter Frank Reade guided the tally-ho.

But let us follow Frank Reade and the other e trapper was almost hurled from his feet by a The walls were composed of rare formations, members of his party. They went on and on. rrific gust of wind which swept through the nar- There were great crystals of many colors and Frank carried an electric torch and thus light was tain and the heat became almost unbearable, they dreadful blizzards of the West was now the fea- with wonder. They knew they were approaching at once decide that it was the crater of an old volin tones of alarm as the party was retreating from become closed, and which is not sufficiently active seemed to stand straight upon the top of his head, so great was his fright.

Frank Reade and his friends beheld a strange heard the last words we have recorded as spoken point where the temperature was more comfort-ed a great winged serpent, which resembled a caymen or South American crocodile, and also one of "I am here papa Yank. Oh, come and get me Then Black Arrow said that he had long known those remarkable sea monsters which have from

And Yank plunged forward through the storm. fires "-as he designated them. He affirmed, too, The terrible monster of the volcano reared until

He placed the Indian map on the end of the ledge that there were many caves in the neighborhood. ten feet of his huge length stood erect. His great velled Barney, and he took to his heels.

cave, would fill the trails and mountain passes with with them, and they leveled their weapons at the drifts of snow the tally-ho could never pass until monster. But before they could press the trigger the remarkable creature vanished, seemingly going monster is," said the doctor, as he and Frank fol- But Frank Reade and his comrades were by no "Forward! The doctor is always right!" cried lowed their comrade.

Just then Pomp's voice was heard. He cried:

scared no more dan youse did."

get a hand grenade to explode at the crocodile, they were now impelled to renew their explora- Here was a dilemma. But Beckbridge solved it Faith, an it's not an alleygater that kin scare an tions. Irishmon."

ebber seed, Irish."

who yez are making them remarks til?"

"Oh, go soak yer head."

coming up.

no use for a nagur. Begob, an' it's throwin' him which they had previously declared to be entirely "Well, here we are in another cave!" exclaimed til the allygater we hed best be doin'," said hopeless. Barney.

ob dat nonsense out ob yer!"

"Does me ears decave me, er did I hear the reling, but anxious and thoughtful. nagur threaten the likes av mesel? Be the powers "We hev got to find game somewhere or we are wondered to what the trail would finally lead the av turf I kin accommydate yez if yez are bound to done fer," said Beckbridge, solemnly, as the day the party pressed on. pick a foight. Sure an' I'm a paceful mon, but, their food was exhausted the party set out to Suddenly Beckbridge paused. He and Fran begob, I'll not r'ason wid yez, an' thry to quite the make a new exploration in the further depths of were in the lead, and as the old trapper halted ugly timper av the loikes av yez longer. So, begob, the cave. come on wid yez, and I'll bate the head av yez. The trapper voiced the conviction of all, and "Light ahead! By powder, there is a way out. The wurrum will turn at last, begob!" roared Frank responded: Barney.

Pomp's head had come in contact with his not despair until the very last." stomach. It was a striking demonstration. Barney Into the depths of the mysterious mountain the leading to the outer world. seemed duly impressed.

than me stomach. Sure, an' I'll get even wid him strange monster they had seen there.

himself up.

one through which the tally-ho had come. the enemy had not appeared. It was concluded abled him to evolve. caves of which Black Arrow had told.

the end of that time, when it had somewhat sub-which perish easily when exposed to cold, and drove of antelope. Prairie-rabbits and other small sided, Beckbridge removed a section of the barri- which exist only in a warm. climate, or where, as game there was in abundance. cade and crept out of the cave. But he did not go in this instance, there is plenty of artificial heat. The air was balmy, and the temperature was more than a few paces.

The pass was filled with snow.

high.

"We are caught sure enough. The snow are doubtedly keep us alive. We must find the mon-mer plenty and beauty in the midst of winter. drifted clear to the ledges on the top of the moun-ster of the crater and track him to the source of his Yet it seemed like a dream, a fantasy, an hallutain walls above the defile. Here we have got to supplies." stay."

The company fully understood the situation. claimed Frank. Starvation seemed destined to be their ultimate fate.

But they were brave and calm, and Frank ex- added: amined their store of provisions. He estimated that by husbanding every morsel as carefully as possible the food might be made to last for two months instead of one as he had first thought.

All were willing to be put on half rations and this steaks to eat." was done. The days passed monotonously.

Beckbridge thought it possible to reach the ledge afther eatin' a snake!" cried Barney in disgust. constructed a rope-ladder, to one end of which he tion seriously," Frank stated. projecting rocks. After making several casts the ter," he added. cord caught over the end of a great rock, and the "Yes," Beckbridge assented. "And to do that warm air comes from." weight of the stone caused it to fall at the trapper's we hev got to sight the critter. Now I propose "I understand it all, and I feel like thanking feet, leaving the cord drawn taut around the rock. that we go on to the crater an' hide an' watch for God for his infinite mercy in guiding us here," Then Beckbridge, by means of the cord, drew up the monster." the ladder and succeeded in firmly catching its top- All approved of this plan, and so the party ad- Beckbridge reverently uncovered his head, and most round over the great rock. After that he vanced until they were in sight of the underground the others followed his example. climbed the ladder and reached the top of the crater. ledge.

with the disheartening intelligence that he could wait there in the heat. Possibly ten minutes not discover a single track of a living creature.

the last morsel of food was consumed, and the men were watching appeared. dark specter of famine entered the cave.

CHAPTER XL.

THE WONDERFUL VALLEY.

sibility of escape from the cave beside the volcano. Then the doctor said:

Even the electric team, wonder though it was, "Instead of following the creature, since it is im-doubtedly escaped through subterranean routes as and possessing remarkable attributes, could not be possible for man to venture amid the intense heat the heat liquified the snow.

"This surpasses all my experience, and all the made to force its way through the miles and miles where it has gone, let us seek o follow the trail knowledge of natural history I possess does not of immense drifts that obstructed all the mountain whence it came. Perhaps the markable animal give me the least idea as to what that wonderful trails and passes, and even the prairie beyond. has just returned from a quest for food."

means inclined to sit down and apathetically await Frank, enthusiastically. their doom.

"No, sah, Irish. 'Deed I didn't run like I was Although their explorations thus far had con-once followed it in the direction indicated by the vinced them that there was no exit from the cave doctor. But presently the solid side wall of the "Ye did, thin. Its mesel' as was only runnin' til save by the route they had traversed to enter it cavern stopped them.

"Yah, yah! You'se de wus case o' blow dat I through the mountain which might lead them out hole that it had not before been seen. The electric where the snow drifts were less lofty, or where they torch now revealed it indistinctly on account of the "Be the powers av gin, nagur, do yez realize might secure some of the wild animals of the shadow of an overhanging ledge. mountains for food, urged the snow-bound gold The opening which admitted of the passage of the hunters on. "What's the disagreement now?" asked Frank, The cravings of hunger intense and not to be for a man or two to crawl through at once. subdued save by food, which was not to be found Frank and Beckbridge erept through the open-"It's the nagur. Sure, Masther Frank, we hev in the cave, drove the party to make investigations ing, and the others followed them.

"Doan' yer git too funny, Irish, fo' I butt some ed deprived of their usual spirits. Silent and per- on extensive one, and it was seen that the trail of turbed, they went about, no longer joking or quar-the monster, still well marked, led onward.

But the next moment he sat down very hard. | deed, but while there is life there is hope. Let us able in the distance. All sprang forward. The yet, though. Wait until he tries dat buttin' busi- They were not without apprehension that the seemingly out of the natural order of things, that ness, an' I'll give dat nagur a surprise dat will last creature might attack them, and Barney and Pomp, for the nonce all were inclined to think they had the coon all winter," muttered Barney, as he picked whose superstitious fears were at work, fell in the stumbled upon an enchanted realm.

verted to the monster of the crater.

that they had sought shelter in some other of the "It is evident," said he, "that the strange luxuriant, flowers bloomed, and birds sang in the The storm raged for three days furiously. At where. It belongs to an order of the Salurians, ain sheep were feeding, and further on was a cannot venture outside of the cave where the that altitude. The great white wall was at least a hundred feet temperature is freezing in pursuit of food, thus we Words cannot adequately convey an impression Beckbridge came back inside the cave and said: The food that sustains the creature would un-bound explorers as they beheld the scene of sum-

"Bravo! Science and knowledge is power!" ex-

"Long life til the docthur. Sure an' he has the as soon as his amazement permitted him to speak. great head av his own!" cried Barney, and Pomp "It is all a glorious reality," replied the doctor,

"Gollie! I've got a great big idee ob my own."

"What is it, nagur?" queried Barney.

Then they all concealed themselves behind pro-The trapper hoped to find game but he returned tecting rocks. Fortunately they had not long to elapsed, and then a peculiar hissing noise was After this the time went wearily by until finally heard and the monster for which the concealed THE explorers saw that the discovery of the beau-But this time it did not come out of the side of their fears of starvation.

the crater. On the contrary, the monster emerged Food and water there was in abundance. Expanions were hidden.

The monster had left a plain trail. The party at by discovering an opening through which the The possibility of discovering some passage monster had evidently crawled. It was so small a monster of the crater was of course large enough

Frank, glancing about. At this dark period even Barney and Pomp seem- The cave which the party had now reached was

With feelings of expectancy and suspense as th grasped the inventor's arm impulsively, crying:

"The probability of obtaining food is small in- It was so. The faint light of day was discerntrail of the monster led straight to the opening party journeyed, and as they approached the In a moment or so the opening was reached. For the present Barney was ready to subside. | crater of the ancient and now torpid volcano, and and then all paused in profound amazement of "Worra, but the head av the nagur is harder the heat became intensified, they thought of the what they saw. The scene beyond the opening which gave access to the surface was so strange, so

The exit from the cave opened into a valley Further explorations were made in the cave. It But the doctor's logical brain was busy with a about a quarter of a mile broad, and perhaps half was ascertained that there was no outlet save the problem, which was suggested as his thoughts re- a mile long. This valley was sheltered by towering mountains on every side, whose snow-clad That night, when Frank and his comrades re- Presently the old scientist voiced a theory which summits were in the misty distance. But wonder turned to the tally-ho, Beckbridge reported that a simple and natural course of reasoning had en- of wonders, the valley was devoid of snow, and more, it was green and fertile. The grass was creature we saw at the crater must find food some-bushes. At some distance a flock of wild mount-

Granting this we establish the fact that the monster some degrees warmer than summer usually is in prove that the creature must find food in the cave, of the emotion which moved the hearts of the snowcination which must soon pass away.

"Are we awake or dreaming? How in the name of all things wonderful can this be?" cried Frank,

"and the remarkable phenomenon is easily explained on scientific principles. This valley is over the flery furnace of the volcano which extends "If we can't find where dat alleygater gits him from the crater in this direction. The layer of rock grub, maybe we kin kill him an' cut him up inter formation under this soil, and between it and the fire of the volcano, is comparatively thin. Thus "Worra, an' it's not an Irishman as would be the earth is constantly in the condition imparted by the heat of summer. The evaporation is equalized above the defile at the mouth of the cave, and he "We may be compelled to take Pomp's sugges- by the vapor constantly condensed and falling by night upon the valley from the mountains, so the fastened a stout cord. Then having tied a stone to "Your idea is an ingenious one, doctor. Let us ground is kept moist. The smoke arising at inthe free end of the cord he threw it up among the by all means try to track the monster of the cra-tervals through the crevices in the rocks of the mountain-wall all along the valley tells where the said Frank.

CHAPTER XLI.

THE CAVERN OF DEATH.

tiful summer valley had completely banished all from a point at the side of the cavern almost op-cellent springs were visible in the mountain-sides, posite the place where Frank Reade and his com-where, owing to volcanic heat, they were protected from congealation.

"THE supreme hour seemed to have arrived when Slowly the frightful creature trailed its scaly All comprehended that the snow-fall of the terri-Frank Reade and his comrades had consumed length along until it disappeared at the very brink ble blizzard, which had occurred two months prethe last morsel of food, and yet there was no pos- of the pit of flame, as it seemed to the watchers. | viously, had soon melted in the warm valley, and they saw channels by which the water had ungame which abounded in the beautiful valley. is red," said the trapper with feeling.

Barney and Pomp went in pursuit of an ante- He grasped the Indian's hand. lope, and they soon returned with some juicy "Black Arrow will find the little white squaw man. steaks, which were quickly broiled over a camp-and bring her back to the great white hunter. The Black Arrow started forward at once. The cave fire.

and Barney and Pomp told that the animals of the responded the Indian. valley were so tame that it seemed they had not "I reckon you're right, Injun. Leastways I e learned to fear man.

mountain passes."

"And enjoy a winter in the midst of the warmth But if the outlaws and the Indians with them "Trapper," said the stranger, "this Indian tells ply our wants here," replied Frank.

shine I consait I should be content ter put in ther the one discovered by Frank Reade's party, and "He does, I consait. Ther child was carried off winter right here. But I shill long fer spring ter that was scarcely probable. come, an' know no rest till I git on the trail o' ther Black Arrow sped on and on, until he came to are Little Sunshine, and she is very dear to the pizen varmints that hev carried away Little Sun- the mouth of the cave. This underground retreat heart of old Yank Beckbridge, by powder!" replied shine," said Beckbridge.

Black Arrow, the Indian, was now about recovered from his injuries, and, as he had been left be- party he was in search of.

turn for him.

The others went back with the trapper, and the tally-ho was run forward to the small opening in the rocks which communicated with the adjacent cave that led to the summer valley.

explorers set to work to enlarge it.

An explosion or two of powder did the work, blasting away the rocks until the way was enlarged, of the cave. Then he made a terrible discovery. trapper, and then he said: and the tally ho was guided through it and on to He came upon the remains of a large party of men "The trailer sought the men who stole the great the summer valley.

Black Arrow had shown his gratitude to the the party with Frank Reade, that they trusted him terrible scene. fully.

He was questioned about the summer valley, and he assured the party that the wonderful place was not known to the Indians.

The amazement which the Indian evinced at the sight of the valley was a confirmation of the truth of his words.

The explorers now felt perfectly secure.

They believed that they had no reason to anticipate the coming of the enemy, and that it was impossible for them to be surprised.

The valley was carefully explored, however, all her captors had perished. Search was made for an outlet by which men could

The explorers decided that no one could pene-Sioux allies had died of starvation. trate to the valley save by the route they had themselves traversed.

We need not dwell upon the peaceful months which elapsed. The explorers were undisturbed, mains could signify. A thought came to his mind your little girl." Plenty and quietude was their lot through the that made him shudder. But he put it away from Thus speaking, the hermit strode away and must have melted out of the trails preparations he returned a negative answer to his own ques- "For years I have made my home in one of the were made for departure.

Spring came at last.

scout and note the condition of the outer world be-fully explored the entire cave. But still the mys- and we will not touch upon that point. The cave fore the tally-ho left the valley.

Arrow, the Sioux trailer, whose life we know the white captive. trapper had saved, came to his side.

er," said the Indian.

"As ye like, Injun," replied Beckbridge.

Indian continued. "I think we can trust the trailer," said Frank. minated by the torch in his hand.

a book I've studied some. I consait an Injun weapon in his girdle, as the succeeding moment he the band I am speaking of came into the outer natur are my stronghold. I reckon Black Arrow beheld a startling apparition. means fair. So come along, trailer," responded the An aged white man, clad in the skins of the veal my presence. Then when I learned that the trapper.

him life; Injun no forget."

"Good, you have the right spirit. All Indians are not ungrateful, it seems," spoke Frank.

followed by Black Arrow.

the trapper.

They reached the wire barricade at the mouth of "You are a Sioux. What would you do with the the cavern, which the tally-ho had first entered, white captive?" demanded the old white man. and passed into the trail beyond.

mained would not seriously impede the progress brave has promised the white hunter to bring him

"Now Black Arrow go to keep his promise "Do you speak straight, Indian?" exclaimed the "Yes, I resolved to save the child. Her helpabout the little white squaw the great white hunt- aged white man.

er seeks," said the Indian.

But hunger urged the explorers to pursue the yer one Indian with a white heart, brave, if yer hide trail. Come, and Black Arrow will lead you to the hope so, by powder," the trapper rejoined.

"Ah," said Dr. Vaneyke, "it must be that this Then Black Arrow hastened away. It seemed Black Arrow. hidden valley has never before been visited by that his knowledge of the mountains was of service Beckbridge was much surprised when at length man. Here we may live in peace and quietude un- to him now, and that he knew of some cave in he discovered the Indian approaching, followed by til spring comes, and the snow melts out of the which he presumed it likely that the white out- the aged white man. laws and the Sioux had sought shelter.

of the tropics. There is everything needed to sup-had not fled from the mountains in time, it was to me he is a friend of yours, and that he is looking be conjectured that they must have starved, un- for a little white girl that he seeks to restore to "But fer the anxiety that I feel fer Little Sun-less they had found another summer valley like you. Does he speak truly?"

he boldly entered.

brethren must have starved in here."

He went on, reflecting aloud:

The passage was not sufficiently large to allow tell the trapper. Be the little squaw dead or alive leetle gal?" the entrance of the electric conveyance, and so the the trailer will keep his word and carry her back "Trapper, we will first let the Indian speak," to the great white hunter."

—whites and Indians.

he could not find Little Sunshine.

CHAPTER XLII. THE WHITE HERMIT.

BLACK ARROW was amazed.

He could not understand why it was that he "Be calm, my friend. I am come to bring you

An examination of the bodies gave the Indian Beckbridge seized the hermit's hand. enter or leave the valley, but none was discovered. the assurance that the white outlaws and their "God will reward ye. But tell me all and let us Mystified most completely, Black Arrow seated tones of great joy. himself to think. He strove to divine what the "I will lead you to the child, and as we go I will explanation of the absence of Little Sunshine's re-clearly explain how it became my privilege to save him.

He asked himself if some solitary member of the followed in his footsteps. As soon as the weather indicated that the snow party could have escaped with Little Sunshine, and "Say on," said Beckbridge, eagerly.

and tell Beckbridge, the trapper, all.

mountain sheep, with his snow-white hair falling terrible storm had filled the mountain passes, and "Ugh! Black Arrow friend. White man save upon his shoulders, and whose beard reached to that the strangers were snow-bound for months at his girdle, stood before the Indian.

hermit-like personage, in a stern, deep voice.

'cordin' ter my 'sperience," muttered the trapper. white child-a little girl-a squaw, who was with ish with them of starvation. Then he shouldered his rifle and left the valley, those who are gone to the happy hunting grounds," "But I resolved to save the little girl captive." replied Black Arrow, pointing in the direction of the The hermit paused, and the trapper breathlessly The two caves were traversed by the Indian and dead bodies of the white outlaws and their Indian waited to hear the rest.

"Black Arrow's life was saved by a great white The snow had well nigh melted. What re-hunter called Beckbridge among his people. The by the men who are dead."

"Go, an' may ther good God guide ye. I reckon what the brave says. His tongue is on the straight ty, and one night, while the band slept, I opened old white hunter."

"Lead on, I will follow," answered the strange white men who have the little squaw a captive was left behind, and the Indian guided the aged All partook of the food with the keenest relish, will not suspect the trailer who has served them," white man to the entrance of the cave where he had left Beckbridge.

The old trapper stood before the wire barricade eagerly watching and waiting for the return of

They soon came up.

by a band o' white an' red varmints. Her name

the trapper, earnestly.

At once he discovered certain indications of the "Good! I am a recluse. My name is Wardwell, but because I have fled from the haunts of hind at the tally-ho, Beckbridge volunteered to re- "Ugh!" grunted the Indian, gutturally. "I shall men and live entirely alone in the mountains of find dead men. Wah, the white outlaws and my Montana for years I believe the trappers and Indians call me the white hermit," said the stranger.

"I have heard of you, I consait, stranger," re-"And the little white squaw must have perished. plied the trapper, truthfully. "But can you tell me Ugh! Black Arrow feared this. But he would not anything about the varmints who carried off my the hermit replied. The Indian advanced until he was in the depths Black Arrow bent a pitying glance upon the old white hunter's little squaw and he found them--" He had procured a torch within the cave and "Found them! Do yer say yer found them? whites in so many ways since he became one of lighted it. The light thus afforded revealed the Ah! And is Little Sunshine yet alive?" cried the trapper. Black Arrow soon convinced himself that he had "Black Arrow found the white outlaws and the discovered the band he was in quest of. He found Sioux in a cave where he met this aged white man. the dead bodies of Brant Forges and Marvan, but But all the band of Brant Forges were dead. The among all the dead in that underground sepulcher brave saw all their dead bodies that were like skeletons for lack of food, but he could not find the body of the little white squaw," said the Indian.

Beckbridge uttered a terrible cry, and he turned upon the mountain hermit flercely.

"Speak, man, if ye know anything about my little gal!" he cried.

did not find the remains of Little Sunshine where tidings of joy. Your little girl lives, and is at this moment in a place of safety."

hasten to the leetle gal," the trapper uttered, in Beckbridge walked by his side, while Black Arrow numerous caves of these mountains. Whyfore I It was decided that Beckbridge should make a Finally Black Arrow arose dejectedly and care-chose this mode of life concerns no one but myself, tery remained as impenetrable as ever. Still there which I dwell in chanced to be the very one in Beckbridge was about to start, when Black was nothing discovered to reveal the fate of the which the white outlaws and the Siouxs, who had your little child a captive, sought shelter from Finally the Indian decided that the only course the blizzard last winter. Now, leading from that The trailer will go with the great white hunt-left for him was to return to the summer valley cave to a smaller one is a secret passage, to which I had contrived a stone door. In the interior or The Indian was walking dejectedly toward the second cave I made my home. Every summer I "Black Arrow knows the mountains well," the entrance of the cave, when all at once a dark there store away sufficient dried meat and such shadow fell across his pathway where it was illu-other food as I need for an entire winter, for often, as during the winter that is just passed, I am snow-"I am sure on it, by powder. Human nature Black Arrow recoiled like a flash and grasped a bound for months. I was in my secret cave when cave. Of course I knew that it would not do to releast, I took every precaution to conceal my pres-"Whence comest thou, red man?" demanded the ence. I knew that if my retreat was found, the men who had entered the outer cave would eat up all "But they are mighty few and far between, "From the mountains. The red man seeks a my provisions in a few days, and then I should per-

CHAPTER XLIII.

A JOYFUL REUNION.

THE hermit drew a deep breath or two as he of the electric conveyance, the trapper thought, back the little white squaw who was stolen away paused, and then continued, specking rapidly and with great earnestness.

lessness, innocence and beauty appealed to my "Come with me and you shall learn the truth of sympathy irresistibly. I watched my opportunithe stone door of my interior cavern and glided During his recent absence he had been at work enemy had appeared at the time of the great blizforth bent on the rescue.

crept to the child.

ing. I feared the child would awake and cry out "Begob," said Barney, to himself, as he came mine," said Frank Reade. in alarm upon discovering me. What should I do? from the thicket with his iron stomach plate on. "Since I have decided that the land-marks of How insure her silence? I must proceed precisely "Faith an' I'll give the nagur a chance to butt the the old Indian map are no longer to be relied upon, as though I meant to carry her off against her will brains av him out this toime, so I will." without the knowledge of her captors, I thought. Beckbridge and the Indian had been gone some that we are to all intents no better off than we Upon that idea I acted at once.

beside the sleeping child, lifted her in my arms, ventor beside the tally-ho, was rattling a pair of discovering the lost mine are becoming very small. and then sped away with her, having first muffled bones in real end-man style. her head in the blanket and pressed one hand over Barney meant to pick a quarrel, and so he said : dent," assented Frank.

celerity I gained my secret retreat and released av me." the little one and made known that I was her Pomp only grinned and went on rattling the friend. I soon allayed her fears, and from that bones. friend.

"We shall find her safe and well in my secret re- "Gollie! Ise gwine ter go fer yer Irish. Ise a around," said the trapper, treat, whither I am now leading you." Thus concluded the white hermit.

Then Beckbridge grasped his hand and pressed bulljine am a comin'!" cried Pomp.

it warmly as he said:

power to grant ye. There's my paw onter it, by contrary, he braced himself and stood still to re-the tally-ho reached a considerable elevation. powder. I consait yer ther right stuff, friend, ceive the shock. though ye be on the 'hideout' yere in the moun- Then bang came Pomp's head against Barney's were towering peaks, broken ridges, yawning tings."

mit, but his tone was sad.

ion.

The distance to the cave of death was traversed yez I am!" shouted Barney. in a short space of time. Through the outer cav- "Not dis eve. Some udder eve. Good eve," reern the hermit led the way. The secret door was torted Pomp, and he retired in good order. opened, and a moment subsequently Little Sunshine bounded into the old trapper's arms with a glad cry.

The happiness, the great joy of the old trapper joy in their lives which was ever to be remembered by Black Arrow. by them.

time, and then saying good-bye to the hermit, at related what the reader has already learned regard-glass at the objects the trapper had discovered, and least for the time, they set out for the wonderful ing the fate of the white outlaws and their red allies, he said: summer valley where the tally-ho and Beckbridge's as well how Little Sunshine had been saved, and comrades were.

who strode silently at his heels."

consait Santah was among ther band that starved all over." ter death. Eh?" he said.

the Indian.

skin breeches yit?"

beaded buckskins."

"Hurrah for our side! Traps and trappers; ther now I suppose we can continue our journey." widder shill yit be mine! Injun, lead me ter the "I reckon so." varmint ez has been a runnin' around in ther wid- "You consider the trails passable for the tally- buckskin sacks unless I was very sure I had a der's breches so long."

"Come," laconically rejoined Black Arrow.

Then he led Beckbridge to the body of Santah, I reckon." and the old trapper repossessed himself of his pre- "Very good. We have but few preparations to and start fer hum," said Beckbridge, in a tone of cious buckskin breeches, the rather unique token make. We have cured a quantity of meat and put disgust. of "the widder's" love.

breeches I'll wear back to the widder, an' she shill visioned anew," replied Frank. surrender, by powder! I consait, redskin, yer were "Then let us not delay. I consait we can't be move the mine, though. We have observed the never in love. No. Well, it's worse nor the small-far from the lost gold mine. Ther idea are power-direction whence they came. Let us allow pox, an' there's only one cure, marry the gal."

in contempt.

come on, we've got ter go ter summer vallev." Beckbridge, hand in hand with Little Sunshine, lost mine," said Beckbridge.

and still followed by Black Arrow, strode from the The old trapper scratched his head and looked A moment later the Indians and the pack train cave, carrying with him the buckskin breeches, rather puzzled. which he had recovered at last.

valley the trio proceeded.

Meanwhile the others awaited their return.

snowbound ones it seemed, and yet recently Barney the doctor hastened to say. had been mysteriously absent from the others for "I reckon yer on ther right trail o' the explana- the mine out an' carried off all the gold. Howhours at a time, and if he had been closely watched, tion," assented the trapper. he might have been seen to slyly convey some Then all the belongings of the party were packed out," said Beckbridge. tools and a large plate of sheet iron, and certain away in the tally-ho. Frank Reade carefully ex- Frank Reade started the electric vehicle, and it other articles to a dense thicket at some distance amined all the intricate machinery of the wonder- was soon traversing the devious mountain trails from the camp in the valley.

something to surprise Pomp. Ever since the ure.

even for once.

in the thicket, and made a large semicircular plate zard. "Fortune favored my purpose, neither the white of sheet iron, padded heavily with cotton on the All the party then entered the vehicle. "Then came the greatest danger of the undertak- his clothes so as to serve as a stomach plate.

time when Barney came swagging up to where would be had we no map," said the doctor. "My blanket was upon my shoulder, I stooped Pomp, who sat near the doctor and the young in- "That is true. It seems to me our chances of denly kicked the bones out of Pomp's hands.

colored gemman wid de war paint on jiss 'bout

He ducked his head and rushed at Barney pell- bridge had indicated.

fairly yelled with delight.

CHAPTER XIIV.

THE INDIANS ON THE MARCH.

shine and the old trapper was a supreme epoch of Little Sunshine appeared upon the scene, followed ful," said the trapper suddenly.

The party was warmly welcomed by Frank Reade the distant objects plainly," cried the doctor. Yank and Little Sunshine conversed for a long and the others, and the old trapper in a few words finally restored to him.

"By powder, Injun, I nigh about furgot all I've got back my leetle gal and the widder's buck- I take to be buckskin sacks."

"What is the condition of the mountains beyond opinion of all, saying: "The white hunter speaks straight," rejoined this valley?" Frank Reade asked, after some further conversation had ensued.

"Now, tell me was ther pizen critter in my buck- "Ther snow has about melted outen' ther with the treasure of the lost mine."

"Ugh, yes. Santah wore the great hunter's "Good!" exclaimed the doctor. "You could said: not have brought us more welcome news. And ho then?" said Frank Reade.

"Yas, and we kin be movin' as soon as ye like,

in a supply of succulent roots which the doctor are the fact that we can't see nothin' o' the mount-shall find the lost mine," said Frank. "That's er failin' o' ther Beckbridge fambly. But ing shaped like a pyramid with a huge head on the

"I have decided, as I have intimated, that con-Straight toward the wonderful mountain-walled vulsions of a volcanic nature which have taken place in these mountains during the years that have elapsed since the old Indian map was made have thrown down the pyramid and the odd There was nothing to employ the time of the shaped rock by which it was previously crowned," ful vehicle and oiled every part of it. This done on the way to the place where the Indians on the The truth was Barney was secretly preparing he announced that all was in readiness for depart- march had disappeared from sight.

through the opening upon the pass where the was readily discernible.

outlaws or the cunning Sioux awakened, and I inner surface, and covered with canvas. This "Now that we are clear of the caves, the ques-Barney had now secured about his person under tion once more arises in which direction shall we direct our course, whither seek for the lost gold it seems to me we have nothing to guide us, and

It seems now we can only hope to find it by acci-her mouth to prevent her uttering a cry. "Do yez call that music, nagur? Sure an' I'll Beckbridge thoughtfully expectorated, and the "There was not a sound, and with the utmost not have the heathen racket forninst the loikes stream shot by Pomp's head so closely that he had to dodge very swiftly to escape it. "I consait, 'cordin' ter ther indications of ther Injun load-stun in my natur' thet there are some moment Little Sunshine regarded me as her "Shut up wid yez!" roared Barney, and he sud- o' ther pizen varmints around. Jist run ther tallyho up ther steep trail a bit an' we'll take a squint

> The young inventor worked the guiding levers now, you heah me warble. Look out Irish, de of his remarkable electric vehicle properly, and the coach began to ascend a steep wrail which Beck-

"You kin call on old Yank for anything in his mell. The Irishman didn't try to dodge. On the Then a scene of grandeur was revealed when

The rugged range was spread out below. There iron "stomach-protector," and the darky reeled chasms and defiles, with hanging ledges. The "I trust I am an honest man," replied the her-back half stunned, while Barney stood firm and tire scene was one of chaos and suggestive of upheaval of earthquake or volcanic action.

"Got a secret hez that feller, by powder," thought Begob, an' it takes an Irishman to get the best The doctor felt that his theory to account for the Beckbridge, but he did not formulate this opin-av a nagur every time. Come on again. Come an' absence of the landmarks of the old Indian map or butt the brains out of yez. Sure an it's waitin' for sign writing was verified by the appearance of the range as far as the eye could reach, and he said:

"I am more than ever convinced that this range has been entirely upheaved and convulsed by the action of volcanoes since our map of the route to the lost mine was drawn."

"Look yender. I see a file of moving objects away to the nor'west, but they are so fur off I can't at that moment can scarcely be described. After While the doctor and the inventor were laugh-say positive what they are, though ther Injin loadtheir long severance the reunion of Little Sun-ing at the incident just related Beckbridge and stun in my natur' are a drawing that away power-

"I'll get out my telescope, and then we can see

In a moment or so he was looking through the

"You are right, friend Beckbridge. I see a file of mounted Indians-Sioux warriors, and also a Passing through the outer cave, Beckbridge sud- All congratulated the trapper, and he said, dryly: band of squaws, who wear the blankets of the denly paused and grasped the arm of Black Arrow, "Ye do me proud. I consait I am the happiest Blackfoot tribe. The entire party seems to be actman in Montana, bar none, at this identical time. ing as escort for a train of ponies, laden with what about ther widder an' my backskin breeches. I skin breeches, an' onct more ole Yank are hisself For a moment the treasure hunters looked at each other in silence. Then Beckbridge voiced the

"I'll stake my skulp we see the squaws o' ther gold mine Injuns and their Sioux allies makin' off

All were very much excited, and Frank Reade

"It seems to me it would be useless to pursue the Indians, and I would not attempt to rob them of the treasure they are carrying away in those better right to it than they have."

"Then I reckon we mought as well give up all idea o' makin' a fortune an' findin' the gold mine

"Why so, friend trapper. It is evident that the "Onct agin the old man are happy. Them discovered in the valley. Thus the tally-ho is pro-Blackfoot Amazons and their Sioux allies have deserted the lost mine for good. They cannot reful strong inter my mind that it's located some-course. Once we strike the trail of the party we "Ugh, white hunter heap talk," said the Indian where in this ere cave country. But what gits me have found by taking the back track I think we disappeared in the distance.

> "Well said. There is a chance to find the lost top on it, which we take it marks the sight o' the mine now which is much better than I dared hope for," said the doctor.

CHAPTER XLV.

AT THE LOST GOLD MINE-CONCLUSION.

"I've got an idee them gold mine squaws wouldn't run off an' desart the mine if there was any more gold there. I consait they have worked somedever we'll go ahead an' see what we kin find

In the course of a couple of hours the tortuous darky had butted him out of time the last time, they The tally-ho was carefully and slowly run back route was traversed, and the tally-ho arrived at a had a row, the Irishman had been planning to get through the cavern until it at length came out ridge along which the trail of the mounted band on their march.

some miles. It led into the very heart of the close to the door. mountain range. The course was an erratic and "Owen Strathmore!" was the expected answer But they were destined to have a golden reward most devious one, but finally all trace of the hither-returned.

to plain trail was lost.

ward through a deep channel was before the ex-back: plorers. A short distance up the stream was a "I'm Old Yank Beckbridge, yer pard. I'll git cave lying on his back among the rocks. He had splendid waterfall. The disappearance of the ye out all right. Keep cool and wait a bit." trail at the brink of the mountain torrent was a The trapper and the Indian then swiftly retraced was now dying. mystery. It was too broad and swift, and its their way to the tally-ho. They made known their He signaled Frank Reade to come close, and the banks were too high to render it possible that the great discovery and quickly returned to the mine, young inventor knelt beside the hermit and heard Indians could have forded it at this point.

"Beckbridge, can you suggest an explanation?" care of the tally-ho.

asked Frank, as he reversed the levers and stopped The old trapper carried a lot of blasting car- In conclusion the old man murmured:

tain stream.

bridge's rather unsatisfactory reply.

the trapper added.

Then he and Black Arrow sprang out of the elec- ather's arms. tric tally-ho and went toward the waterfall.

imprints of hoofs.

an' they left no tracks on the hard soil Indians. above where the trail disappeared. I consait I see Beckbridge made answer, and then Strathmore through a mountain pass, just before the vehicle, the hull game. There's a passage under the said:

falls," said Beckbridge.

sheet of falling water concealed its entrance, they Indians. beheld a cavern.

print of moccasins; moreover, the rock was worn old Getchewan took to selling the gold the Spanin a pathway leading into the cavern, thus indicat- lards had left behind.

persons.

Indian. A number of resinous torches were dis-braves who are to become their husbands. covered near the entrance of the underground "Not an ounce of gold has been left behind, and obtaining light for his further explorations. has been entirely exhausted.

The trapper and the Indian soon saw that they "You see, therefore, that the discovery of the were surrounded by the evidence of man's handi-mine has not brought us fortune."

gold mine was found.

As he continued to advance he found mining im- "I had counted on getting gold here and I am plements such as were in use among the Spaniards bitterly disappointed. So much depends on my in Mexico hundreds of years ago. And he also success. If in less than one month's time I do not discovered copper vessels, such as at a remote pay a certain man five thousand dollars, he will period were employed as melting pans in the mines have the right to take my darling Little Sunshine home safely. of Mexico.

But where's the gold, and where is my old pard, his little daughter to his heart. Owen Strathmore, the father of Little Sunshine, "Cheer up, old pard. Ther man you borrowed tive here," said Beckbridge at length.

and his voice now reached the hearing of the lat-said Beckbridge. ter.

the Indian at a great copper door, which com- he had pledged Little Sunshine, was really his both parent and child. pletely closed the mine passage.

As he spoke another voice was heard. It was a her out of the way.

caught the words.

ish."

had heard the voice of Little Sunshine's father.

accompanied by all save Pomp, who was left in him reveal the secret of a rich gold claim which he

the electric conveyance on the edge of the moun-tridges and fuses with him now. He had secured "Dying, I bequeath my claim to you and your them from the supply locker in the vehicle. The party." "Perhaps I kin, an' maybe I can't," was Beck-copper door in the hidden mine was soon reached, and by means of the cartridges it was blown open, "Anyhow I'll make a scout. Come on, redskin," and Owen Strathmore and the trapper were to-tery of whose life died with him, and then they Then an explanation immediately ensued. Strath-Presently Beckbridge discovered a narrow more told how he had set out to trail the gold mine causeway, and upon it, where it led down to the Indians, that he had been discovered by them and falls, the trapper discovered the well-nigh invisible made captive, and carried to the mines. How then he had since been kept a close prisoner there. His "Ah, ha! the feds muffled the hoofs of their first question was if the rescue party had met the new without further delay.

"I have learned that this old mine was worked He crept down to the water's edge, accompanied out by the Spaniards who discovered it years ago. by the Indian, under the curtain of the water mak- But they had stored up a large quantity of gold ing the falls. Keeping close to obstructions which quartz in a recess, intending to desert the worked caused the falls, the two crossed the stream, and out claim and take the precious ore with them, then, at the opposite side of the falls, where the when they were discovered and massacred by the obeyed. All leaped from the coach, and the suc-

"The ore was of no value to the Indians then. But Into this spacious opening the trail of Indian the traditions of the tribe handed down the secret of the depths below. ponies led, and the softer soil retained the im-the mine from generation to generation. Finally ing it had long been frequently traversed by many "Now the squaws of the gold mine Indians have carried off all the gold that remained, and they are Into the cavern advanced Beckbridge and the accompanied by a band of young northern Sioux Beckbridge decided at once that at last the lost may well believe. But Strathmore appeared to be the most troubled.

from me. Where now shall I procure that money?" "We hev found the lost gold mine, by powder. said Strathmore, in despairing tones, as he clasped whom I have all along suspected was held a cap- the five thousand dollars from is dead and he will never claim Little Sunshine as the forfeit of your pose, and on that occasion the gold claim left The Indian had advanced ahead of the trapper, failure ter pay his debt. He won't, by powder,"

Then in reply to Strathmore's surprised ques-"White hunter, come on!" cried Black Arrow. | tions, the trapper told his pard that the man the Beckbridge promptly advanced, and he found former had borrowed the money from, for which by her father, and the future was a happy one for wife's nephew, Adam Marvan, and all about his "Door fast; no go furder!" grunted the Indian. plot to get possession of Little Sunshine and put down at Fort Smith.

faint and muffled utterance, and Beckbridge This was the first intimation Strathmore had re-"For God's sake do not leave me here to per-heiress of her grandfather's fortune, and his satis- where they intend going.

faction may be imagined.

The tally-ho was guided along this trail in a re- A thrill shot through the old trapper's nerves. The party, after vainly searching the mine for trograde course in order that it might reach the The voice emanated from the passage beyond the any trace of gold, set out on their return journey. place from which the mounted Indians had started great copper door. Yank Beckbridge believed he They had found the lost gold mine, but no wealth, and yet since they had saved a precious

There was no difficulty in following the trail for "Who are ye?" the trapper shouted, coming human life by rescuing Owen Strathmore, all felt that the expedition had not been in vain.

after all. Their way led them back by the caves of The voice was more distinct now, and as Beck-the volcano. All at once they heard an agonized A mountain torrent which found its way south-bridge heard it he fairly leaped for joy, and called cry from beside the trail. The tally-ho was stopped, and the party found the old hermit of the accidentally fallen from a high ledge above, and he

These were his last words.

The explorer buried the strange recluse, the mysgether once more, and Little Sunshine was in her sought his gold claim, according to directions he had given. It proved to be a very valuable find.

> Having secured a number of specimens of the gold from the claim the hermit had given them, Frank and his party began their homeward jour-

> One dark night, as the tally-ho was advancing as it turned a sharp corner among the rocks, Frank Reade with untold horror beheld a yawning chasm.

It was too late to stop the vehicle.

"Jump for your lives all !" shouted Frank as he made a leap from the box on the top of the tallyho. His friends heard his shout and instantly ceeding moment the electric tally-ho crashed over the brink of the gulch and went down, down into

Fortunately none of Frank's party were injured, and when this was ascertained the doctor produced a pocket-lantern, and after some exploration a way of descent to the bottom of the gulch was found, and Frank and the doctor went down. They found the electric tally-ho a complete wreck. Frank saw at once that it could never be repaired. again, much as he regretted the fact. The party place, and one of these Beckbridge ignited, thus the great 'pocket' which was originally found here camped beside the chasm. The following morning Frank, assisted by the others, went down to the tally-ho and removed such valuables as he desired to save, and then they all took farewell of work. The cave was not the work of nature. Our friends were somewhat disappointed, we the shattered coach which had served them so well, and went forward on foot.

> That evening they arrived at a mining camp, and horses were procured and the homeward journey was continued in company with a large band of returning miners.

In due time all Frank Reade's party reached

Some months later, all who had accompanied the young inventor on his search for the lost gold mine were assembled at Frank's beautiful home in Readestown. They had met for a business purthem by the old hermit was sold to a company of speculators and the money equally divided.

There is little to add in conclusion. Little Sunshine's inheritance was secured for her

Beckbridge married "the widder" and settled

Frank Reade and the doctor took a long rest at home, but we understand they are considering a ceived of the fact that his little daughter was the new journey, but as yet no one has found out

[THE END.]

Useful and Instructive Books.

HOW TO BOX .- The art of self-defense made easy. Containing over thirty illustrations of guards, blows and the different positions of a good boxer. Every boy should obtain one of these useful and instructive books, as it will teach you how to box without an instructor. Only 10 cents. For sale by all newsdealers, or sent, post paid, on receipt of price. Address Frank Tousey, publisher, 34 and 36 North Moore street, New York. P. O. Box 2730.

guide ever published. It contains full instructions about guns, hunting dogs, traps, trapping, and fishing, together with descriptions of game and fish. Price 10 cents. For sale by all newsdealers in the United States and Canada, or sent, postpaid, to your address, on receipt of price. Frank Tousey, publisher, 34 and 36 North Moors street. New York. Box 2730.

HOW TO BECOME RICH.—This wonderful book, "How to Become Rich," presents you with the example and life experience of some of the most noted and wealthy men in the world, including the self-made men of our country. The book is edited by one of the most successful men of the present age, whose own example is in itself guide enough for those who aspire to fame and money. The book will give you the secret. Price 10 cents. For sale by newsmen and booksellers, or send price to Frank Tousey, publisher, 34 and 36 North Moore street. New York, and it will be mailed to you, post paid.

HOW TO BEHAVE, containing the rules and etiquette or good society and the easiest and most approved methods of appearing to good advantage at parties, balls, the theater, church, and in the drawingroom. Price 10 cents. For sale by all newsdealers, or sent, postage free, on receipt of price. Address Frank Tousey, publisher, 34 and 36 North Moore street. New York. Box 2730.

```
501 Trapper Duke; or, The Female Avenger.....
                                                426 The Young Aeronaut..... By Professor Wise
323 Adventures of a Philadelphia Detective
                                                                                                                          By James D. Montague
                                                427 The Boy Trapezist.... . By a Former Professional 324 Richard Savage
                                                                                                502 Leon the Outlaw; or, The Avenger of the Death 428 Prairie Phil; or, The Panther of the Platte....
325 The Mystery of a Misspent Life
                                                                                                     Pass..... By James D. Montague
                                                                            By Harry Rockwood
326 Double-Six
                                                429 The Green Caps...... By a U. S. Detective 503 Tommy Bounce, Jr., in College-comic.....
327 The Dominoes of Death
                                                                                                                                   By Peter Pad
                                                430 Hollow Roost; or, The Traitor Guide.....
328 Gipsy Bess
                                                                              By Morris Redwing | 504 Around the World; or, Fighting to Win. .....
329 The Queen of the Highway
                                                                                                                            By Harrigan & Hart
                                                431 The Grimsdale Ghost, and other stories......
330 Rodolf, the Traitor
                                                                                 331 The Boy Cavaliers
                                                432 Lost in Africa; or The Adventures of Two 332 Young Captain Kidd
                                                     Young Castaways..... By Samuel T. Johnston | 506 Captain Tom Drake; or, The Young Privateers
333 The Secret of Wizard Lake
                                                                                                                               By H. C. Emmet
                                                433 Denver Dan and His Mystic Band .. By "Noname" 334 The Prairie Witch
                                                                                                507 Fred Ford; or, Life at Boarding-School.....
                                                434 Shorty in Search of His Dad-comic. By Peter Pad
335 The Hunters of the Silver Trail
                                                                                                                          By Captain Will Dayton
                                                435 The Blasted Pine; or, Three Boy Scouts.....
336 Traveling With Barnum
                                                                                               508 Billy Bakkus, the Boy With the Big Mouth-
                                                                            By Capt. Will Dayton
337 Three Dashing Hussars comic......By Commodore Ah-Look 436 Denver Dan and the Road Agents. By "Noname"
338 Pat O'Corker; or, Always to the Front
                                                437 The Freebooter's Secret..... By J. T. Brougham | 509 Bow and Arrow Jack, the Indian Nemesis.....
339 The Diamond Eye
                                                438 Sawdust Charlie, the Pet of the Ring......
                                                                                                                                   By Kit Clyde
340 Jack of the Naval Brigade
                                                                                               510 Arctic Phil, the Bear-Slayer of the Northern
                                                                           By an Old Ringmaster
341 The Zulu's Daughter Seas......By Alex. Armstrong
                                                439 Denver Dan and the Counterfeiters. By "Noname" 342 The Haunted House at Deadman's Corner
                                                                                                511 Fred Baxter, the Wild Horse Tamer.....
                                                440 Cavalry Jack at Corinth..... By Col. Ralph Fenton 343 Sir Guy's Secret
                                                                                                                                By J. M. Travers
                                                441 Ned Owen; or, The Mystery of a Missing Ship.
344 The Fortunes of an Acrobat
                                                                                                512 The Brookfield Bank Robbers.... By D. W. Stevens
                                                                            By Capt. Will Dayton
345 For the Green Flag of Old Ireland
                                                442 Denver Dan Outwitted; or, The Outlaw's Tri-513 The Border Bandits..... By James D. Montague
346 Kathleen O'Shaughnessy
                                                                                               514 The Young Sharpshooters of the Rebellion....
                                                     umph......By "Noname"
347 Tom the Midshipman
                                                                                                                            By Col. Ralph Fenton
                                                443 The Girdle of Gold; or, The Counterfeiter's
348 Out With Captain Cook
                                                                                               515 Fighting Joe; or, The Game Man of the Plains
                                                     Daughter ..... By Morris Redwing
349 Every Inch a Sailor
                                                                                                                                   By Kit Clyde
                                                444 The Treasure Cave; or, Run to Earth. By a Traveler
350 Ralph, the Light Dragoon
                                                445 Denver Dan, the Sheriff......By "Noname" 516 Invincible Bill. A Wonderful Story of Neva-351 The Brothers in Arms
                                                446 Long Paw, the Mysterious Hunter. . By Kit Clyde da, California and Utah of 12 Years Ago ....
352 Jack of Cheapside
                                                447 A Yankee Boy in Africa..... By Percy B. St. John
                                                                                                                        By Alexander Armstrong
353 The Green Banner of Islam
                                                448 Black and Blue; or, Nick Wharton on the War-517 Skeleton Gulch; or, Captain Texas and His 354 The Colonel's Daughter path..... By Harry Rockwood Band of Vultures..... By J. R. Scott 355 Walter's Secret
                                                449 Ivan and Ismail; or, Scouts of Plevna......
356 The Outlaws of Berkeley Forest
                                                                                                518 The Irish Claude Duval as a Privateer......
                                                                                 By Don Jenardo
                                                                                                                     By Corporal Morgan Rattler
357 Redspear the Outlaw
358 The House of a Hundred Terrors
                                                450 Denver Dan's Peril; or, The Outlaw's Ruse....
                                                                                                519 The Wolverine; or, The Count's Treachery. ..
                                                                                 By "Noname"
359 Oswald, the Unknown
                                                                                                                          By a Parisian Detective
                                                451 Sir Rufus the Rover; or, the Pirates' Island..
360 Adventures of a Free Lance $20 Ben Bolt; or, the Young Blacksmith.....
                                                                     By Richard R. Montgomery
361 The Treacherous Knight
                                                                                                                          By James D. Montagua
362 Young Jack Harkaway and His Boy Tinker 521 From Drummer Boy to General.....
                                                453 The Creole Brothers .... By Colonel J. M. Travers
363 Tinker's Man Bogey
                                                                                                                      By Richard R. Montgomery
                                                454 The Castaways; or, The White King of the 364 Young Harkaway in Spain
                                                                                                522 Bob Rollick; or, What Was He Born For-Atlantic...... By Don Jenardo 365 Young Harkaway in Turkey
                                                                                                     comic..... By Peter Pad
                                                455 Denver Dan to the Rescue; or, The Mountain-366 Mole Among the Mussulmans
                                                                                                523 Northwoods Tom, the Athlete Hunter. By Kit Clyde 367 Young Harkaway and the Arabs
                                                                                                524 Only a Cabin-Boy; or, Saved by Grit........
                                                456 Condemned; or, Number 709.....
368 Young Harkaway and the Counterfeiters
                                                                                                                            By Harry Rockwood
                                                                      By Richard R. Montgomery
                                                                                                525 Astray in Africa......By Walter Fenton
369 The Secret of the Traitor's Gate
                                                457 The Wolf of the Waves. A Tale of the Pi-370 The Waif of the Tower
                                                                                                526 Tiger Ted......By Alexander Armstrong rates of Old......By Alexander Armstrong 371 Ralph Wildhawk
                                                                                                527 Barnum's Boy Ben..... By Commodore Ah-Look 458 Billy Bangs' Schooldays...By Captain Will Dayton 372 The Brigand Chief 528 The Black Mask; or, The Vow of Silence.....
                                                459 The Mad Doctor.... By Paul Braddon
373 Marco Bravo
                                                                                                                              By T. W. Hanshew
                                                                                                529 Sou'-west Fred......By Kit Clyde
                                                460 Zola, the Old Trapper's Daughter.By R. T. Emmet
374 Zara, the Gipsy
                                                461 The Shortys' Trip Around the World-comic 375 The Servian Spy
                                                                                                530 Bob Rollick, the Yankee Notion Drummer; a
                                                                                   By Peter Pad
376 Sword and Cimeter sequel to "Bob Rollick; or, What Was He 462 Locomotive Bill, the Giant Engineer.....
377 Adam Bell
                                                                                                     Born For?" -- comic...... By Peter Pad
                                                                               By Samuel Keene
378 The Archers of Inglewood 531 The Drummer Boy Spy; or, the Slaughter of 463 Buffalo Bill's Chum..... By Colonel Ralph Fenton
                                                                                                     the Wilderness..... By Ralph Morton
3.9 The Knight of the Red Cross
                                                464 Denver Dan and His Chums ..... By "Noname "
                                                                                                532 The Black Hercules ..... By Colonel J. M. Travers
380 Jack-o'-the-Cudgel
                                                465 The Old Magician....By Corporal Morgan Rattler
381 Croquard, the Free Lance 533 Fireman Dick; or, The Pride of Number 9....
                                                466 The Unknown Scout......By Zeke Baxter
382 The Fair Maid of Kent
                                                                                                                          By James D. Montague
                                                467 The Brother's Crime..... By Percy B. St. John 333 Dick the Brewer
                                                                                                534 The Shortys Out For Fun—comic... By Peter Pad
384 The Oxford and Cambridge Eight 468 Molly Bland, the Detective; or. The Hunt for 535 Red River Bill, the Prince of Scouts. By J. R. Scott
                                                     the Murderers.....By J. T. Brougham 355 The Wild Huntsman
                                                                                                536 Special Express Ned, the Prince of Boy En-385 Tom Mansfield, the Smuggler gineers......By Horace Appleton 470 Tumbling Tim; or, Traveling With a Circus-387 The Sunken Treasure 537 The Shortys' Christmas and New Years at comic......By Peter Pad
388 The Slave's Revenge Home-comic......By Peter Pad
                                                471 Mat of the Mountain; or, The Struggle of Des-389 Cris Carrol, the Scout 538 Owlface, the River Scourge; or, The Guerril-perate Men......By Allyn Draper 390 Phil Rayleigh, a London Arab la's Captive. A Romance of the War in the 472 The Picador of Chapultepec..... By Don Jenardo
391 The Knight of the Iron Hand
                                                                                                     South-West.....by Captain Phil Jordon
                                                473 The Lost Island; or, The Cruise of the "Caro-392 Tom Lester
                                                                                                539 The Spies of the Delaware..... By Kit Clyde line"..... By Colonel J. M. Travers 393 Bicycle Beb
                                                                                                540 Denver Dan, Jr., and His Band of Deadshots...
                                                474 "27;" or, The House of Many Doors.....
394 Mark Darrell
                                                                                                                                  By "Noname"
395 Oscar Merivale: or, the Forger's Victim
                                                                              By Philip Murdock
                                                                                                541 The Steam Man of the Plains; or, The Terror
                                                475 The Maxwell Brothers; or, The Chase of a Sea-396 Tom Oakland son......By Kit Clyde 397 The Mad Alchemist; or, Mysteries Unfolded..
                                                                                                542 On Deck; or, The Boy Pilot of Lake Erie .....
                                                By Dr. H. M. Jordan
                                                                                                                             By Howard De Vere
                                                477 The Mad Hunter; cr, The Mystery of the Bea-398 Worm, the Pittsburg Detective. By An Old Betective 543 From Pole to Pole; or, The Sailor Boy Avenger ver Dam..... By Captain Will Dayton 399 Rob Racket, the Scourge of the Cowboys
                                                                                                                             By Horace Appleton
                                                478 Persimmon Bill; or, the Red Cross of the 400 Gipsy Dick; or. Born a Detective ......
                                                                                                544 Dick Wright and His Band of Cannibals.....
                                                     Cheyenne...... By Don Jenardo
                             By Seth Huntington
                                                                                                                                  By J. R. Scott
                                                479 Young Lynx, the Amateur Detective......
401 The Red River Pilot ...... By Paul Braddon
                                                                                                545 The Boy Captain; or, The Search for a Missing
                                                                              By Philip Murdock
402 Catana, the Robber's Daughter. By Seth Huntingdon
                                                                                                     Will......By Alexander Armstrong
                                                480 Buck Bidwell, the Boy Slayer of the Pawnees.
403 Detective Sketches.... By A New York Detective 546 Pickle and Tickle; or, Mishaps and Mischiefs-404 The Boy Scouts of the Sierras. By Seth Huntingdon
                                                                     By Lieutenant E. H. Kellogg
                                                                                                     comic.....By Peter Pad
                                                481 Toby, the Spy; or, The Russian Conspirators of 405 The Heir of Longworth
                                                                                                547 Fort Hayes; or, Black Eagle, the Avenger.....
                                                     Paris..... By a Parisian Detective
406 A Ghost in the Mirror, and other stories.....
                                                                                                                                By Don Jenardo
                                                482 The Phantom of the Waves.....
                                                                       By Alexander Armstrong 548 Noiseless Nat; or, Always Just Where He's By Allyn Draper
407 Strange Stories of Maniacs.....
                                                                                                     Wanted......By Ja mes D. Montague
                                                483 Denver Dan in New York ..... By "Noname"
                 By Dr. R. Jackson and Orrin Goble
                                                                                                549 The Secrets Under the Sea..... By Kit Clyde 484 Tommy Bounce, Jr.; or, A Chip of the Old 408 The Skeleton's Legacy; or, The Mystery of the 550 Lazy Jake, the Boy Spy of the Rebellion .....
                                                     Block-comic......By Peter Pad Island......By Col. J. L. Trueman
                                                                                                                            By Col. Ralph Fenton
                                                485 Washed Ashore; or, Adventures in a Strange 409 The Pirate's Son......By J. T. Brougham
                                                                                                551 Sam Sharpe at School.... By Captain Will Dayton Land ..... By Harry Rockwood 410 The Young Revenue Detective; or, Among the 552 Privateer Tom-a sequel to "Captain Tom 486 Charlie Chubbs at College. By Captain Will Dayton
     Drake "......By H. C. Emmet
                                                487 The Irish Claude Daval. By Corporal Morgan Rattler
411 Little Hall, the Loy Engineer. By Capt. Will Dayton
                                                                                                553 Frank Reade and His Steam Horse. By "Noname" 488 The Twin Boy Sconts..... By Percy B. St. John 412 Captain Hurricane; or, The Waif of the Wreck
                                                                                                554 Billy the Bootblack; or, The Trump Card Last
                                By Allan Arnold 489 Fair-Weather Jack; or, Life in the Arctic Re-
                                                                                                                            By Harrigan & Hart
                                                     gions......By Albert J. Booth
413 Towpath Ted. A True Story of Life on a 555 The Rival Scouts...... By J. R. Scott
                                                490 Sumter's Aide. By Capt. Geo. Granville (U. S. A.)
     Canal......By J. M. Bradon
                                                                                                556 The Coral Cave; or, Paul Philip's Cruise .....
                                                491 Old Fox; or, The Mystery of the Trunk.....
414 The Ghost of Paul Priestly; or, The Mystery of
                                                                                                                            By Horace Appleton
                                                                          By a Parisian Detective
     Haggard Hollow ..... By James Greenwood
                                                                                                557 The Army Scout; or, The Mysteries of the West 492 The Old Thirteen; or, The Union League of 415 The Cruise of the Beauty. By Captain Will Dayton
                                                                                                                                   By Kit Clyde
                                                     416 Joe Jordan, the Young Inventor
                                                                                                558 Missouri Jack and His Band of "7"......
                                                493 Silvershot, the Sport from Sacramento.....
417 Ebenezer Crow—comic
                                                                                                                           By James D. Montague
                                                                                   By Kit Clyde
418 Charley Charlton, the Young Magician.....
                                                                                                559 Lasso Luke; or, The Three Prairie Pards....
                                                494 The Silent Slayer; or, The Terror of the Chip-
                             By Col. J. M. Travers
                                                                                                                                   By Kit Clyde
                                                     419 Gorilla George; or, A New York Boy in Africa 560 Shady Dell School; or, Haps and Mishaps of 495 The Irish Claude Duval as a Rebel.....
                              By J. L. Freeman
                                                                                                     Schoolboy Life..... By Captain Will Dayton
                                                                      By Corporal Morgan Rattler
420 Stuttering Mose; or, The Old Scout of the Rev-561 The Man of Gold; or, Under the Shadow of 496 Astray in the Clouds..... By a Retired Aeronaut olut'en......By General J. L. Johnston Crime...... By Horace Appleton 497 The Shortys Married and Settled Down-a 421 The Kingdom in the Sea..... By J. G. Bradley
                                                                                                562 The Mad Man of the North Pole; or, The Boy 122 Lighthouse Lem; or, The Mystery of Dead-sequel to all the Shorty stories—comic....
                                                                                                     Mazeppa of the Arctic Seas..... By Kit Clyde
                                                                                   By Peter Pad
     man's Reef......By an Old Sea Captain 563 Extree Nick, the New York Newsbey.....
                                                498 The Tree of Death......By an Old Trapper
423 The Search for the "Midas"; or, Treasures
                                                                                                                        By Commodore Ah-Look
     From the Deep...... By Gerald Fleming 499 The Twin Detectives; or, True to Each Other.
                                                                                 By Ralph Royal | 564 Oath-bound; or, The Jack of Spades. By J. R. Scott
```

500 William Tell, the Dead Shot of the West.....

By Harry Enton

565 Custer's Last Shot; or, The Boy Trailer of the Little Horn......By Colonel J. M. Travers

424 The Young Explorers..... By Capt. Will Dayton

By Major J. Anderson

425 Little Nugget, the Pride of Leadville......

THE FIVE CENT WIDE AWAKE LIBYARY---Continued 566 Gassy Hyde; or, The Fire-Boy Fiend of Phila-706 The Wolf-Fighters; or, The Adventures of Two 635 Sassy Sam Sumner—a sequel to Sassy Sam delphia..... By Corporal Morgan Rattler New York Boys in Minnesota..... comic......By Commodore Ah-Look 567 Fred Hazard, the Star of the Circus..... 636 The House of Horrors.... By James D. Montague by Howard De Vers 707 Railroad Larry; or, Aiways in on Time 637 The Men of the Northwest. By Alexander Armstrong By Horace Appleton 638 The Captain's Secret; or, The Wreck of the 568 Coonskin Kit, the Dashing Government Scout by Aibert J. Booth 708 Bound Together; or, The Young Fire Laddies By Kit Clyde 569 Denver Dan, Jr., and the Renegade. By "Noname" of Springdaleby Robert Lennox 709 Two Weeks on a Wreck; or, Abandoned in 640 Garry Galore; or, The Adventures of a Wild 570 Billy Badger; or, The Mysterious Unknown of Irish Boy at Home and Abroad..... the Bank Robbers' Band. By James D. Montague Mid Ocean.....by Hal Standish 571 The Brand of the Desert..... By Walter Fenton By Corporal Morgan Rattler 710 The Jolly Travelers; or, Around the World for 641 Cast Up by the Waves......By Alex. Armstrong 572 Mail-Car Ned; or, Falsely Accused..... Fun-comic.....by Peter Pad By Alexander Armstrong 642 The Shortys Farming—comic. By Peter Pad 711 The Haunted Pioneer; or, Fighting for Texas 573 The Maniac Pirate...... By Horace Appleton by "Noname" 643 Under the Ground; or, The Wild Man of the 712 Leaves From a Diary; or, A Young Clerk's 574 Smokestack Bob, the Hero of the Rail. By J. R. Scott Cavern. The Strangest Story Ever Told. 575 Nimble Nip; or, The Imp of the School-comic By Harry Rockwood Downfall.....by H. K. Shackleford 713 Boone and the Renegade; or, Life in Kentucky.....by Kit Clyde 644 Yankee Pete, the Man of Grit..... By Tom Teaser 576 King Morgan, the Terror of the Seas..... By James D. Montague 645 Hotspur Harry; or, The Texan Trailers 714 Before the Mast; or, A Sailor Boy's Travels in By Alexander Armstrong By Alex. Armstrong 577 The Convict's Oath; or, The Prisoner of Van Many Seas.....by Jas. D. Montague 646 Buckskin Burke; or, The Cache of Gold...... Dieman's Land By James D. Montague 715 Monaco, the Jaguar Hunter....by Hal Standish By Kit Clyde 578 The Serpent Queen; or, The Mysterious Night-716 From Page to Senator; or, Working his Way Riders of Georgia......By Kit Clyde 647 Guerrillas and Regulars; or, The Cost of Inde-Up.....by H. K. Shackleford 717 Judge Cleary's Country Court—comic...... 579 The Fortune Hunters; or, Two Yankee Boys in pendence.....by Col. Ralph Fenton 648 The Mystery of Dead Man's Castle..... by Tom Teaser 718 Old Rough and Ready; or, The Heroine of By James D. Montague The Bootblack's Plot; or, The Mystery of a Night......By J. R. Scott 649 Mad Pete; or, a Fearful Retribution. By Leon Leroy Monterey.....by "Noname" 719 Fire Bell Dick; or, The Rival Hook and Ladders 650 Off on a Man-of-War..... By Major Walter Wilmot Huron Harry: or, The Haunted Skin 651 Frank Reade, Jr., in the Clouds.... By " Noname" by Robert Lennoz 83 Doomed; or, The Secret Le of Boston.... 654 The Boy Pedestrians; or, From California to 720 Kidnapped; or, Forced on a Man o' War.... Maine..... by Jas. D. Montague by J. G. Bradley By James D. Montague 653 Trapper Against Renegade; or, Life on the 721 Jack o' the Plains; or, The Headless Mazeppa 584 The Maniae Rider; or, The Mystery of Hawkes-Plains.....by Kit Clyde by Paul Braddon 722 The Prisoners of the Castle; or, A Blow for Freedom by Jas. D. Montague Race.....by Kit Clyde 655 Tom Basswood, the Swamp Hero. By Capt. E. Park 723 Muldoon, the Sport-comic by Tom Teaser Matt Merry; or, The Life of the School. 724 A Newsboy's Trip Around the World..... By Captain Will Dayton by H. K. Shackleford 658 Tales of the War......By J. D. Ballard 587 The Phantom Avenger; or, Dick Darling in .. 725 In Dixie; or, A War Correspondent's Thrilling Montana..... By Alexander Armstrong 659 Wrecked on the Coast of Florida. By Zach Brewste Adventures by Col. Ralph Fenton 660 The Boy Mechanic By Jas. D. Montague $88 Hugo, the Texan; or, The Demons of the Alamo 726 The Skeleton Sentinel....by Lieut. E. H. Kellogg 661 Among the Danites; or, The Price of a Life.... By J. R. Scott 727 Muldoon's Vacation-comic by Tom Teaser 589 Lost on the Desert; or, the Guide's Treachery By Rit Clyde | 728 The Valleydale Social Club; or Ruined by Wine By James D. Montague 662 New York Noll, the Harbor Police Boy. by H. K. Shackleford 590 The Avengers' League By "Noname" By Horace Appleton 729 Davy Crockett's Vow; or, His Last Shot for 663 Young Marion, the Patriot Spy of the Revolu-591 The "Sea Wave's" Last Cruise; or, The Pi-Vengeance.....by Kit Clyde tion..... By Ralph Morton rates' Cave......By Kit Clyde 730 Keeping His Word; or, "Lucky" Landy's 664 Young America in Egypt; or, The Drummer 592 Cromwell's Boy Spy; or, The Roundheads and Pluck......by Jas. D. Montague Boy's Bravery By Alexander Armstrong the Cavaliers..... By Horace Appleton 731 Young Tom Drake; or, Bound to be a Captain 593 The Pirate Hermit; or, The Waif's Legacy..... 665 The Shortys' Country Store-comic ... By Peter Pad By the Author of "Privateer Tom," etc., etc. 666 Gunboat Harry; or, The Navy's Best Man..... 732 The Mystic Maiden; or, Through Deadly Dan-By Alexander Armstrong 594 Dick the Shadow; or, The Mysterious Trails of By Col. Ralph Fenton gers..... By Corp. Morgan Rattler 667 Frank Reade, Jr.'s Great Electric Tricycle, and the Backwood.....By J. R. Scott 733 The Exiled Prince; or, Two Boy Explorers in What He Did for Charity By "Noname ' 695 Fighting the Redskins; or, Eeaver Bill's Last Alaska.....by J. G. Bradley 668 Dick Wheel, the Young Roller Skater 734 Pilot Boat No. 7 and Its American Boy Captain Trail..... By James D. Montague 596 The Black Domino; or, The Jailer of the Tow-By Percy B. St. John by Kit Clyde 669 The Ghostly Bell Ringer..... By Horace AppletonBy Kit Clyde 735 In the Wild West; or, On The Plains With 197 Frank Reade and His Steam Team. By "Noname" 670 Man-of-War Dick; or, Fighting for the Stars Buffalo Bill.....by Robert Maynard 1998 Cheeky and Chipper; or, Through Thick and and Bars by Ralph Morton 736 A Sailor Boy's Kingdom; or, Young America Thin-comic..... By Commodore Ah-Look 671 The Shark Fighters; or, At War with the De-In the South Sea Islands..by H. K. Shackleford 599 Dead Man's Pond; or, The Black Demon of the mon Fish By Harry Rockwood 737 The Forest Mystery.....by Jas. D. Montague 672 Sam, Saddle the Wild Horse Tamer...... 738 Beaver Ben; or, Three Voyagers in the Yellow-600 The Tiger of the Seas; or, Forced to be a Pirate By Morris Redwing stone.....by Kit Clyde 673 The Young Arctic Explorers; or, In Search of By Alexander Armstrong 739 A Waif from the Sea; or, Flung from the Foam 501 Harry O'Malley, the Young Irish Invincible ... by Thomas P. Murray the North Pole By Harry Rockwood By Sergeant O'Donnell 674 Old One Eye, the Trapper Guide of the North-740 The Book Agent's Luck-comic.....by "Ed" 60. Arkansaw Bill, the Indian Spy..... By J. R. Scott 741 Dandy Rock, the Man from Texas..... west......By "Noname" 675 A Yankee Boy in Mexico......Bv Don Jenardo 603 The King of the Deep......By Kit Clyde by D. W. Stevens 604 Little Death Shot; or, The Gold-hunter's Ghost 676 Cast Up or, Adventures on the Briny Deep. 742 Near the Gallows; or, A Young Man's Peril By James D. Montague By J. T. Brougham by R. T. Emmet 605 The Magic Mirror......By Don Jenardo 677 Steam-boat Steve. the Boy Pilot of the Missis-743 Dick Daunt the Diver; or, Down Among the 606 Old Rube, the Ranger..... By J. R. Scott Sponge-Cutters.....by J. G. Bradley 807 Frank Reade and His Steam Tally-Ho..... 678 The Yankee Boy Whaler By Albert J. Booth 744 Across the Continent on Wings; or, Frank 679 Little Mike Malloy, the Pride of the Irish Coast. Reade, Jr.'s Greatest Flight by "Noname" By "Noname" 808 Out with Barnum...By Lieutenant E. H. Kellogg By Corp. Morgan Rattler 745 Lost In an Unknown Sea; or, Adventures Un-609 Storm King Dick; or, The Boy Adventurers ... 680 Dick Twilight's School Days..... der the Earth.....by Jas. D. Montague By Captain Will Dayton By Captain Will Dayton 746 The Shorty Kids; or, Three Chips of Three Old 610 Frank Durham, the King of the Cowboys 681 Dick, the Engineer By Albert J. Booth Blocks-comic.....by Peter Pad 682 The Spy of the Northwest..... By Jas. D. Montague 747 Dick Walton Among the Cannibals..... By Kit Clyde 611 Hildebrandt Fitzgum; or, My Quiet Little Cou-683 The Pacific Specter By Alexander Armstrong by W. I. James, Jr. 748 The Six Swordsmen; or, The Boy Cavalier 684 The Lost Whaler; or, Adventures of the North-612 Si Swift, the Prince of Trappers... by Richard R. Montgomery By James D. Montague 685 Panama Pete; or, The Outlaws of the Isthmus 749 The Mutineers; or, Dick Walton in the South 613 The Hyena Hunters; or, In the Wilds of Africa By Hal Standish Seas.....by W. I. James, Jr. By Harry Rockwood 686 Sightless Saul, the Mysterious Man of Montana 750 Frank Reade, Jr., Exploring Mexico in His 614 The Phantom Pirate; or, The Fatal Oath..... By " Noname" New Air-Shim by " Noname " By Alexander Armstrong 687 Joseph Jump and His Old Blind Nag-comic 751 The Fighting Twins; or, The Cavaliers of Mys-615 The Young Fenian Chief By Peter Pad tery.....by Richard R. Montgomery 616 Among the Crocodiles; or, Adventures in India 688 A Struggle for Fame; or, Fighting Against 752 Five Dollars; or, A Cheap Revenge..... Fate......By H. K. Shackleford By Harry Rockwood by Percy B. St. John Lance-and Lasso; or, The Young Mustangers 753 Mike McGuinness; or, Traveling for Pleas-689 Jack Hawser's Tavern—comic..... By Peter Pad he Plains...... By Marline Manly 690 Black Diamond Bill; or, The Hero of the Coal ure-comic..... by Tom Teaser 613 The Chief of the Delawares By Kit Clyde 754 Old Grudge, the Scout; or, The Castle on the Mines..... By Ralph Royal 519 The Shortys Out Fishing-comic By Peter Pad Lake.....by "Noname > 691 A Boy With Grit, and How He Made His For-626 Coal Mine Tom; or, Fighting the Molly Matune..... By Captain Will Dayton 755 Young Sam Patch, the Champion Boy Jumper guires.....By Sergeant O'Donnell 692 Jack Stowaway; or, Bound to be a Tar..... by H. K. Shackleford The Captain of the Nine; or, Always a Leader ... 756 Little Jack and His Twenty Boy Firemen..... By Howard De Vere By Harry Rockwood by Robert Lennox 693 The Sunken City. A Tale of Mexico..... Sassy Sam; or, A Bootblack's Voyage Around 757 Dick Spray; or, A Stowaway's Trip to China... By H. K. Shackleford the World-comic By Commodore Ah-Look 694 Royal Dick; or, Standing by His Chums..... by J. G. Bradley Young Putnam; or, Always to the Front..... 758 Barnum's Hunters; or, Trapping WildAni-By Hal Standish By Harrigan & Hart 695 Wing and Wing; or, The Young Captain of mals for the Greatest Show on Earth..... Nugget Ned; or, The Mountain Queen's Venge-By Richard R. Montgomery the Flyaway......By Kit Clyde ance...... By Morris Redwing 759 The Seven Masks; or, The Quaker City League 696 Dick Davit, the American Boy Middy. . By C. Little rank Reade, Jr., and His Steam Wonder.... By Percy B. St. John 697 Frank Reade, Jr., With His Air-Ship in Africa By "Noname" 760 Muldoon's Night School-comic...by Tom Teaser By "Noname" 698 Trusty Joe, the Brave Old Scout... By "Noname" 761 The Unlucky Miner; or, The Rivals for Dead Man's Claim by Paul Braddon 699 Found at Sea; or, The Secret of a Boy's Life. 627 Frank Reade, Jr., and His Electric Boat..... 762 Cal, the Cowboy; or, The Young King of Las-By Hal Standish By " Noname" soers.....by D. W. Stevens 700 Little Ned, the Leader of the School..... 628 Ghouls of Gilt Edge By Harry Rockwood 763 His First Drink; or A Country Boy's Life in By Captain Will Dayton 629 Frank Reade, Jr., and His Adventures With Ne w York.....by H. K. Shackleford 701 Will o' the Wisp; or, The Wild Man of the His Latest Invention By "Noname" 764 The Czar's Boy Mail-Carrier; or, Young Amer-Coast.....by Kit Clyde 630 The Shortys Out Gunning-comic By Peter Pad ica in Russiaby C. Little 702 Acrobat Ned, the Prince of the Air....by C. Little 631 Frank Reac , Jr., and h , Air Ship. By "Noname" 765 Trappers and Trailers; or, Battles With the 703 Jack, the Wrecker's Son; or, Adventures on 632 The Young Boy Chief; or, Adventures in the the Coast.....by J. T. Brougham Red Men.....by "Noname" Far West......By Captain Will Dayton 704 The Fire Bugs of Chicago ... by Jas. D. Montague 766 On the Queen's Service.....by J. G. Bradley 633 Frank Reade, Jr.'s Marvei..... By "Noname" 705 Lighthouse No. 6; or, The Ghost of the Sea.... 767 Tick Tack, the Messenger Boy; or, Sharp 684 The Lighthouse on the Rock...... By Kit Clyde Work for a Million.....by Robert Lennox by Allyn Draper

LATEST ISSUES OF

The Great 5 Gent Wide Awake Library

768 Sam Spry, the New York Drummer; or, Busi-875 General Washington's Boy; or, The Youngest 821 Up and Down; or, The Life of an Elevator Boy ness Before Pleasure-comic by Peter Pad-Soldier in the Revolution by Ralph Morton by Percy B. St. John 822 Dick the Middy; or, A Boy's Life on a Man-o'-War.....by J. G. Bradley 376 Pawnee Bill and the Oklahoma Boomers.... 769 A Lost Boy; or Homely Jack's Luck 770 The Black Rider. A Story of the Revolution. by R. T. Emmet by Geo. W. Goode 877 Frank Reade, Jr.'s Search for a Sunken Ship; 823 Footlight Fred the Boy Actor; or, Bound to be a Star.....by N. S. Wood or, Working for the Government.by "Noname" 824 A Rolling Stone; or, Jack Ready's Life of Fun 878 Young Captain Tom Drake; on In Search of the Pirate's Home.... -- comic.....by Peter Pad 825 The Secret of the Tattooed Map.. by R. T. Emmet 772 The Young Moonlighter; or, An American Boy by the Author of "Captain Tom Drake," etc. in Ireland by J. T. Brougham 826 Custer's Little Dead Shot; or, The Boy Scont 173 Dashing Del, the Knight of the Knife; or, The 880 The Young Railroad King, or, From Brakeof the Little Big Horn.....by" Noname" 827 A Queer Race. The Story of a Strange People Maniac Father.....by Paul Braddon man to President by Col. Raiph Fenton 774 Little Matt, the Pilot; or, The Perils of the Lake.....by C. Little 881 Joe Junk, the Whaler; or, Anywhere for Fun by William Westall 828 Kit Carson's Boy Trapper.....by Paul Braddon -comicby Peter Pad 775 The Irish Boy Monte Cristo...... 829 Slippery Ben, the Boy Spy of the Revolution .. 882 Lost on the Atlantic by Howard De Vere 830 Paddy Miles' Luck; or, The Irish Boy Miner ... by Corp. Morgan Rattler 883 Monitor Matt; or, The Glant of the Waves. A by Corp. Morgan Rattler Story of the Great Rebellion ... by Ralph Mort 776 A Cruise Among Pirates; or, The Blue-beards 831 The Boy Fish; or, Little Dick the Diver 884 The Boy Rovers; or, The Adventures of Two of the Sea.....by Kit Clyde by R. T. Emmet Plucky Boys.....by C. Littl 777 The Little Joker—comic.....by Sam Smiley 832 Ben the Bowsman; or, Adventures in the Mon-885 His Own Boss, von The Boy Captain of Cat-778 The Two Runaways; or, The Hardships of a tezuma Swamp.....by C. Little head Lake by Percy B. St. John Circus Life.....by Hal Standish 833 The Mastodon's Cave; or, Two Wide Awake 886 Braving the Flood; or, The Pincky Fight of 779 The School-boys' League; or, Working His Boys in the Far West..... by Percy B. St. John Two Johnstown Boyn by R. 1. Emmet Way Against Odds.....by Robert Lennox 834 The Boy Stage Driver; or, The Hero of Rocky 887 Muldoon the Solid Man-comic...by Tom Teaser 780 Lucky Lal, the Newsboy; or, Climbing the Pass.....by Paul Braddon 888 The Boy Star; or, From the Footlights to For-Ladder of Fame.....by C. Little 835 From Newsboy Up; or, A New York Boy in 989 The Young Commander: or, A New York Bo 781 Lost in the Land of Snow; or, Two American Business..... Boys in the Arctic..... by R. T. Emmet by N. S. Wood (The Young American Actor) in the Southern War by Kalph Morton 7º2 Coal Mine Kit; or, The Mule Boy of Diamond 836 Alone in the Wild West; or, A New York Boy's 890 Two in a Box; or, The Long and Short of Shaft.....by Percy B. St. John Search for Buffalo Bill.....by R. T. Emmet it-comic by Tom Tesser 7 783 The Band of 12; or, The Knights of the Trail ... 891 The Soldier's Son; or, The Secret of the House 837 The Secret of the Sealed Gold Mines.by" Noname by Paul Braddon 838 Little Blondin, the Tight-Rope Walker. by C. Little of Eight Pines. A Story of New York... 784 Muldoon the Fireman-comic by Tom Teaser 839 From New York to San Francisco in a Catamaby C. Little 785 Diving for Gold.....by Kit Clyde 892 Satin Sam the Young Western Sport..... ran.....by John Sherman 786 The 12 Owls; or, The Secret Band of Chicago 840 A Young Jay Gould; or, A Boy Among the by Paul Braddon by Paul Braddon 893 The Funny Four-comic.....by Peter Pad Money Kings.....by H. K. Shackleford 787 The Fire King; or, The Yankee Boy Explorer 841 Only an Errand Boy; or, Getting Up in the 894 The White Queen of the Aztecs; or, Two Yauby R. T. Emmet World.....by R. T. Emmet kee Boys in Mexico.....by R. T. Emmet 788 The Boy Bank Messenger; or, Brave Bob Brad-842 Jack Ready's School Scrapes-comic.by Peter Pad 895 The Deacon's Son; or, The Imp of the Village shaw's Secret Foe.....by C. Little 843gThe Ice-Boat Boys; or, Cruising on Frozen -comic.....by Tom Teaser 789 His Last Cent; or, How Joe Dutton Made His Waters in the Northwest.....by C. Little | 896 The Boy Slave of the Galley; or, The Mystery. Fortune......by H. K. Shackleford 844 Little Blind Joe; or, The Sharks of New York. of the Treasure Ship by Percy B. St. John 790 Born to be a Sailor; or, Bob Dare's Life on by N. S. Wood (The Young American Actor) 897 A Bad Egg; or, Hard to Crack-comic the Water by Kit Clyde 845 Young Ironclad, the Boy Gunner.by John Sherman by Tom Teaser 791 The Electric Man; or, Frank Reade, Jr., in 898 Two Years With a Pirate; or, The Phantom 846 The Boy Gold Hunters; or, Young New York Australia.....by "Noname" Ship of the Gold Coast......by J. G. Bradle in California......by R. T. Emmet 792 Satan; or, The Mystery of Ten Years..... 899 Muldoon's Boarding House-comic.by Tom Teaser 847 The Shortys in the Wild West-comic.by Peter Pad by Howard De Vere 900 The Boy Diamond King; or, The Young 848 Billy the Bugler. A Story of Governor's Island 793 Those Quiet Twins-comic.....by Peter Pad Monte Christo of New York by C. Little and New York.....by C. Little 794 The Czar's Messenger; or, The Burning of 901 Ikey; or, He Never Get Left-comic. by Tom Teaser 849 Frank Reade, Jr.'s Chase Through the Clouds. Moscowby R. T. Emmet 902 The Armorer's Son; or, The Mystery of the by "Noname" 795 A Soldier at 16; or, Fighting for the Union ... 850 A Lucky Boy; or, The Mystery of an Iron Tower of London by Allyn Draper by C. Little Chest..... By R. T. Emmet 903 Jimmy Grimes; or Sharp, Smart & Sassy-796 Teddy of the Toll Gate; or, The Man With the 851 My Friend Smith.....by Talbot Baines Reed comic.....by Tom Teaser Green Shades By Corp. Morgan Rattler 904 Dick Getaway; or, Fighting for a Fortune.... 852 The Boy Crusoes; or, The Young Castaways 797 The Mayflower Boys; or, Life in a Yankee of the Pacific..... by St. George Rathborne by Corporal Morgan Rattier School by Percy B. St. John 905 Tom Quick, the Avenger of the Delaware.... 853 Jerry the Tumbler; or, The Wonder of the 798 The Young Snow Trailers; or, Big Track, the Ring..... by Corporal Morgan Rattler by R. T. Emmer Giant Moose Hunter.....by Paul Braddon 854 Ned, the Bound Boy; or, Through 100 Miles of 906 Sam Switch the Boy Engineer; or, Beginning at 799 Denny the Clown. A Story of Circus Life in the Bottom..... by Albert J. Booth Foes.....by C. Little Ireland by Corporal Morgan Rattler 855 Frank Reade, Jr., and His Electric Team.... 907 Daring Dave the Diver; or, The Prince of 800 On the Rail; or, Perils in the Life of a Young Swimmers.....by C. Little by "Noname" Engineer by Albert J. Booth | 856 The Shortys' Christmas Snaps-comic 908 Sam; or, The Troublesome Foundling-comic. 801 3,000 Miles on a Bicycle; or, A Race Across the by Peter Pad by Peter Pag Continent.....by C. Little 857 Two Waifs; cr. Affoat in New York..... 909 Velvet Van; or, Deadly Grip and His Demon 802 Fearless Phil; or, The Hero of Rugged Rift.... by N. S. Wood (The Young American Actor) Band.....by Paul Braddon by Paul Braddon 858 Fearless Phil in Disguise; or, The Tiger's Last 910 A Smart New York Boy; or, From Poverty to 803 The Shortys' Christmas Rackets-comic..... Plot.....by Paul Braddon Wealth.....by John Sherman by Peter Pad 859 A Southern Boy in New York; or, Bound to 911 Foretop Tom; or, A Yankee Sailor Boy 804 Claim 4; or, The Hunchback of Placer Pocket Among the Malay Pirates.....by J. G. Bradley Make His Money by H. K. Shackleford by "Noname" 860 Steamboat Billy; or, The State-Room Secret ... 912 Bulger Boom, the Inventor-comic..by Peter Pad 805 The Miser's Son; or, In Search of Hidden 861 The Boy Lion Tamers; or, Adventures in Africa 913 Out in the Streets. A Story of High and Low Gold by H. K. Shackleford 862 Out With Kit Carson. A Story of the Early Life in New York..... 806 The Waifs of New York..... Days of Kansas.....by R. T. Emmet by N. S. Wood (The Young American Actor). by N. S. Wood (The Young American Actor). 863 The Boy Samson; or, Taking Care of Himself. 914 The Swamp Demon; or, Lost For Two Years 807 Brian the Bear; or, The Pranks of a Wild Irish by R. T. Emmet by C. Little Boy by Corporal Morgan Rattler 864 The Boy From New York; or, A Fight for Five 915 Denver Dan, Jr., the Stage Driver; or, The 808 The Haunted Bell Tower; or, The Hidden Mys-Millions..... by Percy B. St. John Mystery of Golden Gulch..... by "Noname" tery.....by Percy B. St. John 865 Smart & Co. the Boy Peddlers-comic...... 916 Muldoon's Brother Dan-comic...by Tom 809 Two Years on an Island of Ice..by Albert J. Booth 917 Buffalo Bill's Boy Broncho Breaker or, The by Peter Pad 810 A Bootbiack's Luck.....by C. Little 866 A Chicago Boy; or, Up From the Lowest..... Youngest Hero on the Plains. by Paul 811 Around the World in a Balloon; or, Thousands By John Sherman 918 A Sailor at Fifteen; or, From Cabin B of Miles Through the Air by R. T. Emmet 367 An Old Boy; or, Maloney After Education-Captain.....by J. G. 812 The Fur Hunters of Winnipeg...by Paul Bradden comic.....by Tom Teaser 919 Henpecked-comic.....by Peter ad 813 Six Weeks Under Ground by Kit Clyde 868 The Boy Telegraph Operator; or, The Mystery 920 Homeless Hal; or, A Poor Boy's Life in a 814 The President's Boy; or, The Hero of the White of a Midnight Message...by Col. Ralph Fenton Great Cityby Captain Will Dayt House.....by H. K. Shackleford 869 Dick Boldhero; or, The Strange Adventures of 921 Wild Bill's Boy Partner; or, The Redskins' 815 The Electric Horse; or, Frank Reade, Jr., and a Young Yankee Sailor Written by Himself Gold Secret.....by Paul Brad His Father in Search of the Lost Treasure of 870 Garry the Greenhorn; or, From Stowaway to 922 Mulddon's Christmas-comic by Tom Te the Peruvians..... Noname" Senator.....by Corporal Morgan Rattler 923 Captain Jack, the Pirate's Foe; or. The Devil-816 Lion Luke, the Boy Animal Tamer..... fish of the Indies.....by Roger Starb 871 From Errand Boy to Lawyer; or, Bound to be by Percy B. St. John 924 A Bad Boy at School-comic.....by "F at the Top.....by R. T. Emmet 872 Bob Allen's Ranch; or, A Cattle King at 17... 925 Mr. McGinty-comic.....by Tom Te 817 Carillo, the Corsair; or, The Mysterious Mon-926 Lineman Joe, the Boy Telegraph Climber ... arch of the Mediterranean.....by J. G. Bradley by C. Little 873 Behind the Scenes; or, Out with a New York 818 Fearless Phil's Chase.....by Paul Braddon 927 Shipped to China; or, The Life of a Runaw 819 The Ghost of the School-House by C. Little Combination—comic.....by Peter Pad Boy.....by J. G. L., lev 874 A Boy Among the White Caps; or, A Victim 820 The Young Avenger; or, The Knight of the Silk of the Lash.....by Paul Braddon Mask.....by "Noname"

For sale by all newsdealers in the United States or Canada, or sent to your address, post-paid, on receipt of price, 5 cents per copy. Address

FRANK TOUSEY, Publisher,

34 & 36 North Moore Street, New York.